Senate Hears 8 Named As Lynchers; Maryland Powerless to Prosecute

Attorney Lane Asserts Men Were "Positively Identified."

Police Affidavits Recited on Stand

Testifies Prisoners Were Released Without Any Hearing.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Naming, for the first time, eight alleged participants in the Princess Anne lynching, W. Preston Lane, Maryland attorney general, yesterday admitted to a Senate Judiciary sub-committee that the State authorities were powerless to prosecute lynchers.

Lane told the committee, which is considering a Federal antilynching bill, that the eight men had been "positively identified" by various State police officers as being in the mob which, last October, dragged George Armwood, colored, from the Somerset County Jail, and lynched him.

The attorney general explained he laid evidence against the eight alleged participants before the county prosecutor, John S. Robbins, who failed to act. When State troops arrested four men and charged them with the lynching, he continued, the prisoners were released without hearings on writs of habeas corpus. He said there was nothing more he nor Gov. Ritchie could do.

Senator Van Nuys, chairman of the committee, said the committee would later discuss the feasibility of summoning as witnesses the eight men accused of participating in the lynching and the county officers named by Lane as refusing to act on the evidence he gathered.

Favors U. S. Legislation.

Lane declined to express an opinion on either the policy of Federal antilynching legislation or its Constitutionality, pleading he had not studied the pending Wagner-Costigan bill. But he said he favored any legislation which deterred lynchings or punished those responsible for them.

Simon E. Sobeloff, retiring United States Attorney for Maryland, said that under existing laws there was no justification for action against lynchers in the Federal courts. He favored the bill and thought that arguments against its Constitutionality could be surmounted.

Both witnesses agreed that in Maryland the prosecution of alleged lynchers was a matter exclusively for the county authorities, and that the latter were controlled by public sentiment, which, in many section due to prejudices, opposed efforts to prosecute lynchers.

Lane was praised by Senator Van Nuys as a public official "ready to do your duty regardless of public opinion." Senator Van Nuys said if lynching is in the ascendency, he thought public opinion responsible.

A number of other witnesses appeared to urge adoption of the Wag-

Hitler Backs Eden on Arms

Berlin and London to Stand Together as Result of Long Conference.

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler will join forces with Great Britain in a supreme effort to start a new movement for disarmament, it was reported here tonight.

The chancellor, according to well-informed persons, today approved an English memorandum "in principle" following a long and cordial conversation he had with Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, at the British Embassy.

It was understood Herr Hitler decided to bury whatever doubts he is reported to have had about the proposed British plan in order to strengthen Capt. Eden's hand in the latter's negotiations with Premier Mussolini.

Observers wondered tonight whether Mussolini will join in a possible front, with London and Berlin against Paris on arms.

Conversations between the chancellor and Capt. Eden will continue tomorrow, and it is understood that they will touch on the English proposal of postponing any air action for two years.

KAY FRANCIS.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21 (AP).—The wreck of the third marriage of brown-eyed Kay Francis of the screen was a short scene today.

Just three minutes was the court sequence, "a third of a reel," in the language of the movie lots.

The leading man, Kenneth McKenna, actor and director, was not in court.

The actress took the stand and her attorney waved a document, her complaint for divorce. In this she charged that her actor-director-husband was critical of her work in the films. It set forth that he objected to her manner of dressing, while she has been acclaimed as one of the best dressed women in Hollywood. It also charged he objected to her ideas, her conduct in the home, and criticized her choice of furniture.

The star who played in "Man Wanted" is 30 years old. Her first wedding was with William Gaston, and her second to J. Dwight Francis.

Lawyer Offers Story in Army Contract Quiz

By Felix Bruner.

As the District grand jury yesterday probed deeper into circumstances surrounding War Department contracts, announcement was made at the office of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett that another lawyer had volunteered to appear to tell of his own connection with efforts to sell automobiles to the Government.

The new witness will be Robert W. Lyons, a native of Indiana and a New York lawyer. Lyons has an office, which he is said to visit only occasionally, in the Shoreham Building. He will appear probably next Tuesday, waiving immunity from prosecution, as have other witnesses.

Lyons is expected to tell of a contract he made some time ago with the Fargo Motor Corporation, of Chicago, dealers in Dodge trucks.

A. C. Downey, vice president of the Fargo Corporation, already has appeared before the grand jury and is said to have given the jury a copy of the contract. Lyons is at-

One Seized In Publisher Kidnap Trap

E. P. Adler, of Davenport, Beats Off Pair in Hotel Corridor.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—A plot to kidnap E. P. Adler, 61, newspaper publisher, of Davenport, Iowa, and haul him away in a huge trunk was foiled today when Adler broke loose from two assistants in a Morrison hotel corridor.

Ten minutes later, while Adler and detectives examined the roomful of kidnapers paraphernalia—gags, gun, sponges and trunk—one of the suspects slunk back to the scene and was captured.

The 5-foot sample case found in the room adjoining Adler's had been perforated to provide air.

The two men, taking room 538 by special request, said they were book salesmen.

His head aching from severe blows from blackjacks, Adler confronted the prisoner in the State's attorney's office and identified him as one of his attackers. The man gave his name as Charles Clyde Phillips and Fred Mayo and fictitious addresses in New York and Cleveland. His confederate escaped.

The story pieced together indicated the pair had followed Adler across four States before pouncing on their quarry outside his room.

Adler is publisher of the Davenport Times, president of the Davenport Savings Bank & Trust Co. and head of the Lee syndicate of Middle Western newspapers.

Adler's hurts were minor. A cut over one ear required several stitches.

Doctors Attend Widowed Queen; Thousands Pass Albert's Bier

The Queen fought to retain her composure. Court physicians said her illness was not critical, but serious enough to prevent her attending ceremonies Friday when her son, the Crown Prince, becomes King Leopold III.

Brussels, Feb. 21 (AP).—Thousands of weeping Belgians waited in a mile-long line again tonight for a last glimpse of their revered King Albert as preparations for his funeral tomorrow were completed.

Among peasants, diplomats and others thronging the Palace to pay their final respects was a group of war-blinded veterans, who wanted to "see" the dead Monarch.

They were guided to the flag-draped bier and stood with bowed heads, some overcome with grief.

The palace gates have been open since early yesterday. By dawn 200,000 had moved past the body.

Barriers were being placed, meanwhile, along the route of the funeral procession from the palace to the St. Gudule Cathedral and the royal crypt at Laeken.

Police, gendarmes and troops were

Army Plane Probe Hints At Collusion

House Committee Sifts "Open Bidding" for $7,000,000 Job.

Charge He Owned Stock in Company Draws Adams' Denial.

Possibility of collusion between some airplane companies and Army officials in connection with the recent "open bidding" on contracts for $7,500,000 worth of aircraft has been suggested by testimony at secret hearings of the House Military Affairs Sub-committee on Aviation, Chairman Rogers (Democrat), of New Hampshire, said last night.

The committee, having asked that the awards be held up, will press its inquiry "to determine whether the suggestion stands up, or is knocked out," he sad.

Representative McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the full House committee, also expressed the belief last night that the investigators are "on the trail" of an irregularity.

From another committee, the House Naval Affairs Sub-committee on Aviation, it was learned yesterday that Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy from 1929 to 1933, will be called upon next week to explain his reported ownership of 500 shares of stock in the Douglas Aircraft Co., of Santa Monica, Calif.

Company Head Reveals Stock.

Adams' alleged ownership of the stock in 1933 was revealed yesterday by J. H. Kindelberger, vice president of the Douglas company, who appeared before the committee. He was unable to state when the former Secretary of the Navy acquired the shares and Chairman Delaney (Democrat), of New York, said Adams himself would be asked this question next week.

The Military Affairs sub-committee yesterday questioned Capt. Wilmot W. B. Persons, assistant to the director of current procurement at the War Department, about procedure surrounding the specifications and advertisement for bids on the new airplanes to be bought for the Army with $7,500,000 of CWA funds.

Capt. Persons was representing Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, who had been called upon by the committee for data on the contracts and photostatic copies of the various bids submitted.

Data Sought in Ohio.

It developed that Capt. Persons could not supply all the information the committee required, and Woodring was requested to send to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, for additional data, particularly relating to Army Air Corps specifications.

Chairman Rogers said he wished it made clear that the Assistant Secretary of War had shown every desire to cooperate with the investigators.

The committee, which may shortly be empowered by the House to widen the scope of its inquiry to include "irregularities and profiteering" in connection with Army expenditures, favors the procedure of competitive bidding instituted by Woodring, but apparently, from last night's brief hints, has found that all was not as competitive as was desirable from the viewpoint of economy and National defense.

Comptroller General McCarl has been asked by members of the committee to suggest changes in the Act

Early Cannon Trial Refused

Bishop Fears April 9 Date May Embarrass M. E. Meeting April 26.

Justice Payton Gordon in District Supreme Court yesterday ruled Bishop James Cannon, jr., would go on trial on or after April 9 on a charge of conspiracy to violate the corrupt practices act.

Bishop Cannon filed a motion last week requesting the trial be expedited on the ground that it might affect his status before the Southern Methodist Conference, which opens April 26.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett opposed the motion, saying his office was swamped with emergency work. He estimates the Cannon trial would last at least three weeks.

Justice Gordon said April 9 was the earliest possible date he could set for the trial, but added that he would be willing to postpone it to a date after the conference. After Gordon's decision, Cannon said both he and the church "would be greatly embarassed if this matter is not disposed of before the conference."

1,000 Nash Employes Strike for Higher Pay

Racine, Wis., Feb. 21 (AP).—Approximately 1,000 employes of the Nash Motor Co. plant did not report for work today, seeking to enforce their demands for a 20 per cent wage increase.

Company officials and labor representatives gathered immediately and expressed hope for speedy settlement of the dispute.

U. S. Contract Holder Gave Brown 'Help'

Examination of former Postmaster General Brown by the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee concerning his administration of air and ocean mail contracts yesterday resulted in four outstanding revelations:

That the late Joseph H. Bagley, a former partner of Brown's in a joint stock trading account and Washington representative of a concern that secured a fat Government flooring contract, had given Brown three blank checks. Brown said they were for a "very personal" transaction that Bagley wished Brown to handle for him.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, listed 16 passenger line operators who had not been invited to attend the 1930 "spoils conferences," despite Brown's repeated assertion that the meetings were called to assist the passenger operators who held no air mail contracts.

Brown produced several letters relating to air mail which he said were not included in the files he returned to Postmaster General James A. Farley a month ago, after committee witnesses charged that Brown ordered all his office files burned before he left office on March 4, 1933.

Brown appologized to the committee for what he said might have been an inference, in a statement he made on Tuesday, that committee investigators had tampered with his mail.

Sifts Deals With Bagley.

After jumping around all day, from air mail routes to Brown's stock operations, to ocean mail contracts, and to the 1930 meeting, Black finally concluded the third day of Brown's examination by concentrating on his financial relations with Bagley.

Brown corroborated previous testimony that the two men had opened a joint trading account in 1928, closed it early in 1929, and transferred the account to another Washington brokerage house. The second account, he said, was closed in October, 1929, with Brown agreeing to take over one-half of the securities that Bagley had bought for the account. He had to pay $454,000 for the stock, he said, and due to the 1929 crash had suffered a large paper loss.

"Bagley offered to help me make some money," said Brown, explaining how their financial arrangement had started. "I had left a lucrative law practice to come to Washington to work for the Government. Bagley said we would

Here's a New One! Have Uncle Sam Slap Tax on Self

The House and Senate restaurants, as well as those in the Commerce Department and other Government buildings, would be taxed just as any public cafe in Washington under a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Edmonds (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Edmonds' bill would authorize the collection of Federal, State and municipal taxes on all Government property over the country that is utilized in competition with private industry.

Only military and naval establishments used in the maintenance of service would be exempted.

Edmonds explained that his proposal is an outgrowth of the survey and report made in the summer of 1932 by a special committee headed by Representative Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri.

He declared that Government competition with private industry is "manifestly unfair."

Earl of Suffolk to Wed Mimi Crawford, Dancer

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—The Earl of Suffolk, Charles Henry George Howard, a grandson of the American, Levi Leiter, plans to marry an English dancing girl, Mimi Crawford, it was announced today.

The earl, one of England's most adventurous nobles, owns 10,000 acres at Wiltshire. He is 27 and it will be the first marriage for both. His mother was a daughter of Levi Leiter, Chicago merchant, and married the nineteenth Earl of Suffolk.

Police Court Greets Mattingly After 2 Years

Police court was the scene of "welcome home" ceremonies yesterday. It was the occasion of Judge Robert Mattingly's return after nearly two years' absence.

A veteran of many years' duty on the Police Court bench, Judge Mattingly was recalled from his assignment at Municipal Court to "fill in" for two absent jurists. Judge John P. McMahon is vacationing in the South and Judge Isaac Hitt is ill.

Senate Approves Full Pay Restoration July 1; Plan Faces House Fight

Promotions With Wage Increases Also Are Approved.

Veterans' Benefits Boosting Now Up

Repeal of All Economy Law Provisions Is Almost Passed.

Five per cent is to be restored effective February 1 under the program approved by the Senate.

Final approval of this pay program is not assured. The Senate has not completed consideration of the independent offices appropriations bill in which the pay provisions are embodied. After the Senate approves the bill it must go to the House.

Observers fear pressure by the Administration may serve to defeat the full pay restoration and force adoption of President Roosevelt's program of a 5 per cent restoration now and restoration of another 5 per cent on July 1, with authority for the President to restore the balance.

Wins by 1 Vote.

Adoption of the full pay restoration amendment offered by Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, was by the narrow margin of 1 vote. The count was 41 to 40. Absence of some Senators made possible success of the fight.

Thirteen Democrats joined with 27 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite—Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota—to put the McCarran amendment over.

Those Democrats who voted for full pay were Senators Bone, Bulow, Copeland, Costigan, Dill, George, Long, McCarran, Neely, Reynolds, Thomas (of Oklahoma), Thomas (of Utah), and Van Nuys.

The Republicans who voted for full pay were Senators Austin, Barbour, Borah, Capper, Carey, Davis, Diskinson, Fess, Frazier, Gibson, Goldsborough, Hale, Hatfield, Hebert, Johnson, Kean, Keyes, La-Follette, McNary, Metcalf, Nye, Robinson (Indiana), Schall, Steiwer, Townsend, Vandenberg and White.

Judge's Killing Hints Stavisky Was a Spy

Paris, Feb. 21 (AP).—The slaying of a prominent judge and a police announcement that Serge Stavisky may have been an international spy opened new chapters today in the $40,000,000 Stavisky pawnshop bond swindle.

The body of Judge Albert Prince, who had worked on several financial scandals and was to have been a witness in the Stavisky investigation, was found, mutilated, on a railroad track near Dijon. He was bound and a bloody knife was found nearby.

Authorities revealed they were probing the possibility "Handsome Alex" Stavisky acted as an international spy, selling secret information to Germany and using women agents.

Collapse Precipitated Riots.

A secret service report in the matter has been submitted to the judge in Bayonne, but confirmation of the charges was not available.

Stavisky was the founder of the Bayonne Municipal Pawnship, whose recent collapse led to acusations of irregularities in connection with it among high-placed officials, to the downfall of two French cabinets and riots that resulted in hundreds of casualties.

Stavisky, friend of many authorities, was found dead when police closed in upon him at Chamonix.

Police declared Judge Prince, of the court of appeals, had been trapped by a faked telephone call that his mother was ill in Dijon, that he left Paris in answer to the message, and that he had been slain en route under circumstances that had not been revealed this evening.

The death stirred wide comment in political circles, since Prince took an important role in the investigations of such scandals as the famous Oustric affair.

He was a member of the financial section of the Paris courts in 1926, when Stavisky was first arrested on a charge of swindling. The case was not prosecuted, and Government officials were accused of failing to bring him to justice before he engineered his giant pawnshop swindle.

Knew the "Inside."

Prince was to have testified today on certain phases of the Stavisky case. In parliamentary quarters, he was presumed to have known the inside story of the judicial handling of the alleged "master swindler," whose suicide was openly questioned in the Chamber of Deputies.

Police said assassins killed the judge in the compartment of his Dijon-bound train and threw the body out of the coach into the path of another train.

House Passes Tax Measure By 388 to 7

Income Levy Revisions Expected to Bring $258,000,000.

By Robert C. Albright.

By an overwhelming vote of 388 to 7, the House yesterday passed the $258,000,000 income tax revision bill, plugging major tax avoidance loopholes, bolstering surtax rates in the higher brackets and scaling down payments on earned income.

The bill immediately was sent to the Senate, where Finance Chairman Pat Harrison will order committee hearings and a thorough study of the far-reaching measure. Secretary of the TreasuryMorgenthau will be called before the Senate finance group next week.

House passage followed rejection of a minority amendment to restore the old 2-cent first class postage rates. The Republican motion, offered by Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, was beaten 272 to 132, only 16 Democrats voting for the change.

Few Amendments.

A few last minute amendments clarifying language and strengthening barriers against tax avoidance, were proposed by the committee and accepted at once by the House.

One would prevent wealthy stockholders in personal holding companies from shuffling stock on the last day of the taxable year in such a manner as to evade a 35 per cent tax on these "incorporated pocketbooks."

Except for one minority motion to send the bill back to committee for the postage change, members were given no other opportunity to

Johnson Hits Shorter Week As Trade Foe

General and Swope Tell Committee 30-Hour Plan Is Going Too Far.

(Associated Press.)

Hugh S. Johnson, who has asked a lot of questions of other persons during the last few months, answered a few himself yesterday, during the course of which he told a House committee that he thought an arbitrary 30-hour week could not be applied to industry.

He went to the labor committee and sat by while Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, voiced similar views against Chairman Connery's 30-hour work week bill. He and Swope agreed hour reduction should come through the more flexible operations of NRA codes.

Johnson told the committee he thought the NRA "a much more flexible and intelligent way" of reaching the problem of workers' hours.

"My opinion, from nine months' experience in watching the codes go by," he explained, "is that you couldn't apply a flat rule in industry. You've got to maintain a flexibility to prevent an untoward result that you or nobody would want to have.

The Association for Crippled Children and Disabled Adults for the District of Columbia will sponsor a sale of seals of the International Society for Crippled Children, March 26 to 31, it was announced yesterday by J. H. S. Neligh, vice president.

The seal sale will be carried on by the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teachers Association, Mrs. J. N. Saunders, president. She will be assisted by Mrs. Lucien Jordon.

Swedish Prince Refuses Royal Plea; to Wed Actress March 8

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—The love of the young Swedish Prince Sigvard for a blonde German film actress prevailed today against the strenuous opposition of his family.

Sigvard sent Count Folke Bernadotte, a special envoy of his father, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, back to Sweden with a firm declaration that he and Fraulein Erika Patzek will be married in a registry office here March 8. The young couple plan to become plain Mr. and Mrs. Bernadotte.

In this they will follow the lead of Sigvard's royal kinsman, Lenhart Bernadotte, who in 1932 married Karin Nissvandt, a Stockholm industrialist's daughter, and thereby surrendered his rights to the Swedish throne.

Count Folke Bernadotte, himself the husband of the former Estelle R. Manville, an American, flew here secretly to dissuade Sigvard to abandon the marriage plans, but found it hopeless. Sweden's diplomats had already failed.

"They're just a young couple, head over heels in love, and it is unlikely anyone will change their minds," one of the 27-year-old prince's friends said today.

After their marriage the pair plan to return to Berlin, where Sigvard will continue his work in the UFA Film Co., where he is

Slump Ended, Dawes Asserts

Confidence Was Restored by Roosevelt's Bank Holiday, He Says.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—Charles Gates Dawes broke a two-year silence today to declare that the depression has ended.

Prosperity began returning last October, he said. For the future, he predicted "continued better conditions in business and industry."

Announcing that he based it on months of study, the former Vice President made his optimistic prediction in an address before the Chicago Association of Commerce.

In apparent fine fettle, Dawes told his audience of several hundred business men that he based much of his forecast on a conviction that President Roosevelt would accomplish his purpose of balancing the National budget in 1936.

That program of budget balancing, he said, should be of tremendous importance in restoring public confidence, which he described as tantamount in reviving prosperity, to its fullest extent.

Declaring that economic history showed the average lengths of 35 depressions to have been five years and three and one-half months past the peak of predepression prosperity, Gen. Dawes said:

"It may well be that the beginning of the fifth year of the cycle in this present depression will be regarded hereafter as the eighth month after the bank moratorium of 1933, to-wit, October, 1933."

Henry Pu-Yi Hopes To Rule All China

Manchu Executive Twice Lost Ancient Throne.

Hsinking (Changchun), Manchuria, Feb. 21 (AP).—Henry Pu-Yi, Manchukuo's chief executive who will become emperor of the new Manchurian empire March 1, hopes that the new dynasty ultimately will form the nucleus of a great monarchial restoration for the whole of China, his friends said today.

He believes that the time will come when he will, for the third time, rule over that great area in which more than one-quarter of the population of the world lives.

Farley Caught Between Fires In N. Y. Battle

If He Runs for Governor, General Sure to Feel Economy Backfire.

By Raymond Clapper.

New York political troubles, which are bothering Postmaster General James A. Farley more than all of his other jobs combined, are heading in a direction which threatens to pile up woe for him, if, as is expected, he runs for governor in 1936.

There is a strong possibility also that the scars of this fight will show up in the coming Congressional elections, when the Administration will be the issue in every congressional district in New York State.

The genial, broad-shouldered Postmaster General has been caught between two fires in the Albany fight over an economy bill for New York City.

This measure directly menaces the jobs of scores of political heelers. While General Farley has undertaken to raze Tammany Hall, he also wants to create a new Democratic political organization there which will support him and the Roosevelt Administration. To do this, jobs have to be available. So on that side there is the pressure to save political jobs in the city.

Farley Can't Withdraw.

On the other side are Gov. Lehman, Roosevelt-Farley protege, and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, Progressive Republican, united behind a bill which would wipe out soft jobs all over New York City as an economy measure.

Farley is being badgered by both sides, and because, in addition to being Democratic National chairman and many other things, he also is New York State Democratic chairman by remote control, he is unable to keep out of it.

A few days ago inspired stories from Albany declared Farley was encouraging the opposition to the economy bill. The Postmaster General was compelled to take notice of that by issuing a statement he was for Gov. Lehman and favored his reelection this fall.

That didn't quite cover the situation regarding the economy bill, so Farley added that he thought anything Gov. Lehman wanted should be done. This gesture of support was made in such a cautious, hesitating way that Democratic politicians in New York City felt free to stand their ground and continued to protest the economy ax being swung at their heads.

However, public pressure was so strong that they suggested a compromise move to save the city from bankruptcy by a measure which would make every city employe take a month's furlough without pay, but would not give the board of estimate power to abolish county and borough offices in New York City. That proposal would have saved the political jobs which are the key points in the New York machine.

But it has only added to the static. Mayor LaGuardia upset that proposition by declaring he'd be darned if he would give a charwoman a month's vacation "to save some loafer in the sheriff's office." He said this was proof the opposition to his bill was in the interest of a few ward heelers.

But Will It Work?

There is where the matter stands at the moment. When Farley goes up to New York over the week-end, he may have some further suggestions to offer. Meantime, he has sent his chief up-State lieutenant, Vincent Dailey, to Albany to direct up-State Democrats to support the economy bill. This might enable the bill to go through without having to undertake any further embarrassing pressure on New York City Democratic assemblymen.

There is little doubt but that Farley is concerned over the danger of alienating professional jobholders and civil service employes in New York City. He knows from long experience antedoting the New Deal, that an organized minority can lick an unorganized majority every time.

On this theory, to offend such a group by taking their jobs away would bring certain retaliation in the coming campaign and particularly in the Administration's subconscious desire to see Senator Copeland defeated for renomination in the State convention, and on his own supposed plans to run for Governor in 1936.

The Administration lieutenant in New York City, Edward J. Flynn, Bronx leader and the probable successor to John F. Curry as city boss, is opposed to the LaGuardia bill.

Administration "On Spot."

Some believe that New York Democrats are making a political mistake in opposing the bill. They argue that the best politics would be to give Mayor LaGuardia everything he wants in the expectation that he would have to bear the brunt of all retaliation. In some quarters, it is pointed out that New York City Democrats are making the same mistake Republicans in the Legislature indulged in when Alfred E. Smith was governor. They opposed him and thus enabled him to set up a straw man.

In other words, there are some important leaders here who feel that New York City Democrats are building up an alibi for Mayor LaGuardia. But since they appear determined to do it, there is reluctance here to turn on the heat and stop them.

Yet, if the fight drags on much longer, it may have to be done, lest the National Administration be placed in the position of tacitly consenting to sabotage of the most popular drive for efficient government New York City has seen in years—by a mayor whose election was opposed by the Administration storm troops.

Hearing Called On Bill to Hike Gas Tax Here

Organizations Invited to Lodge Protests Next Wednesday.

A public hearing on the Smith bill to increase the gasoline tax in the District from 2 to 4 cents was scheduled for 10:30 a. m., next Wednesday by the House District Committee.

With Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, presiding because of the illness of Chairman Norton, the committee decided to hold hearings because the fiscal relations sub-committee, headed by Representative Clark (Democrat), of North Carolina, had "passed the buck" after listening to vigorous protests against the bill.

Palmisano admitted he agreed with Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, sponsor of the measure, that the District gas tax should be raised to parity with that of adjacent States, but he said that all local organizations would be given an opportunity to register their opposition.

Representative Clark (Democrat), of Kansas, a new member of the committee, and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said they saw no reason for the tax increase unless the District needed additonal revenue. They ridiculed the argument that the tax should be raised for the benefit of nearby States.

"Some justification" for the tax was seen by Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, but he said that whatever benefits accrue should go to home owners.

A proposal that the extra revenue should be made availalbe to pay local old age pensions was suggested by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who is sponsoring national old age pension legislation in the House.

Austria Plans Workers Plea

Propaganda Is Planned Through Paper Taken From Socialists.

Vienna, Feb. 21 (AP).—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss took his first practical step today toward organizing a new life for the Austrian working class by placing the directors of the official news agency in charge of the seized Socialist party publishing house.

Through the former official Socialist organ, the arbeiter, Zeitung, which was remodelled in conformity with the spirit of the new times, the government will endeavor to make it clear to workers "the government's Christian conviction makes it is a matter of principle the friend and protector of the working class."

The distribution of the government's newspaper for workers is scheduled to begin next week.

Meanwhile, the lifting of martial law in the Vienna district was taken as an indication the government feel certain of its ground.

McGraw Improves; Pneumonia Feared

New Rochelle, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP). John J. McGraw today apparently was overcoming the uremic poisoning which sent him to New Rochelle Hospital last Friday.

The former pilot of the New York Giants spent his most comfortable day since he was brought here from his home in Pelham Manor in a serious condition. Physicians stated McGraw's pulse and temperature had abated somewhat.

While doctors regarded these developments as encouraging they nevertheless were fearful of pneumonia with the patient in a weakeined condition.

3 Hurt as Passenger Bus Skids Into Ploe

Three persons were slightly injured yesterday when a bus skidded on ice and crashed into a pole at Fourth and Channing streets northeast.

The driver, R. W. Street, 34, and two passengers, John Conley, 50, of 638 D street northwest, and Elizabeth Kelly, 4, of 1012 Upshur street northwest, were treated at Sibley Hospital for lacerations and bruises. Eeveral other passengers, thrown from their seats, escaped injury.

make some money and that there would be no losses."

The arrangement was that while Brown was to receive 50 per cent of the earnings, Bagley was to do all the work. Pressed by Black, the former Cabinet officer could remember no cash that he put up personally at the time the account was opened.

Named Brown in Will.

Bagley, who died in November, 1932, made Brown his residuary legatee by a will which was written in August, 1931. He said an earlier will, by a codicil added in July, 1929, had left to Brown their trading account, which was known only as B 50.

In the summer of 1929, said Brown, he believed Bagley was worth between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, although he believed his affairs included other accounts besides their joint one.

The three check stubs which Black asked Brown to identify were marked: "Signed and given to W. F. B. and returned."

Brown said Bagley had wanted some business transacted which he was unable to handle and had asked Brown to do it for him. After Brown asserted that the bank account on which the checks were drawn had never carried more than $200 at one time, Black showed him another check on the same bank for $11,000, made out to Brown by Bagley.

The former Postoffice head appeared surprised that the account had ever run so high, but identified it as the transfer of his interest in the trading account at the time it was changed in February, 1929.

After referring to Brown's repeated declaration that the 1930 meetings were solely to work out some scheme to aid passenger transport operators who had no mail contracts, Black listed, and Brown confirmed, 16 air lines not represented at the meetings and not benefited by later contracts or extensions.

Only Three Got Contracts.

It was further revealed that only three purely passenger operators got their coveted mail routes after the meeting: Transcontinental Air Transport, the United States Airways, which got a route by sub-letting from the American Airways, and the Western Air Express, which, although it already held a contract on one route, secured contracts on four other routes which previously had been only passenger lines.

After producing several letters relating to the air mail situation just before he left office, Brown was checked up by Black to find out where they had been kept.

Brown explained he had kept carbon and photostatic copies of them "for my own protection." He said most of them were dated after a resolution introduced in Senate by Black in February, 1933, authorizing a Senate investgaition of mail contracts.

He admitted they had not been included in the batch he returned to Farley, but said he was surprised that copies had not been found in the Postoffice Department files, since he had left all the originals in the department.

After Brown apologized for what he said might have been a "hasty" statement he gave newspapermen on Tuesday about his opened correspondence, explained he was "tired and on edge" after a day's grueling. Black assured him he had not interpreted the remark as reflecting on his committee.

Black Offers to Help.

The chairman further protested that he would be happy to join Brown in a thorough investigation to determine who had been responsible for the alleged mail tampering.

Postmaster John J. Kiely, of New York, to whom Brown said he reported the matter, is quoted by the United Press as saying he knew nothing about it, but would be glad to aid in any investigation.

Black reverted to ocean mail in Brown's administration by questioning him on the proposal to give a contract to the Philadelphia Mail Steamship Co., organized during the Hoover Administration.

Although Brown has been represented by previous witnesses and correspondence as willing to award the contract, despite a Senate resolution authorizing a thorough investigation of the conditions surrounding the company's formation, the Shipping Board refused to authorize the sale of vessels by the United States Lines to the new company.

Railways Interested.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Reading were all interested in the new company. Black produced a memorandum written by A. J. Ball, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which commented:

"If the Postmaster General signed the contract we would be left with a contract but no ships to operate. So we persuaded Mr. Brown to leave the bid as unfinished business for Mr. Farley."

Black said he expected to be through with his examination of Brown today, when he would turn the witness over to Senators Austin and White, Republican committee members, for examination.

State Springs Final Surprise In Touhy Trial

Banghart Broght In for "Exhibit" as Kidnap Evidence Ends.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—The second attempt to convict the Touhy gang of the $70,000 John Factor kidnaping closed today as the State rested after having added Factor's own story to the case and sprung another surprise move.

That was the introduction of a Touhy follower as a People's Exhibit." The exhibit was Basil ("The Owl") Bankhart, who was brought in, scowling and sullen, for State's witnesses to view.

Factor's story and the unusual exhibit were the final pieces in the State's case. They topped five days of testimony in the case of Roger Touhy, who has won in two other kidnaping trials.

Two of Touhy's henchmen confessed during the trial that the Touhy gang kidnaped Factor. William (Buck) Henrichsen, who admitted receiving the $70,000 which was paid in ransom, followed Isaac Costner, who confessed to helping when the Touhy gang seized Factor last July 1.

Today Factor was asked only for the briefest account of his 12 days in the kidnapers' hands. He told his story in 26 minutes and was dismissed after 68 minutes of cross-examination, chiefly as to th echarges against hmi in England, where he must stand trial when this trial ends on stock gambling charges.

Banghart was brought into court late in the afternoon and seated before the witness stand. Then John Lendall, a farmer; his young daughter, his son and his wife each in turn pointed Banghart out as a man who begged them to help him when police were beating the enighborhood on August 15 for two of the Factor kidnapers.

House Passes Tax Measure By 388 to 7

Income Levy Revisions Expected to Bring $258,000,000.

Not one Democrat cast his vote against the measure on the final ballot. Voting "No," all Republicans, were Representatives Britten and Dirksen, Illinois; Eltse, Kahn and Welch, California; Foss, Massachusetts, and McFadden, Pennsylvania.

Warned of Postage Move.

Warned 24 hours ahead Republicans would seek to repeal the present 3-cent rate on first class postage, Democratic leaders took every precaution to prevent a general bolt on this popular issue.

A threat of new taxes this session if the $75,000,000 collected from emergency postal rates is repealed was the big stick Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee and Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns held over Democratic colleagues.

A letter was read from Postmaster General Farley asking continuance of the rates.

The $258,000,000 bill in the main is the product of a six-month subcommittee study, directed by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, although concessions were made to the views of Secretary Morgenthau and his tax adviser, Dr. Roswell Magill.

Rate Changes Made.

The measure substitutes a flat 4 per cent normal income tax rate for the present 4 and 8 per cent rates. Surtax brackets are reduced to 28, with the surtax starting with 4 per cent on incomes from $4,000 to $8,000, and rising to 59 per cent on $1,000,000 and over.

On recommendation of the Treasury, a 10 per cent deduction credit for earned income up to $8,000 is provided in the bill.

As a penalty for filing consolidated returns, concerns choosing this method must pay a 2 per cent additional tax.

Capital losses are strictly limited to capital gains in the measure, a 35 per cent tax is imposed on undistributed income of personal holding companies, and partnership laws are tightened to curtail reductions from personal returns.

New Taxes Imposed.

New taxes imposed in the bill include a one-fifth per cent tax per barrel on lubricating oil to forestall "bootlegging," and 5 cents a pound tax on cocoanut and sesame oils.

Effective January 1, 1935, the bill repeals the present 2-cent tax on bank checks.

Democrats—Representatives Condon, Rhode Island; Connery and Douglass, Massachusetts; Crosser, Secrest, Sweeney, Truax and Young, Ohio; Dunn, Pennsylvania; Gillespie, Illinois; Hildebrandt, South Dakota; Hoeppel, California; Mead, New York; Monaghan, Montana; Morehead, Nebraska, and Rankin, Mississippi.

Rails Promise Effort to Avoid Wage Discord

Reply to President's Plea on 15% Decrease After June.

Managers of the Nation's railroads yesterday informed President Roosevelt they "will give due consideration to your wishes and will exert our best efforts to achieve an accord with the employes as soon as possible."

This was in reply to the President's letter urging the railroad wage truce be continued another six months after June 30, in effect prolonging but not increasing the present 10 per cent reduction.

"The Conference Committee of Managers," wrote Chairman W. F. Thiehoff in a letter made public at the White House, "is most sympathetic to the important considerations of National welfare set forth in your letter."

The President had urged a railroad controversy be avoided in the interest of National recovery, following action of the managers in serving notice of a 15 per cent reduction after June 30.

"This action on the part of the railroads at this time," Mr. Thiehoff's reply explained, "was to make possible a determination of the wage controversy in an orderly manner before the expiration of the 10 per cent deduction. * * * Otherwise, the peak basic wage rates of 1929 would be automatically restored with consequent disaster to the whole railroad industry."

The letter confirmed a meeting in Washington March 15 with representatives of the Railway Labor Executives Association. The latter is now determining setnment of local organizations preparatory to adopting a policy.

SQUIBB'S ASPIRIN

LOOK FOR SQUIBB CONTROL NUMBER
Each new lot bears its own serial number—actual evidence of 63 safety tests, made during manufacture, of the reliability, purity and safety of Squibb's Aspirin.
EASY TO OPEN—One hand is all this new box requires. No broken nails, cut fingers or spilled tablets.

ALL genuine aspirin is quick in its effect. But before any aspirin can become thoroughly effective, it must pass through the stomach and enter the intestine. Squibb's Aspirin can be relied upon to give prompt relief. It disintegrates instantly when it reaches the stomach. It does not crumble away in the box, or leave particles in the mouth, because each tablet is firmly and uniformly compressed.

Hundreds of brands of aspirin are sold in America. If you want to be certain of the purity and safety of the aspirin you buy, ask for Squibb's Aspirin by name. It is a name you can trust. The control number on every box and bottle of Squibb's Aspirin is proof of the care with which its quality and uniformity have been safeguarded.

St. Paul Mayor Requests Jury To Call Critics

Mahoney Wants toSummon Cummings and Copeland for Crime Grilling.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 21 (AP).—Mayor William Mahoney bid for a showdown with Washington officials over crime conditions today by demanding the Attorney General and 12 others be summoned.

The State law topped the mayor's highest card—his plan for Attorney General Cummings, Senator R. S. Copeland and others to back up with facts and names, under court order, their charges that Minneapolis and St. Paul were "breeding centers of crimes" and should be "cleaned up."

"It seems to me," said William Burrows, foreman of the jury which convenes Monday, "that we have no right to summon these people from Washington. We could not force them legally to come to St. Paul. The best we could do would be to extend an invitation to appear."

Incensed at condemnation leveled at the city and police department, especially in connection with the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer kidnaping case, Mayor Mahoney disdained to invite the men.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the intelligence division of the United States Department of Justice; Harold Nathan, first assistant to Hoover, now here on the Bremer case; Werner Hanni, chief of the Justice Department's St. Paul office, and Federal Judge Matthew Joyce, Minneapolis, were named.

Burrows' statement indicated the jury would not seek to summon Washington officials.

Experts Clash At Dean Trial

Millsaps Chemist Testifies Kennedy's Stomach Was Free of Poison.

Greenwood, Miss., Feb. 21 (AP). Expert testimony was pitted against expert testimony today in the murder trial of Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, 33-year-old baby specialist, as her attorneys put two physicians and a chemist on the stand to combat the State charge Dr. John Preston Kennedy's strange death last August was caused by mercury poisoning.

On several points the defense testimony was contradictory to State evidence, which tried to show Dr. Dean poisoned Dr. Kennedy with a whisky highball.

Dr. A. E. Gordin, who made numerous examinations of Kennedy, repeated his testimony of yesterday that he did not believe the patient was suffering from mercury poisoning, but acute nephritis

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, 67, chemist at Millsaps College, testified for the defense that he had made two analyses of Kennedy's stomach contents and found "no trace of mercury or any other metallic poisoning."

41 Pupils Hurt Aboard Buses

Four Seriously Injured in Crashes in Louisiana and Alabama.

Lake Charles, La., Feb. 21 (AP).—Twenty-one children were injured, three critically, when a school bus overturned near the Oberlin School today.

About 40 persons were in the bus. The driver suffered a broken arm, and his wife was injured internally.

The three most seriously injured were small girls, all near Oberlin.

Marion, Ala., Feb. 21 (AP).—A score of children were injured near here today when a consolidated school bus overturned in a ditch after being sideswiped by a truck.

Rezoning of School Area Is Protested

Opposition to the rezoning of property in the vicinity of the E. V. Brown School, Connecticut avenue and McKinley street northwest, was voiced yesterday by the Board of Education.

A protest against the conversion of the property from a residential to business section will be sent by the board to the District Zoning Commission. Application has been made to the commission for the rezoning by the promoters of a drive-in shopping center.

The board based its action on a survey of parents of children at the Brown School. Opposition was voiced by 116 parents representing 167 children, while approval was given by 52 parents representing 53 children.

Denver U. Buildings Sold for Back Taxes

Denver, Feb. 21 (AP).—Two buildings of the University of Denver were sold today for $145,000 delinquent special improvement taxes, by William F. McGlone, manager of revenue for city and county, who said other buildings would be sold if overdue taxes were not paid.

The university has claimed tax exemptions as set forth in its charter, and McGlone has contended special improvement taxes are not actually taxes but benefit assessments.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

Biggest Test Awaits Morgenthau

Ousting of Wall Streeter, However, Is Sign of "Revolution."

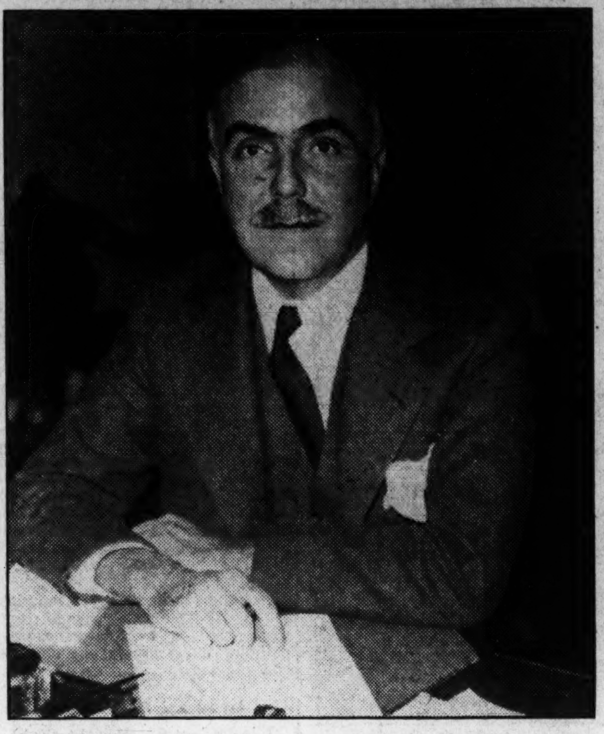
By the Unofficial Observer.



Earle Bailie, special assistant to then Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who resigned after little more than a month because of criticism of his business connections.

THE real test will come on the issue of revising the whole Federal tax system and increasing the levies on big incomes and inheritances. Until that time comes, it is impossible to say whether Morgenthau is a liberal who is willing to use the tax system so as to revise the economic system or whether he is merely an able administrator whose ideas on taxes do not differ greatly from those of Ogden Mills. Then, too, will be the test of Magill's ability—if he stays that long.

When Morgenthau took charge of the Farm Board he went in search of a personnel man. He found him in the person of William M. McReynolds, of the Budget Bureau, who had been in the civil service for 25 years. Tall, slender, thin-faced, round-shouldered, McReynolds is Morgenthau's goad for minor officials. His job is to counteract the deadening effect of civil service on individual initiative and to keep the Treasury employes on their toes. For this purpose he has been given the position of Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Not one of these key men owes his job to political influence. In fact, Morgenthau's indifference to politics is responsible for his one bad blunder.

He needed an "issues man" to help with the Treasury financing. Wall street is the only place where you can find a specialist in this field, so Henry called on his personal friend, Earle Bailie, a partner in J. & W. Seligman & Co. Of Bailie's competence there was no question, but Senator James Couzens, the peppery liberal Republican from Michigan, and many young liberal lawyers in the Administration detonated over his business connections.

Couzens Lays Down Law to Morgenthau.

Couzens laid down the law to Morgenthau. Bailie did a beautiful job on the difficult mid-December financing and proposed a scheme for making income tax evasions more difficult for the higher bracketeers, but he could not make his peace with the opposition. When Morgenthau was up for Senate confirmation in January, it was made plain to him that he would not get the portfolio unless Bailie got the boot, and that all the financing of the Seligman firm would be thoroughly aired on the floor of the Senate, into the bargain. On the same day that Morgenthau's name was recommended for confirmation by the Senate finance committee, Bailie resigned.

The financial end of the revolution began with the departure from the gold standard and has carried on through the repudiation of the gold clause in Government bonds, the refusal to stabilize international exchange on a gold basis and the emergence of the "commodity dollar" through the Government's gold purchase policy.

Such a revolution could not fail to send many to the psychological guillotine, and gold has, in fact, taken two sets of casualties from the Roosevelt ranks.

The first casualties were several individuals whose names showed upon the lists of big gold hoarders. They had been within their rights in withdrawing gold before the moratorium of March, 1933, and all of them turned it in promptly after Roosevelt issued his ban against hoarding, but they were deemed to be disqualified for public office under the New Deal. Only a few know exactly who these hoarders are. One or two of them are mentioned elsewhere in this story.

There were others, including men who had contributed to the Roosevelt campaign fund or helped him in important ways, but they were on the gold list, which is equivalent to being on the black list. They had showed their lack of faith in the New Deal and in the Government itself.

Furious Struggle Causes Gold Casualties.

The second set of gold casualties developed from the furious struggle within the Administration over the gold standard, the most notable victims being Dean G. Acheson, Undersecretary of the Treasury; Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, who was brought over from the Bank of England to be special adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, and James P. Warburg, the young New York banker, who was for a time identified as a member of the Brain Trust.

Jimmy Warburg was another illustration of the complete inability of a Wall street banker to serve the New Deal. Through Moley he was brought in, just before Roosevelt's inauguration, to help prepare for the economic discussions with foreign governments and for the London conference. The Roosevelt gang needed an expert on money and exchange, and Warburg seemed to be the man. Aged 38, he was a son of the late Paul Moritz Warburg, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who was one of the organizers of the Federal Reserve System and one of the few bankers who warned the public early in 1929 of the disasters which could only be stopped by putting an end to speculation.

Young Warburg was not a standpat banker. He favored reduction of the gold coverage of the dollar and the use of silver, as supplemental coverage. He saw that the old simon-pure gold standard hadn't worked and wanted to invent a new one.

With expert knowledge of a highly specialized financial field he impressed the Roosevelt crowd, innocent of the intricacies of international finance.

Warburg Labored To Stabilize Exchanges.

At the London Conference, Warburg worked endlessly to stabilize or steady the exchanges when Roosevelt was deliberately letting them find their own levels. When Warburg came back from London he found himself out of the picture. He was brought in on a few occasions by Roosevelt to show there was no personal feeling, but in the autumn he again went to bat for international banking stabilization.

He had the nerve to talk to Roosevelt "like a Dutch uncle" and succeeded in ushering himself permanently out of the White House. He gave the impression that he thought that Roosevelt was ignorant on monetary matters. Many people have thought the same, though their numbers are fewer than a year ago.

Warburg had been offered and had, most unfortunately, refused the post of Undersecretary of the Treasury under Woodin. The fluke by which Dean G. Acheson, who is also in his late thirties, landed the job will be related elsewhere. Suffice it that Roosevelt thought that Acheson, having been one of Justice Brandeis' young proteges, shared the Brandies liberalism. Acheson might have imbibed legal liberalism from Brandies, but his economic ideology had been suckled on the wolf's milk of Wall street, via Lew Douglas.

Acheson Balked At Gold Policy.

Acheson got along pretty well for several months, until he took the definite position that the gold purchase plan was illegal. He was so emphatic in his views that he obviously could not carry out the policy with a clear conscience. In fact, it was understood behind the scenes that he had refused to sign some of the necessary papers connected with the measure, insisting instead that Woodin should do it. So out he went, and without ceremony, except a remark from the White House that he was "a nice boy," but that he didn't know what it was all about.

In some ways Acheson's unceremonious decapitation was parallel to the ceremonial hara-kiri on the steps of the Treasury performed by Prof. Sprague.

While preparing for the London Conference the Administration looked around for an expert in monetary matters in order to bolster up young Warburg, who had hitherto faced single-handed the experts of the British and French treasuries. The Administration hit on Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, former professor of banking and finance at Harvard, who was then serving as economic adviser to the Bank of England.

Sprague was one of our leading authorities on banking and finance and the author of several standard studies of the subject. He had succeeded another American professor as Montagu Norman's secretary of state for American affairs; he possessed intimate knowledge of the workings of European central banks and was presumed to be familiar with the intricacies of international exchange and the subtleties of the British half-billion-dollar exchange equalization fund.

With the help of Felix Frankfurter, the Roosevelt Administration persuaded Sprague to give up a salary of £5,000 sterling in order to return and serve his country for $6,000. Sprague reached Washington just in time to turn around and go to London. He got entangled in the temporary stabilization scheme and, at the end of the conference, was out of the White House picture, where he was suspected of having played too close to Montagu Norman. In the Treasury, he worked out the Liberty Loan conversion scheme—which was hopefully interpreted by Wall street as implying a return to "sound money"—only to be stood on his ear by Roosevelt's announcement of the gold purchase plan.

Resignation of Sprague Loss to Administration.

Finding himself on a sidetrack when he thought he had been on the main line, Sprague resigned with a public letter which warned of disaster from the gold plan. Then he wrote a series of newspaper articles setting forth his own views, which were unctuously published by the Tory press, and returned to Harvard to teach.

He was quickly forgotten, but his resignation was an unnecessary loss to the Administration. If he had been given a little attention, he could have been usefully retained. He was in sympathy with the objectives of the New Deal and, far from being the rock-ribbed conservative which the Old Gang strove to make him, saw no necessity for balancing the budget in time of depression.

He thought, in fact, that the Government ought to spend a lot of money and get it back by taxation in times of prosperity. And he saw slum clearance and the development of better housing—each of them a challenge to some of the dirtiest rackets in America—as one of the great opportunities for expanding purchasing power. He was a real inflationist who happened to disagree with the gold buying program, and his personal irritation at not having been consulted probably made him more vehement on that point than he needed to be. Real brains, combined with real liberalism, are too rare in this country for the Administration to lose the support of men like Sprague who happen to be in disagreement with minor points in a major social program.

The survival of Lew Douglas, Director of the Budget, and a few others of the "go-along" school of practical financial politics, illustrates the value to the Administration of keeping an effective and critical opposition alive within its own ranks. With the temporary abdication by Congress of its deliberate functions, the function of criticism and opposition to policies-in-the-making devolves on the bureaucracy.

This is the hardest lesson for bureaucrats and politicians to learn, but it is a vital part of the Roosevelt policy and is the explanation of the unprecedented liberty of speech and action which he has given to his subordinates.

Presence of Douglas Proves Real Gain.

For this reason, Sprague's resignation is a real loss and the presence of Lewis W. Douglas is a real gain to the Administration. Douglas is the leader of the administrative opposition to the implications of the New Deal. It is a delicate role but a vital one. Without his vigorous and continuous criticism, the Administration policies would be inadequately armored against attack from the Old Guard reactionaries.

Douglas got into the Administration because he was a man who believed in saving Government money and in fighting for what he believed. In his late thirties, he made his mark in Congress as a budget-balancer, a young, fighting, two-fisted Representative from Arizona. Wall street greeted most of Roosevelt's Cabinet appointments with deafening silence, but it cheered itself hoarse when Douglas was named Director of the Budget.

The economy bill was Douglas' handiwork and his one and only triumph. It was also a triumph for Roosevelt, for it lured to his support the Tory elements who might otherwise have opposed the proposal to grant him wide discretionary powers. Once that was accomplished, Roosevelt readily admitted that the economy act went a little too far and consented to its modification. Douglas wanted him to stand pat and use the veto, but Roosevelt used minor concessions to the veterans as a means of luring the radicals also in line.

Holiday

Mailmen Can Go Walking for Fun Today.

The Nation's mailmen get a new holiday today.

W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, has issued an order making Washington's Birthday the same as Christmas, so far as postal service is concerned the Associated Press reported.

There will be no street, rural or window deliveries. Star routes will be operated, and special delivery and perishable matter will be handled. Postmasters have been ordered to give leave to all employes who can be spared.

This was the first special order for Washington's Birthday. Department officials said it was issued to make the holiday service uniform throughout the country.

If shrinkage from melting is not more than 30 per cent, one-and-a-half tons of ice per cow is sufficient for cooling the milk produced in a year.

New York Digs Out of 35-Year Record Storm

25 Dead, Snow Removal Costs $2,000,000; Shipping Hit.

(Associated Press.)

New York City and environs staggered back to normal yesterday from a snow storm termed the worst in the metropolis in 35 years.

While transportation on the suburban lines into New Jersey, Westchester and Connecticut returned to approximately regular schedules, the greater part of Long Island continued snow bound. Milk and other supplies went undelivered in many places.

But with moderating temperatures a rapid recovery from the paralysis of transportation agencies was progressing.

Costs City $2,000,000.

Sanitation Commissioner Ernest P. Goodrich in charge of snow removal estimated the cost of the storm to the city at $2,000,000. An ice crust made removal laborous.

Shipping conditions in New York harbor were termed even worse than during the height of the storm, which caused more than 25 deaths, though the wind had abated, the harbor was filled with ice, hindering the movement of tugs and small shipping vessels. Several incoming liners were reported hours late.

Subsidence of the storm along the Massachusetts coast enabled the Northern Sword, steam collier, which ran aground off Winthrop Tuesday, to establish contact with the shore.

South Is Warmer.

Dogs Run Derby Today With Sleds on Wheels

Ashton, Idaho, Feb. 21 (AP).—The eighteenth annual American Dog Derby will be run over bare pavement here tomorrow, instead of through the deep snow of former years. Sledges will be equipped with rubber-tired wheels.

Last year's race was run in a blizzard. Sixteen drivers will contest in the unusual race over a 25-mile course on State highway.

Virginia Fight To Cut Liquor Board Pay Fails

Lawmakers Give Up Move to Fix $5,000 Salary; Leave It to Peery.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 21.—Members of the Virginia Liquor Control Board will be paid $7,500 a year.

Legislative attempts to fix their compensation at $5,000 were virtually abandoned tonight. Delegate George W. Herring, Woodbridge, outstanding advocate of the lower figure, announced he would agree to the Senate amendment which leaves the pay of board members to the Governor, with a limit of $7,500.

Since Gov. Peery has indicated he favored $7,500, that scale seems certain to prevail. The fact that the amendment failed to call for the higher figure in so many words softened the blow for $5,000 proponents and will save their faces at home.

May Sell Whisky by March 15.

The Peery forces unquestionably have the upper hand because if the House should balk about accepting the Senate liquor amendments, including the salary proviso, the administration could hand-pick the conference committee. Under Assembly rules a report of such a committee could not be altered, but would have to be adopted or rejected in toto.

House Finance Chairman Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, predicted the House would accept the Senate amendments in a day or two. The Governor then could sign the bill and assure the return of whisky by March 15.

The Senate delayed action on a House resolution designed to ask Congress to increase the gasoline tax and automobile license fees in the District of Columbia.

Delinquent Tax Bill Passes.

City councils and county boards would be permitted to waive penalties and interest charges on delinquent taxes for 120 days under a House measure passed unanimously by the Senate.

Delegate Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, obtained House approval of a resolution to ask Congress for a tariff on wood pulp to benefit Virginia timber owners.

A favorable report on a bill for elimination of gasoline tax refunds was submitted by the House Roads Committee. The proposal would prevent return of $900,000 a year to boat and plane owners.

Woodrum Praises Roosevelt Relief

Roanoke Member Presents Views at Culpeper.

Culpeper, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—In an address before the Culpeper Chamber of Commerce Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, declared himself 100 per cent for President Roosevelt's relief measures and added that an adequate army and navy were necessary for world peace.

Leon R. Walters was installed as president of the local chamber, and was introduced by the outgoing official, Dr. Benjamin R. Bell, new National councilor for the body. In his yearly report Dr. Bell mentioned the new postoffice building and the Lord Culpeper Hotel as outstanding building achievements.

The local body has a membership of 105, with the following officers: President Waters, vice president, F. H. White; secretary, Charles N. Goldsborough; treasurer, O. R. Thornhill.

Dr. B. L. Brooks Heads Piedmont Dental Group

Martinsville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). In the final session of the Piedmont Dental Society, which closed its two-day convention here yesterday, Dr. B. L. Brooks, of Lynchburg, was installed as president.

Dr. H. F. Summardahl, of Roanoke, was named president-elect and Dr. A. M. Hitt, of Salem, reelected secretary and treasurer. Lynchburg was selected as the 1935 meeting place.

St. Marys Boy Scouts' Drum Major Selected

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Frank Combs has been selected as drum major for the drum and bugle corps recently organized by the Boy Scouts of St. Marys, under the auspices of the American Legion.

The boys are making rapid progress in the use of their instruments, which now number 33 pieces.

Scrap Steel Shipment Rumored for Japan

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Approximately 2,000 steel cars discarded by the Norfolk-Southern Railroad have been sold to Garson & Co., of Norfolk, and will be wrecked and sent overseas.

It is understood the metal will be sold to Japan, although at the office of Garson & Co. today information as to the destination was refused. Japanese ships for many months have been loading scrap iron and steel here and transporting it to Kobe.

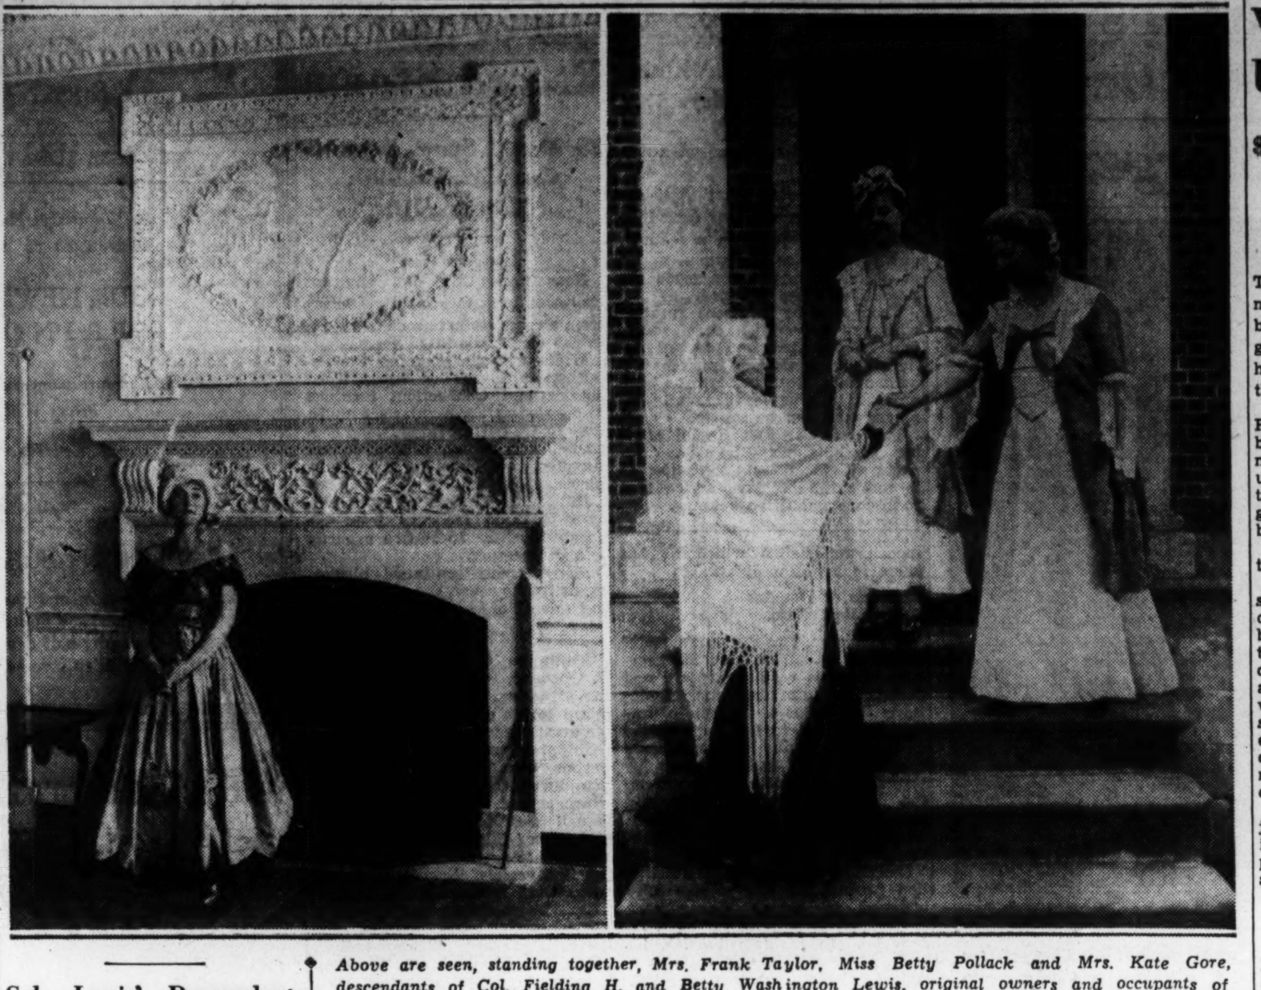
Shenandoah CWA to Cut Pay.

New Market, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). At a meeting of Shenandoah County's CWA advisory board yesterday it was disclosed that a drastic cut in wages is planned for the county.

A tentative wage scale, submitted to Richmond, as drawn by the board calls for the payment of 30 cents per hour to unskilled labor, 45 cents for apprentice labor and a maximum of 60 cents for skilled labor. The scale was adopted after a study of wages being paid by private concerns, and is expected to become effective March 2.

Shenandoah's pay roll already has dropped from about $6,500 to $2,350, which was paid to workers last week. The employment roll has dropped from 700 to 335.

Washington Celebration at Kenmore Today



Above are seen, standing together, Mrs. Frank Taylor, Miss Betty Pollack and Mrs. Kate Gore, descendants of Col. Fielding H. and Betty Washington Lewis, original owners and occupants of Kenmore Mansion at Fredericksburg, Va., where George Washington's 202d birthday anniversary will be celebrated today by the Kenmore Association. The trio will participate in the celebration. They are standing on the back porch of the restored colonial home. Betty Washington Lewis was George Washington's sister. In the other picture is seen Miss Fanny Washington, great-great-niece of George Washington, standing in front of the mantelpiece in the great room at Kenmore. The overmantel, designed by George Washington and constructed by Hessian prisoners captured at the Battle of Trenton, represents morals based on ancient myths, for the education of the children of Col. Lewis.

Col. Lewis' Descendants Will Pour Tea in Historic Home.

Shrine Expected to Draw Many to Scenes of Early Life.

By Herbert Baus.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). At Kenmore, home of Col. Fielding H. and Betty Washington Lewis, for the construction of which Washington in 1752 did the preliminary surveying work, the women of the Kenmore Association tomorrow will hold open house at a celebration commemorating the birthday of Fredericksburg's first son, George Washington.

The celebration also will commemorate the return to Kenmore after more than a century's absence of a silver triple urn of Col. and Mrs. Lewis. An object very rare in this country, the urn is of Sheffield ware comprising three separate samovars, one each for tea, coffee and hot water, grouped symmetrically on a three-tiered silver tray.

After 1796, when Betty Washington Lewis sacrificed her home to liquidate debts contracted by her husband in manufacturing cannon for American use in the Revolutionary War, the samovar is thought to have accompanied Lewis' descendents to Kentucky, and thence to New Orleans, where it was purchased by Mrs. Kate M. Hofstra, of Long Island, who would not part with it during life but was persuaded by Mrs. John Noble Sterns, of New York City, and Mrs. H. H. Smith, of Fredericksburg, of the propriety of its eventual return to Kenmore.

In the will of Mrs. Hofstra it was bequeathed to the Kenmore Association, a Nation-wide organization of women that purchased the mansion and is maintaining it as a historic shrine, after having restored it to its original Colonal state.

At the reception tomorrow, tea will be served to the several hundred expected guests in the Great Room of Kenmore by four descendants of the Lewises—Mrs. Frank Taylor, Mrs. Stella Dickinson, Mrs. Carter Grimes and Miss Ellen Knox, all of this city.

No Rites in City.

No official celebration of Washington's anniversary this year is planned in Fredericksburg, characterized by the first President as "the place of my growing infancy," and his home from where in 1738, when he was 3 years old, his family moved to Ferry Farm, across the Rappahannock River from the city, until when in 1755, having been educated here, he established his estate at Mount Vernon.

In addition to the program in his honor at Kenmore, the Daughters of the American Revolution invite the public to hear Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, who will speak at 2:30 p. m. in the Stratford Hotel on "Washington and Present-Day World Affairs."

In the first of a series of weekly broadcasts in which "The Voice of Fredericksourg" will make known to radio listeners the history, traditions, and opportunities of "America's most historic city," an observance will be made of the birth anniversary of George Washington, regarding whom interesting incidents not generally known will be told.

Particularly stressed will be the first President's connection with the horse chestnut tree on Fauquier street, the only one of the 13 trees planted by Gen Washington for the 13 original colonies.

Birthplace Celebrates.

Wakefield, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Commemorating the birth of the Nation's first President here, two centuries and two years ago, authorities of the George Washington Birthplace National Monument plan an all-day celebration beginning at 10 a. m., with a tour of the places of historic interest here connected with early anecdotes of the Washington family.

The house restored by the Wakefield Memorial Association more than two years ago to resemble as closely as possible the early Virginia home in which Washington was born in 1732 will be open to visitors free of charge. Officials indicate the possibility of the presence of the Governor of Virginia and a Roosevelt Cabinet member to address guests in the afternoon.

Greeks to Dance.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The birthday anniversary of George Washington will be commemorated here today at a banquet and dance by the American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association. More than 500 are expected.

300 to Attend Valley Session Of Endeavor

Western District's 2-Day Convention Opens Saturday.

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—More than 300 members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Western District of Virginia are expected to attend the annual convention in Woodstock Christian Church Saturday and Sunday.

The convention will open Saturday night with the fellowship banquet. Following the banquet, the Rev. A. R. Van Cleave, of the Congregational-Christian Church, Winchester, will speak.

The Sunday afternoon program will be featured by the drama, "Adventuring With Christ." Following the program, the Rev. H. M. Crim, of Strasburg, will conduct conferences on parliamentary law, meeting for the young people's societies, intermediates and their work, and juniors and their work.

Others who will take part in the conferences are Miss Phyllis Brown, State president, Richmond; Miss Annie Myers, State intermediate superintendent, Richmond, and W. Roy Bregg, Washington, Southern secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

Sunday evening's program will conclude the convention. Miss Elizabeth Knight, Richmond, State secretary, will conduct a pledge service; "The Chanters," a musical organization of 40 young people from Winchester, will be heard in vocal selections, and Mr. Bregg will talk.

Others who will participate include W. B. Williams, of Newport News, State vice president; C. E. Barfield and W. H. Baker, Newport News, and Henry Huband, Richmond.

Legislative Contracts Urged.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Judge J. L. Almond, jr., believes that ministers could have more influence with legislators by establishing personal contacts rather than by passing "bombastic resolutions," but that lobbying by any group, "whether it be a corporation or a church body," is a bad practice.

The judge's opinion was given at a meeting of the Roanoke Ministers' Conference. Ministers, he said, are assured of a courteous reception when calling upon their representative in legislative bodies, and he urged them to try to enlist the support of the legislator rather than simply "to demand such support."

Measles Isolate 130 Homes in Petersburg

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Approximately 130 homes here are quarantined for measles, city health center reports.

County Board Helps Covington Playground

Covington, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). The Alleghany supervisors have appropriated $300 toward purchase of property to be used as a free playground for children.

The local American Legion post, sponsoring the project, holds an option on the property.

Rush Back

Firemen Leave Meeting, Return for Blaze.

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Councilman Walter G. Ellison saw too much of the Waynesboro firemen yesterday.

During the entire afternoon he was present at a session of a council committee meeting with representatives of the fire department at his home to discuss purchase of new fire equipment. Just a few minutes after the meeting was adjourned the firemen answered an alarm sent in from the Ellison home.

They arrived quickly and the damage was slight.

Virginia House Speeds Report On Budget Bill

Delegates Wait 82 Million Measure With Cuts in Mind.

Richmond, Feb. 21 (AP).—The House appropriations committee tonight was working on the $82,000,000 Virginia budget bill for the next biennium, with the hope of reporting the measure this week.

Linked with the measure is some of the most important legislation of the session.

Meanwhile, the House schools and colleges committee reported favorably the Senate Norris resolution calling upon the State Board of Education to rearrange the public school divisions of the State to cut the number of division superintendents in half.

Proponents of the resolution contend that this move would pave the way toward reducing the division superintendence item more than $150,000.

Approved by Governor.

The resolution was introduced by Senator R. O. Norris, of Lancaster, chairman of the Senate economy committee. It received the approval of both Gov. Peery and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Sidney B. Hall, and passed the Senate unanimously.

One million six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars is anticipated from liquor profits under the alcoholic beverages control bill which has passed both Houses, and which will be called up in the House tomorrow for concurrence in Senate amendments.

Many members of the Assembly contend that the far-reaching economies can be effected in the budget. The subject of economy has been pressed forcefully during the current session, and it has been with economies in mind that many members have spoken frequently on county consolidations.

This matter was discussed at length today in the House committee on courts of justice during a discussion of the boxing resolution for a constitutional amendment providing only one Commonwealth's attorney for each judicial district.

Tax on Doctors Reported.

The Stephens-Hodges bill, placing a license tax on doctors, was reported by the House finance committee.

The doctor's tax bill, putting the same tax on doctors now imposed on dentists, was reported by the closest of margins after two public hearings. Dr. Warren F. Draper, State health commissioner, read a long list of methods by which doctors cooperated with the State without compensation. Delegate A. E. S. Stephens, of Isle of Wight, one of the authors of the bill, said the law required them to perform most of the duties and that diseases were increasing in the State until the health department was set up.

Dr. Wright Clarkson, of Petersburg, said doctors had done more than $10,000,000 of charity work in Virginia last year.

Dr. John A. Gibson, of Leesburg, and Dr. G. F. Simpson, of Purcellville, appeared in opposition to the bill.

The tax would be $10 on doctors who had practiced less than five years, and $15 in small towns and counties and $25 in towns and cities of over $5,000 population.

69 Park Claims Are Arbitrated In 4 Counties

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Establishment of a National park within an easy automobile ride of Richmond and Washington, was brought within two months of reality today when final adjustment of all prices within the Kelsey boundary of the Shenandoah National Park, with the exception of one tract, was made by the board of arbiters for land in the counties of Rockingham, Page, Warren and Rappahannock.

The board heard 69 claims today, for which its awards totaled $127,721. The aggregate valuation of 83 tracts which have been considered by the board is $148,637. The board consists of Judges Philip Williams, Winchester; J. R. H. Alexander, Leesburg, and H. W. Bertram, Harrisonburg.

Miller Claim Open.

The only unsettled case involves the Miller tract in Warren and Rappahannock Counties, of 6,600 acres.

The board of appraisals fixed the value of this land and timber at $22,000. Owners of the timber rights, W. H. Grannis, of Baltimore, ask $200,000. The Miller heirs ask around $50,000 for the land. Briefs in this case were filed, and a decision is expected within a week.

Much work remains to complete transfer to the Federal Government, but it is expected that details will be worked out within 60 days, and the park dedicated in May.

The findings of the board of arbiters are binding under the agreement between the land owners and the Virginia Conservation commission. The plan to arbitrate disputed valuations was suggested by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, who has urged the early transfer of the Blue Ridge Mountain area to the Federal Government so the park can be established and the Skyline Parkway between this park and the Great Smoky National Park in North Carolina and Tennessee can be pushed.

Prices Cut Sharply.

The findings handed down today fixed $37,554 as the price to be paid for Panorama Resort in Thorton Gap. Three times this amount was asked by the owners. The arbiters also fixed $2,331.50 for the Mace tract in Rockingham County. Owners had asked $50,000. The Overall heirs were given $6,979.50 for their land and mineral holdings They asked around $50,000.

When the arbiters' reports are filed in the circuit courts of the eight counties, formal steps for condemnation will be asked by the Virginia Conservation Commission. Details for the transfer of the 172,000 acres to the Government then will be worked in conjunction with Director A. B. Camerer, of the National Park Service, and William M. Carson, of the Virginia Conservation Commission.

Miss Alvernon Cross, Pioneer, Laid to Rest

200 Will Get Work at U. Va. Under U. S. Aid

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Two hundred jobs, paying $15 a month for part time work, have been opened to University of Virginia students facing the prospect of having their education cut short through lack of funds.

Through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration $3,435 has been appropriated to the university monthly. Three-fourths will be used for men and women now in the university, while the rest will go toward enabling some who have been forced to withdraw to return.

Many of the needy students went to work today.

Charles H. Kauffmann, director of student employment, has worked out a schedule of jobs that will benefit not only the students but the university as well. In many cases the workers will be closely associated with faculty members in whose courses they have been specializing. Other men will be engaged in library work, in the care and repair of laboratory equipment, in construction work, and in other activities.

Graduate students have been given jobs as laboratory workers in chemistry, physics, histology, anatomy, pathology, physiology, biochemistry and engineering.

Additional Funds Sought.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Frank W. Bailey, civil works administrator for Winchester, stated today that three new applications for additional money to complete CWA projects here would be filed immediately with the State officials.

Application will be made for additional funds to complete the new city approaches via Berryville and Millwood avenues and for completion of a sewer construction project.

Relief Appeals Double.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Apparently the busiest person in Loudoun County this month has been Mrs. Blanche M. Melvin, welfare worker. The number of calls for help have been double those of last month. Two hundred families have appealed for aid from the Federal emergency relief through Mrs. Melvin since January 6.

Funds received in the county since that time amount to $6,000. Food, clothing and medicine are called for daily. Brooms, a household luxury, have delighted many unfortunate housewives.

CWA Work Near Halt.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—CWA work is practically at a standstill in Lexington and Rockbridge County. Funds for the local high school lake and stadium project have run out and the work is unfinished. Resurfacing of town streets is about done.

Sewing rooms for unemployed women are still operating throughout the county. The laying of water mains is furnishing employment to a few men.

Petersburg Forces Cut.

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Petersburg's CWA forces were cut to 270 men yesterday, when an additional 70 were laid off. CWA officials here are hoping the lay-offs will be temporary.

CWA to Give Danville Library.

Danville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Pittsylvania County will obtain a new library through the CWA.

An allocation of $10,000 has been made for the building. The county supervisors, after refusing to permit erection of the structure on the Courthouse square, have authorized the addition of a wing to the county office building, where the library will be housed.

Sterilization Bill To Virginia House

Bitter Fight Predicted on Floor of Assembly.

Richmond, Feb. 21 (Spl.).—A bitter Assembly fight was foreshadowed today when the House prisons and asylums committee voted, 9 to 4, to favorably report a sterilization bill.

Delegate Samuel D. Rogers, Petersburg, committee chairman, announced he would seek to kill the measure on the floor.

Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, Staunton, the author, explained the proposal would permit sterilization of mentally deranged without their confinement in institutions. He said the bill would prohibit unjustified operations.

Richmond Tonight Scout Rally Scene

40 Get Roosevelt Banner at Area Gathering.

Not one of the 70 registered troops in the area was disbanded during the past year, while 1,623 registered Scouts and 550 registered active adult Scout leaders participated in the movement here during 1933.

Senate Votes Full Pay Cut Back July 1

Plan Carries 41 to 40, Still Faces Fight in House.

Several Senators were paired on the vote as follows: For the McCarren amendment, Senators McGill and Wheeler (Democrats), Reed, Walcott, Cutting, Patterson (Republicans); against the amendment, Senators King, Thompson (Democrats), Norbeck and Norris (Republicans). Senators who were paired, but whose position was not announced, were McAdoo and Wagner (Democrats) and Hastings (Republican) and Lewis (Democrat). No announcement was made of the position of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri.

Promotions Approved.

Several other amendments were voted by the Senate. Administrative promotions were approved by adoption of an amendment offered by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming. This means that when a Government employe is promoted in work the employe will be paid commensurately increased pay.

The so-called "pay freeze" affecting the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, the District Police and Fire Departments and school teachers was eliminated. This was agreed to in the Appropriations Committee. It was approved without a record vote.

An effort by Senator Copeland, of New York, and Senator Trammell, of Florida (Democrats), to have this section amended to provide for longevity pay was beaten without a record vote.

Senator Hatfield (Republican), of West Virginia, who has long been an advocate of Government pay restoration, lost a fight to increase the subsistence pay for postal clerks from $2 to $3 a day. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, opposed this as he did other amendments.

Opposed by Byrnes.

Wage scales as fixed by wage boards in 1932, affecting employes in navy yards, arsenals, the Panama Canal Zone, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Government Printing Office were made effective by an amendment proposed by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma. The Thomas amendment also provided that the work week in such Government establishments should be 40 hours and that time and a half should be paid for overtime work.

Senator Byrnes opposed the Thomas amendment on the ground that the general pay restoration provision of the bill applied to these Government workers. Senator Byrnes said he couldn't see the effect of the amendment. Senator Thomas said he could and it was adopted without a record vote.

A proposal by Senator Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa, to repeal all of the economy law provisions was defeated 40 to 38. All of those voting against the Dickinson amendment were Democrats.

The measure was thrown open to amendments increasing benefits to veterans on motion of Senator Byrnes. This was in accord with the committee agreement. Senator Byrnes proposed that the rule be suspended to permit consideration of veterans legislation. Inasmuch as the bill carried no legislation for veterans, amendments increasing benefits for them otherwise would have been out of order.

There was no voting on this subject, however. Immediately the first amendment had been read by the clerk, Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, launched into a bitter denunciation of approval by the Senate of large appropriations.

Senator Tydings pointed to the prospective Government debt of $32,000,000,000, and said that such an enormous debt, on a reasonable sinking fund basis plus interest, would cost the taxpayers of the Nation $1,600,000,000 if the debt were amortized over half a century.

"It strikes me that no one is thinking of the day when we are going to foist this tremendous debt on the backs of the taxpayers," the Senator said. "You are going to force a situation where a sales tax is as inevitable as the rising of the sun."

Debates With McCarran.

Senator McCarran took the Marylander to task for his denunciation of Government employes. Studies by the Department of Labor, Senator McCarran said, had put the Government on record as saying that $1,500 a year was the absolute minimum on which a family could be maintained with the minimum of food, clothes and other necessities.

Senator Tyding insisted restoration of Government salaries, together with proposals for increased benefits for veterans, would result in delaying recovery.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, during the debate on salaries suggested the salaries of the Vice President and the Speaker be exempted from the restoration. He did not offer an amendment to do this, however, and the question was not brought to issue.

Debate on the measure will be resumed today with the first veterans' amendment pending. This would return to the rolls of the Veterans Administration veterans who have been cut off from benefits, but whose disabilities are presumed to have had connection with the war service. Under the amendment these "presumptives" would continue to get 75 per cent of the compensation they were getting before they were lopped off by the economy act, pending final determination of their cases by the appeals board. Free hospitalization for needy veterans also is provided for in the amendment.

Eight Marylanders Named As Lynchers Before Senate

ner-Costigan bill. There also appeared two avowed Communists, James W. Ford, Negro candidate for vice president of the Communist party, and Bernard Ades, Baltimore lawyer, who served as counsel recently for colored persons charged with serious crimes in that State.

Both were ordered from the witness stand by Senator Van Nuys when they persisted in making speeches, containing what the chairman called "Communist propaganda," instead of discussing the bill. Ades assailed the Ritchie administration in Maryland and charged the committee with protecting it.

Recites Names on Stand.

Lane was on the witness stand a good part of the day: Much of his testimony was a recital of what happened in Maryland after the Princess Anne lynching. He laid before the committee copies of all correspondence, reports and documents bearing on the lynching and his investigation of it.

He read to the committee a "resume" of the evidence against the alleged lynchers, who he named as Shelburn Lester, a public utility employe in Salisbury, Md.; "Big Boy" Smith, a Salisbury prize fighter; William P. Hearn, a Salisbury truck contractor; Irving Adkins, a railroad track foreman living near Princess Anne; William H. Thompson, of Princess Anne; Jack Walloper, of Crisfield, Md.; Martin Duer, of Worcester County and Rusty Heath, former Salisbury jailer, living at Princess Anne.

Lane explained that his original investigation implicated a ninth man, but further inquiry had revealed that the State officers had the man's name wrong. He had not since been identified.

Of the eight named, Hearn, Adkins and Thompson were arrested by State troops. The fourth man arrested was William S. McQuay, but his name was not contained in the "resume" presented by the attorney general. Lane also laid before the committee the affidavits made by the State policemen, from which the "resume" was drafted.

The affidavit of Patrolman C. B. Durham, in addition to identifying "positively" "Big Boy" Smith and Rusty Heath as being in the lynch mob, also named Ralph Powell. This latter name was not in the attorney general's resume.

Served on the Coroner's Jury.

Lane told the committee Thompson served on the coroner's jury selected to pass on the death of the lynched colored man. In the resume he was described during the lynching as being "in front of the jail pushing against the police line, yelling to the crowd to get a pole and had hold of the ram when it crashed the jail door."

Hearn was "positively identified" by several of the 24 State police officers guarding the Princess Anne Jail. In their affidavits, as summarized by Lane, he was said to have been seen "shoving, yelling and pushing in front of the jail and attempting to get on the steps and shoving the policemen off." Lane said it was possible he was the "man who threw the rope over the tree at the first hanging." Armwood was hanged twice.

Adkins was described as leading the crowd to the jail, yelling "Follow me, they won't shoot." The officers believed he had hold of the battering ram. The report on the alleged part played by Walloper, also known as Jack or Jackson Sterling, stated:

"Officer Wheeler has known him for some time and positively identified him as pulling on the rope at the second hanging."

He also was said to have been present at the jail delivery and the scene of the first hanging.

Seen With Brick in Hand.

Officer Durham identified "Big Boy" Smith, having seen him fight at boxing matches. The accused man is registered under this name with the State Athletic Commission, Lane said. Smith was said to have been "in the front of the crowd at the jail, pushing on the police line" and later to have been seen "by the side of the jail with a brick in his hand which he refused to drop at the command of Officer Bohler."

Marby L. Heath, the former Salisbury jailer, who also is known as "Rusty," was "positively identified" as present at the lynching by nine of the State police who said they knew him well. He was described as "drunk, in the front of the crowd, shoving, yelling and encouraging the crowd, while in front of the jail he was shoving to get on the steps, and while at the first hanging, had the rope in his hand as the Negro's body was lying on the ground."

"He also was seen pulling on the other end of the rope while the Negro was hanged," Lane added.

The report on Duer stated that "a boy giving his name as Martin Duer can be identified at the first hanging with the rope in his hand while the Negro's body was on the ground by Lieut. Ridgley, Sergt. Weber, Officers Schleuter, Langrall, Kuhn and possibly Corpl. Wheeler (State Police)" and that "by Officer Schleuter, was seen pulling the rope."

Seen With Bandage.

Officer J. M. Bradley, in his affidavit, said he saw another officer strike Leslie over the head with a stick as the man tried to get to the jail. Several days later, the officer swore, he saw Lester in Salisbury with a bandage on his head.

The Rev. Asbury Smith, of Baltimore, told the committee that lynching is generally approved of on the Eastern Shore and that it was impossible to get local action. He approved provisions of the Wagner-Costigan bill which would penalize counties where lynchings occur and officers failing to do their duty.

Other witnesses heard were Samuel H. Calvert, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ; Elmer A. Carter, of the National Urban League; Miss Juanita E. Jackson, of the Young People's Forum of Baltimore; John Knox, chaplain of Fisk University, and Louis Azrael, associate editor of the Baltimore Post.

New Mayor at Bristol.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Dr. W. R. Rogers, prominent physician, yesterday assumed his duties as Mayor of Bristol, Va. He was elected Monday by the city council.

Concurrently, C. L. Kidd was elected to the council to succeed Walter H. Robertson, who resigned to accept the judgeship of the Twenty-third Virginia Judicial Circuit.

Kidd's election as a member of council preceded taht of Dr. Rogers as mayor, and broke a deadlock existing since retirement of Robertson.

Pennsy Train Wrecked Near Sudlersville, Md.

Drifted snow was believed to have caused the wreck. The engine, baggage car and the passenger coach overturned.

Explorer Reports Safe Passage of Magellan

Portland, Oreg. Feb. 31 (AP). Amos Burg, Portland explorer, has sailed his 26-foot, rebuilt yacht safely through the treacherous Straights of Magellan, his parents here have been informed.

Burg is on a trip for the National Geographic Society of Washington, D. C., and is now in Tierra del Fuego, Argentina, where he plans to study the customs, language and daily life of little-civilized Indians.

Columbus a 'Brave, Big Man With Freckles,' Old Book Says

Christopher Columbus was a "brave, big man with a long, red, freckled face," according to a "human interest story" about the discoverer, published in 1534.

The story of Columbus—in one of the first printed accounts of his voyages—has just been brought to light at the Smithsonian Institution, where a volume of "The New World," by Michael Herr, was found in its collection of old scientific literature.

Herr's book, which was published in Strassburg, describes Columbus' personal appearance and relates difficulties he had in persuading the King and Queen of Spain to finance his voyage.

Here is how Herr tells of Columbus' desire to sail westward:

"He had good hopes that he could discover before sundown several islands which would be of great pleasure and use to the people. With regard to those islands that lay in front of India, he himself expected to find costly pearls and all sorts of precious stones; also spices and much gold.

"The King and Queen made fun of him as a man who was engaged in a foolish task and let the thing go as a good joke. At last, after eight years had gone by and Christopher continued to beseech the King, the King began to take the proposition a little more to heart and undertook to find out what was back of that man and why he stuck to his proposition.

"Then the King commanded that a galley be outfitted, and he also supplied two swift ships with provisions and whatever else was necessary. When these ships were ready, Columbus sailed from the Spanish coast on the first day of the autumn month, in the year after the birth of Christ, 1492, and thus went on his long-desired journey."

Two Pageants For St. Marys Slated in June

Replicas of Colonial Days on Bank and Water Being Planned.

By Marion Butler.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 21—Plans for a pageant, reenacting the historic landing of the Ark and Dove at St. Marys City three centuries ago, are being outlined by the State Tercentenary Commission and members of the St. Marys County Tercentenary Committee.

The pageant, to be held on the banks of St. Marys River in June, will depict in detail important events in the history of Maryland's first colonists from their purchase of the site of St. Marys City from the Indians on March 27, 1634, to the removal of the capital to Annapolis in 1695.

Mrs. Catherine Coontz, well-known pageant writer of Washington, has been commissioned to write the script of the pageant.

Pageant Also on River.

Under direction of Swepson Earle, Maryland Conservation commissioner, a water pageant probably will be held on the river. Two vessels, modeled after Leonard Calvert's Ark and Dove, will sail up St. Marys River to the original landing place. They will be manned by a crew in seventeenth century sailor garb and will carry "seventy gentlemen" passengers as the first ships did. Disembarking at the original landing spot, if present suggestions are carried out, they may be met by a tribe of real Indians, representing the natives who inhabited the Indian village which then occupied these shores.

On the day of the pageant, Mr. Earle is expecting to have 500 boats, many of which will be private yachts, anchored in the waters around St. Marys City.

Housing Is Problem.

A serious problem facing tercentenary committeemen is the housing problem on the day of the pageant. Fifty thousand are expected. And President Roosevelt may attend. Offers of Maryland troops to care for the crowds are being considered, since the soldiers could camp out in the fields without adding to the housing problem.

With all plans for this celebration as yet tentative, frequent meetings of the committees are being held. A tour of inspection to ascertain the best location for the land pageant was conducted this past week-end by the following tercentenary workers: Allan Coad, Swepson Earle, Lee Ward, R. Bennett Darnall and Mrs. Catherine Coontz.

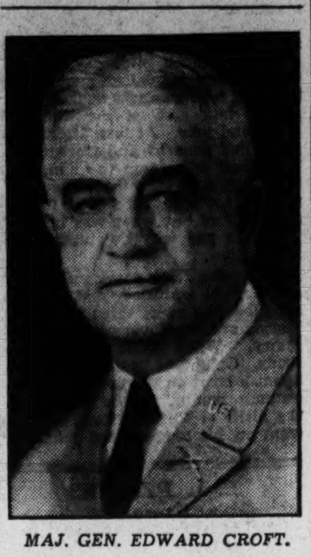
High Army Officers to Be Guests At Massanutten Military Ball

Massing of School Colors Will Feature Annual Event Saturday.

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Massing the colors of Augusta Military Academy, Staunton Military Academy and Massanutten will be a feature of the annual military ball of Massanutten Military Academy here Saturday night.

The colors ceremony will be in honor of Maj. Gen. Edward Croft, Chief of Infantry, United States Army; Col. Phillipson, director of the Army budget, and a number of officers from the War College, Washington, who will be distinguished guests of the ball.

The military ball is one of the annual features of Massanutten centering around Washington's birthday. Several hundred are expected to return for the ball and the annual debates and declamatory contests which will be held Friday evening.



MAJ. GEN. EDWARD CROFT.

Jefferson and Poe literary societies will debate the question, "Resolved, That the United States Government Should Cancel All World War Debts." The Poe society will take the affirmative with Cadets Kenefick, Short and Waldbauer, with Cadet Taff as alternate. The Jefferson team taking the negative side will include Cadets Ambrosini, Rand and Hopkins, with Cadet McKiernan as alternate. Each society will offer a declamation between the main speeches and rebuttals.

Expert

Boy, 12, Knows 'Still' Art, But Corn Trips Him.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—A 12-year-old orphan boy bought a pint of liquor for 50 cents, drank it, and landed in the local jail.

That was his story in Police Court yesterday morning. The charge of drunkenness was disposed of by turning him over to an older brother for correction.

The boy had more than $10 at the time of his arrest, and insisted on paying his fine and being released, but officers decided to hold him for the police justice.

Meanwhile, he told his captors how to make liquor. Worm, cap, thumpin' keg—all the parts of a still were explained in detail. He knew the ingredients, and how much of each was to be used.

Berkeley Union Would Vacate Many Schools

County Board Approves Consolidation in Two Areas.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Construction of consolidated elementary schools in Back Creek Valley and in the Nollville section of Berkeley County was recommended by the county board of education today.

The two schools would mean merging of present rural schools in these areas. They would cost $34,000 each.

The action followed receipt of a telegram from State Superintendent W. W. Trent, who indicated that CWA funds for this purpose might become available within the next few months. He requested the various county boards to survey their individual needs in the meantime, and to report to the State department.

There are now 37 rural schools for white children in the county and 5 for colored, a total of 42. By the two consolidations this number would be reduced to 27.

The projected consolidations will not mean reduced teaching personnel. It will, however, in centralizing educational points, make for greater efficiency because of the presence of increased teaching facilities, school authorities feel.

Members of the profession who have agreed to cooperate in the association are F. L. Bushong, Lee Bushong, jr., J. M. Mason, jr., George P. Shirley, John C. Skinner, Forrest A. Brown, George M. Beltzhoover, jr., T. C. Green, Henry C. Getzendanner, H. V. Sheetz, John T. Porterfield, Frank J. Beckwith, B. O. Gibson and T. L. Jeffords.

The initial meeting will be held Monday night in the county courthouse.

Judge Removes $25,000 Damage Suit From Jury

Westminster, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). A $25,000 damage suit filed against the Western Maryland Railroad by Melvin L. Witti was tried before the Carroll County Circuit Court yesterday.

At the close of testimony, a plea by counsel for the railroad, to take the case from the jury on the grounds that the plaintiff offered no evidence legally sufficient to entitle recovery of damages, was granted by Chief Judge Francis Neal Parke.

Charles Town Seniors Plan Frolic Tonight

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Funds for publication of The Rambler, high school year book, will be raised tomorrow at a benefit "Night Club" entertainment sponsored by the senior class.

Virginia Phone Head Accused Of Girl Attack

Clifton Forge Manager Named by Brother of Child, 13.

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Newton C. Coiner, local manager of the Clifton Forge-Waynesboro Telephone Co., was arrested today on a charge of criminally assaulting a 13-year-old girl. The warrant was signed by the girl's brother.

A few hours after his arrest, Coiner was released by Judge A. C. Kimler, of city court, on $1,000 bond, but later John D. White, Commonwealth's attorney, demanded the bond be placed at $5,000 and Judge Kimler acceded. Coiner's attorneys were arranging this larger bond. Coiner can have a preliminary hearing if he asks, but no such request had been made today. The grand jury meets Monday in Staunton and it is though likely the matter may be taken directly before this body.

Conviction on the charge carries the death penalty of a maximum of life in prison.

Preliminary hearing on a manslaughter charge against Nelson Lawhorn, of Nelson County, is scheduled for Magistrate P. K. Kidd's court at Lovingston tomorrow.

Lawhorn was arrested January 28 following a truck accident in which Everett Woodson was killed. He was charged with operating a car while under the influence of liquor. Lawhorn has been out on bond.

Boy Slayer Gets Year.

Salem, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—Karl Herndon, 15, of Starkey, was found guilty of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of Roy Huddleston, 26, his sister's sweetheart, on December 20 following a quarrel over two cigarettes, and was sentenced to a year in the State penitentiary by Judge Thruston L. Keister in Roanoke County Circuit Court today.

Evidence disclosed that the shooting followed a quarrel between Karl and his sister, Alene, on his refusal to give Huddleston a cigarette, while Huddleston was a visitor at her home. Herndon claimed that Huddleston had choked him before the shot was fired.

Spellers of Two Churches Plan Bee

Episcopalians Pick Teams at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Members of St. Paul's and Christ Churches here are planning a spelling bee to determine the best speller among the city's Episcopalians.

Forty members of St. Paul's will hold a contest in the parish house Monday to select a team of 10 to vie with a team of 10 from Christ Church.

A team of 20 men of St. Paul's, led by Capt. Walter A. Montgomery, will spell against 20 women captained by Mrs. James Southall Wilson, wife of the professor of English at the university. The words will be given out by Jack Manahan, a member of the University Boy Scout troop. The St. Paul's team will be composed of five men and five women.

2 Hurt in Auto Crash On Mt. Vernon Highway

Two persons were injured yesterday when the auto in which they were riding collided wiht a signal post at Memorial Circle, on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway near Alexandria.

William Ruby, the driver, and William Thorp, both of Alexandria, were treated at Alexandria Hospital for lacerations, bruises and shock.

Montana on Guard For Floyd, Barrow

Butte, Mont., Feb. 21 (AP)—Montana officers watched today for Clyde Barrow and Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, notorious outlaws, reported to be heading into the State from Wyoming.

Department of Justice agents here received word from Thermopolis, Wyo., officers that a car with two men, both heavily armed and resembling the desperadoes, sped through the Wyoming city yesterday headed north.

Carmen Get Wage Raise.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 21 (AP).—An arbitration board, named to decide a controversy between the Street Car Men's Union and the Cleveland Railway Co. today granted an increase of 8 cents an hour in the pay of the car employes. Nearly 3,000 men will be affected.

Ousted Park Dwellers May Go To Subsistence Homesteads

Survey Is Being Made to Provide Plots for Those Evacuated.

Luray, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—Subsistence homesteads just outside the park area may solve the problem of caring for some 2,750 people located within the Kelsey line who will be required to move when the Shenandoah National Park is turned over to the Federal Government.

Conferences with persons within the area already have begun. Letters have been sent by William Smith, State civil works administrator, to deputy administrators at Staunton, Charlottesville and Fredericksburg and to local administrators of Warren, Page, Rockingham, Augusta, Albemarle, Greene, Madison and Rappahannock Counties asking their cooperation.

Smith said the State organization approved a proposed "Shenandoah Park Evacuation and Subsistence Homestead Survey." L. Ferdinand Zerkel, of Luray, will supervise the work. His selection as director was made by a committee composed of B. L. Hummel, sociologist, rural organization, Blacksburg; Arthur W. James, commissioner of public welfare; Mr. Smith and E. Richardson, field representative of the Federal subsistence homesteads division of the Department of the Interior.

William E. Carson, chairman of the State Conservation and Development Commission, recommended Mr. Zerkel as "the best qualified man in Virginia for the project."

Three Churches Benefit In Will of T. L. Shirley

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Three churches are named in the will of T. Lee Shirley.

Mr. Shirley bequeathed $500 each to the Grace Episcopal Church and the Methodist Church of Middleway, and $1,000 to Zion Episcopal Church of Charles Town.

Code Violation Penalty Voted In W. Virginia

Fine Provided by Model Bill Sent to Governor; School Pay Extended.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Without debate, the State Senate today sent to Gov. H. G. Kump the bill passed by the House of Delegates last week doubling the present four-months' State guarantee of teachers' salaries. An appropriation of about $5,000,000 will be required for this purpose.

The House took final approving action on the model bill, recommended by the National NRA, in which the power of the State is placed behind the code enforcement. This measure also was sent to the governor. It makes violation of any NRA code a misdemeanor and imposes a fine of not more than $500

Both houses voted to have conference committees adjust differences over the congressional redistricting and the municipal power plant bills.

Agent Bill Held Up.

The Senate also was informed that a conference committee on the county farm agent bill was unable to agree, and appointment of a new conference committee was requested.

The two branches are far apart over the redistricting measure and doubts of any agreement were expressed today. Contention over the power bills centers in amendments attached in the Senate, which advocates say are fatal. The split on the farm agents is over who shall pay their salaries, the Senate wanting them paid from Federal and State funds, and the House favors Federal and county funds.

The Senate passed a bill placing the Potomac State School at Keyser under jurisdiction of the board of governors of West Virginia University. It is now directed by the State board of education.

Age Pension Backed.

A hundred elderly persons from over the State appeared before the Senate finance committee and urged passage of the Smith old-age dollar-a-day pension bill as a means of removing the stigma of the almshouse and giving more efficient relief. Jim Clendenin, Huntington newspaper editor, and Senator Earl H. Smith (Democrat), Marion, author of the bill, also urged its enactment. Placing the average cost of almshouse inmates at $425 a year, Clendenin declared the Smith bill would effect a substantial saving in the cost of caring for the destitute aged.

The committee today reported favorably a bill to increase the appropriation for the State Public Service Commission from $60,000 to $150,000 annually. Funds for the purpose are provided by a tax on utilities.

West Virginia Gasoline Holdup Nets 75 Cents

The robber bound and gagged Noland after threatening him with a revolver. He took 75 cents from his victim's pocket. Noland was released by Miss Jane Noland, a high school student on her way to school.

Island Is Offered U. S. for $500,000

Government May Obtain It by Condemnation.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Mrs. Louise J. Barney, of Dayton, Ohio, today offered to sell Jamestown Island to the Government for $500,000. The offer was made in an answer filed to condemnation proceedings brought by the Government in Federal court to oobtain possession of the island.

The Government for several years has been dickering with Mrs. Barney for the purchase of 1,500 acres she owns at Jamestown, which constitutes practically the entire island, except for a small tract owned by the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. The original price asked by Mrs. Barney was approximately $2,000,000.

The condemnation case is set for hearing early next month. The Government plans to add the land to the Colonial National Monument area.

St. Martin's Holy Name Society Elects Officers

Roland Joseph Hyland was elected president of the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's Church at a meeting of the organization in the parish school last night. Other officers elected are Matthew A. Welsh, vice president; H. K. Murphy, treasurer; Robert O'Leary, secretary, and John Hardy, marshal.

Canadian Rum Gains.

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (AP).—Canada shipped $4,100,000 worth of liquor, chiefly to the United States last month, says the Bureau of Statistics. This was $3,000,000 more than for the same month a year ago.

Airplane Rescues Maryland CWA Aid and His Secretary

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 21.—Harry S. Greenstein, State civil works administrator and Federal emergency relief administrator for Maryland, and his assistant, Miss Helen M. Weir, of Baltimore, marooned at the village of Massey, 15 miles north of here since Monday night by snow drifts, this afternoon telephoned for an airplane from the Easton Airport, which landed in a field and took off safely with two relief workers aboard. The plane landed at Easton 30 minutes later.

A road plow sent from Baltimore today bored into a huge drift between Elkton and Chesapeake Bay and discovered three large trucks buried in the snow and blocking the plow's path.

It is believed the highway between here and Elkton will be opened by tomorrow.

Snow plows have failed thus far to open up drifts of from 6 to 10 feet in Eastern Shore highways to the north and south in Kent County, and all motor traffic was paralyzed tonight.

However, trains from Centerville and Chestertown to Townsend, Delaware and Wilmington moved today after auxiliary engines from Wilmington cleared the tracks. Many automobile smash-ups are reported in Kent and Queen Anne Counties.

Taft Waller, 22, Negro, is critically ill with appendicities at his home at Big Woods, 5 miles north of here, and no doctor can reacn him. The Chestertown firemen's ambulance failed three times today to reach his home.

Schools are still closed because pupils can not reach here.

Federal Funds To Help Build Wicomico Span

Staunton Paving Firms Low Bidders on Valley Paving Contracts.

Kilmarnock, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Bids for immediate construction of a bridge across the Great Wicomico Rivers at Tipers will be received at the State highway department until 10 a. m. Tuesday.

A Federal allotment of $115,790 has been advanced for the project, in addition to State funds.

The river here is 1,500 feet wide. The bridge will have a 240-foot swing draw span providing one channel having horizontal clearance of 100 feet and vertical of 10 feet at mean low water, when closed.

New Market, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Information was received here today that the State highway department yesterday opened bids for widening New Market's Main street. The low bid of $23,641.95 was submitted by R. W. Moore & Co., of Staunton.

Bids also were opened for similar street work in Edinburg, the lowest received being $52,750.61 submitted by Echols Bros., also of Staunton.

Repaving and widening Toms Brook's Main street will be delayed several weeks because of a revision of highway department plans.

Work already has been started on the foundations of the new bridge of the Valley pike south of Mount Jackson. The bridge will be of concrete reinforced with steel.

Roanoke Seeks Route.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Organizations in Roanoke County are fighting to obtain the proposed Federal highway connecting Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountain National Parks.

The supervisors urged that the route be laid through Virginia and the Roanoke area on the southern route. A similar resolution was adopted by the new Virginia-Heights-Raleigh Court Civic League of Roanoke.

Maryland Farmer Indicted in Slaying

Jury Charges D. C. Man With Manslaughter.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County grand jury has indicted Jerome Stevens, Millersville farmer, for the murder of Ernest Davis, farm hand. Davis was shot December 3 in a quarrel on the Crain highway, near Ander's Corner.

The jury has also indicted Duncan Power, of Washington, for manslaughter in connection with the death of Louis M. Lehardy 3d, son of Lieut. Lehardy, United States Navy. The child was killed last December 30, when an automobile, driven by his father, was in collision with a car, driven by Power, on the Bay Ridge road, near Annapolis.

Spotsylvania Beauties Selected by Schools

Spottsylvania County high schools have chosen two girls as "Miss Spotsylvania I" and "Miss Spotslvania II" as representing feminine beauty in the schools.

Pictures of the prize winners and runners-up in the recent contest will be shown exclusively in tomorrow's Post.

College Society Banquets Today

Randolph-Macon Literary Body in 2nd Century.

Ashland, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Entering its second century, the Washington Literary Society of Randolph-Macon College, with the longest continuous existence of any society in a Southern college, will hold its annual celebration with a banquet tomorrow.

Dr. E. L. Fox will be toastmaster and President R. E. Blackwell will be a speaker.

Dr. J. N. Hillman, president of Emory and Henry College and head of the Association of Virginia Schools and Colleges, will speak in the college chapel at 8 p. m.

Prominent alumni members of the society include Claude E. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, and Frank Bane, director of the American Welfare Association.

of July 2, 1926, under which military aircraft is purchased, so that bids will be openly advertised for and will be truly on a competitive basis.

Plan to Go Back 7 Years.

In addition to its direct investigation of the bidding on the $7,500,000 worth of new planes for the Army, the Rogers committee proposes to delve Friday into all the negotiated contracts whereby military airplanes have been acquired in the last seven years.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Air Corps, has been called before the committee tomorrow, bringing records of all contracts between the Army and manufacturers since 1926.

Although Section C of the act of July 2, 1926, provides for open bidding, the rule has been to procure aircraft through negotiated contracts. The Rogers committee wants to determine who first instituted this method of procurement, and why.

In addition to hearing Kindelberger regarding the stock held by former Secretary of the Navy Adams in the Douglas Aircraft Co., the House Naval Affairs sub-committee on aviation questioned Douglas L. Brown, president of the Pratt-Whitney Aircraft Corporation of Hartford, Conn., regarding that company's profits on naval planes.

Reveals $638,000 Bonuses.

Brown testified his company and the Chaunce-Vought Co. and the Hamilton Standard Propeller Co. all were owned by the United Aircraft & Transportation Corporation.

The witness explained discrepancies between his figures on profits and those furnished by a Navy audit by saying the naval authorities did not count Federal taxes, nor bonuses paid to officers of the company. These bonuses ranged as high as $638,000 in 1929.

Brown said the average profit of the Pratt-Whitney Co. since 1926 was 23.8 per cent. He denied the policy of his company was dictated in any way by United.

American airplane engines are on a par with those of other powers and usually better, he testified, saying that a study is being made at Hartford of the possibilities of Diesel engines for aircraft.

Disowned for Love

PRINCE SIGVARD, Duke of Upland, second son of the Crown Prince of Sweden, has been disowned by his family for refusing to give up Fraulein Erika Patzek, daughter of a Berlin business man.

known as the popular Herr Holger, and where the bride-to-be is an actress.

Prince's Romance Fails To Win Public Favor

Stockholm, Feb. 21 (AP).—With another prince determined to desert tradition and marry outside the royal circle, all Sweden wondered tonight what will be the future of the royal family.

The sentiment of the public is against unauthorized run-away marriages, and the plans of Prince Sigvard to wed Erika Patzek, a German film actress, do not meet with general approval.

Sweden wants its royalty democratic, but not too democratic.

Last year the Socialist leader of Parliament, helping to vote down a motion to make Sweden a republic, said royalty gives "a touch of mystery and poesy to life and to people."

But Sweden, as a whole, sees no mystery or poesy in runaway marriages.

Press Fails in Seige Of Erika Patzek's Home

Efforts to get a word with the family of Erika Patzek, blonde movie actress, betrothed to Prince Sigvard, were unsuccessful. All day long there were knocks at the door of the apartment in a rear court of an unpretentious building in the Wilmersdorf district.

The only answer was a noise, like a dull thud, as more and more furniture was piled up inside to prevent entrance.

Banzhaf, N. Y. Lawyer, Is Believed a Suicide

White Plains, N. Y., Feb. 21 (AP).—Albert H. T. Banzhaf, well-known New York attorney, died today of bullet wounds, said by police to have been self-inflicted.

The attorney was found last night in a storage house in the rear of his home in Larchmont with four bullet wounds in his chest. His family had been on a shopping tour. Police said they were informed he had been in ill health.

Lawyer Offers Story in Army Contract Probe

torney for some mercantile organizations which are large buyers of trucks and became interested in the truck business through that connection.

However, it is stated that Lyons never personally appeared at the War Department, but that the interests he represented were looked after there, in an open conference involving specifications, by Mark T. McKee, leader of the American Legion in Michigan and associate of Ralph T. O'Neil, former National commander of the American Legion, who also has asked permission to appear before the jury and will testify next week.

Lyons already has made a statement detailing his connection with the Fargo Corporation and the contract under which he was to receive a commission for business obtained from the War Department. This statement was made to two representatives of the Department of Justice, who called on him at his Long Island home about two weeks ago.

Ku Klux Klan Leader.

"Ten years ago Lyons was active in Ku Klux Klan affairs in Indiana, and at one time was secretary to Hiram Evans, head of the Ku Klux Klan. He was called as a witness in the case of Ed Jackson, Indiana Governor and prominent member of the Klan, who was charged with bribery. He was prevented by illness from testifying. After the break-up of the Klan, Lyons practiced law in Indianapolis and later went to New York.

The grand jury yesterday went back to the time of the Hoover Administration in its War Department investigation. The principal witness was Frederick H. Payne, former Assistant Secretary of War. Payne is understood to have been questioned concerning the making of contracts for disposal of surplus war materials while he was assistant secretary and about his activities since he left office.

The jury is inquiring into an alleged contract made with Joseph Silverman, dealer in surplus Army material, whereby Silverman was to sell back to the Department material he had already purchased from the department with the understanding that he would have the right to buy other surplus material said to have had an original value of $8,000,000. Silverman has stated that such a contract was entered into but had never been carried out.

Other witnesses included Kate Buckingham, private secretary to Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, who finished testimony she started Tuesday; Maj. Myron C. Cramer, of the Judge Advocate General's Office, and Col. Earl McFarland, who was executive officer in Payne's office.

The jury, after hearing testimony yesterday, recessed until next Monday. Present plans call for hearing three witnesses next week: Woodring, who already has appeared once; O'Neil and Lyons. It is expected that the jury will complete its investigation by the middel of the week. The hearings have been going on for two and a half weeks.

Communists were closely watched.

The service at the cathedral will be conducted by Cardinal Archbishop Van Roye and the papal nuncio, assisted by six bishops.

Apartments in the palace were banked high with hundreds of wreaths. Conspicuous were flowers sent by the American Club and the Brussels American Legion posts.

King Boris of Bulgaria was expected to arrive tonight. A British delegation headed by the Prince of Wales arrived today in 11 airplanes. Other prominent persons already here included the Crown Princes of Sweden and Norway, and Prince Axel of Denmark, and two sisters of the late ruler, the Princess Josephine of Hohenzollern, and the Duchess of Vendome.

Sugar District Strike Threatened in Cuba

Oriente, Cuba, Feb. 21 (AP).—A branch of the Confederation of Labor threatened today to call a general strike in the province which would paralyze the sugar industry unless the army's "reign of terror" is ended.

The British Consul General asked the Department of State to investibate the deaths by violence of several West Indians.

Johnson Feels 30-Hour Week Going Too Far

coming in from the small industries have been chiefly not of any monopolistic tendencies of the codes, but that they could not subsist under the shorter hours. These would be nothing to what you would get if you passed a law of this kind."

Asked if the people generally would think the 30-hour week better than the NRA, Johnson replied the industries "would turn backward somersaults at the thought of a 30-hour week."

"I think something has got to be done very promptly to shorten hours and raise wages," Johnson said, however, "and it is my intention to do more."

He explained that further shortening of hours should be in proportion to the return of business, "not in one bite, but in two or three bites."

Sees Future Profits.

The administrator reported some of the NRA industries had come from the red and would make money this year. Then, he explained, it would be time to call on them to pass on further benefits to their workers.

He said, if he had it to do over again, he would not permit the automobile industry's maximum to be stepped up to 40 hours.

The General had a good laugh when Connery, a Massachusetts Democrat, called his attention to talk that the grievance airing next month "could be termed the first move of a Facisti conference."

"No," Johnson replied. "That idea is simply ridiculous. We've necessarily had to try this and that, and have blundered in some things; and we want to get some consistency in the codes. There's no Facisti about it."

Swope said first there must be increased consuming power to get the heavy industries going, which thought was seconded by Johnson.

Sleep.... Precious Sleep in a home free from galloping temperatures!

When you retire at night in a gas heated home, you can rest assured that you and your children will awaken to a warm and comfortable house, no matter what the sudden drop in temperature during the night. Even if you like plenty of air in your room, you want the rest of the house cozy and warm when you start the day—get the children ready for school.

Gas heating is the only true automatic method of heating today. It responds instantly, without attention on your part, to any changes in outside weather. A simple thermostat conveniently located in an upstairs room relieves you of all heating worries. You have no fuel to store, no "firing" to do, no muss to clean up.

A Sound and Wise Investment

Gas heating plants are built for extremely long life, with no motors or complicated machinery to get out of order. They are silent, clean and compact and efficiently serviced by your Gas Company. Washington too, enjoys one of the lowest gas rates for home heating on the Atlantic seaboard. Investigate automatic gas heating today!

Automatic Gas Heating Plants are quickly and easily installed....

Dead winter is not too late to install gas heat, nor do you have to give up your present heating plant. It takes less than a day to make the change, whether you put in a complete new gas-burning unit, or a unit which will convert your present furnace. A small down payment is all that is required—the balance in convenient monthly payments. Why not call DIstrict 8500 and let us tell you just what it will cost to heat your home with gas.

PWAP For Art's Sake.

Forbes Watson, speaking to the regional directors of the Public Works Art Project, made an interesting point when he declared that one of its accomplishments may be elimination of snobbishness toward local artists. This, he intimated, is more to be desired by the artists themselves than $30 per week from the Government. Be that as it may, there is provocation to thought in the assertion of the former editor of The Arts who, for years, has been trying to make Americans interested in art by Americans.

Who can assert with confidence that a new school of artists will not arise out of PWAP? We may eventually find our lordly drawing rooms devoid of foreign Cezannes and Picassos and their wall space filled with portraits of American types and landscapes of American scenes. And these paintings might be signed in some such way as John Jones, PWAP. It would at least be a refreshing variant to the ubiquitous R. A. of British art.

A Slight Disagreement.

Federal agencies dealing with unemployment are experiencing incredible difficulties in estimating their achievements. At the beginning of 1934 the PWA, including the CWA and the CCC, announced that it had given jobs to approximately 5,000,000 men, and on the same day the NRA made known its estimate "that some 4,000,000 workers have been restored to gainful employment" as a result of codes of fair competition and the President's reemployment agreement. Added together, these claims were obviously ridiculous.

Once more two different Federal agencies have chosen the same day to publish conflicting claims. Gen. Johnson has curtailed the former NRA estimate by a round million, but is still far from agreement with the figures published by Secretary of Labor Perkins. In his radio address Tuesday night Gen. Johnson said: "The important thing is that 3,000,000 people have been put to work, that $3,000,000,000 has been added to their purchasing power."

According to Secretary Perkins, "approximately 2,000,000 more persons (were) employed in January than in March." Pay roll totals, she says, "indicate a gain of nearly $55,000,000 since last March in the total amount disbursed weekly to employes." But industry was running in abnormally low gear last March because of the banking holiday. Since July, when the NRA began to function, the weekly pay roll increase has been $21,000,000.

This gain has come about gradually. But even if we should assume that pay rolls during approximately 30 weeks since the NRA began its activities have been, on the average, $21,000,000 above the previous 30 weeks, and if all this increased purchasing power should be attributed to the NRA, the total increase would be about $630,000,000 instead of $3,000,000,000.

The effect—or one effect—of all these conflicting claims is to emphasize once more our deplorable lack of reliable statistical information on unemployment.

The Bonus Again.

Two obvious factors underlie revival of the veterans' bonus issue at this time. The program of lavish expenditures is a virtual incitement to every group trying to raid the Federal Treasury. Additionally, Congressmen are seeking to curry favor with the veterans' lobby in anticipation of the fall election.

Since the adjusted compensation certificates held by veterans will not mature until after 1945, logical reasons why they should be paid now are difficult to find. Sponsors of the bonus apparently believe they can present a stronger case if they merely seek to participate in the general scheme of creating prosperity through the distribution of Government funds. Representative Patman, commander in chief of all bonus drives, reduces the argument to a single plea for the issuance of fiat currency to create "purchasing power." "There are $3,140,000,000 in the Treasury," he says, "and the bonus payment would be a good way to put it to work." To such argument has the tendency of the times reduced us.

It is significant that the last 14 signatures needed to bring the bonus measure to a vote in the House were affixed to the petition within an hour after President Roosevelt made known his opposition. Apparently some members refrained from indorsing the measure so long as there were prospects of its enactment. But as soon as the President let it be known that a bonus bill would be vetoed, members hastened to record gestures designed to attract the soldier vote.

President Roosevelt's courage in meeting the issue stands out in sharp contrast to this political dishonesty. While timorous Congressmen seek the benefits of political jugglery, the President is willing to take upon his own shoulders full responsibility for defeat of the bonus measure. It is an encouraging supplement to the stand already taken by the Administration on perpetuation of the CWA.

When Liberty Was Vital.

Washington needs no accolade, upon his birthday, beyond that bestowed upon him by an enemy, Gen. Conway, of "Conway Cabal" fame. Wounded (mortally, he thought) in a duel with Gen. Cadwallader, Gen. Conway wrote Washington to express his regret for what had transpired. "You are, in my eyes," he said, "the great and good man." A hundred and fifty years after that was written, it stands as the verdict of history.

The 202d anniversary of Washington's birth is, however, a peculiarly appropriate time upon which to remind ourselves of the genesis and the genius of the Nation which Washington's victories made possible—appropriate in view of the fact that peoples of many nations have delivered themselves over to autocracy and dictatorship, surrendering liberties dearly won. Washington was no dialectician, but in his Army there was a general whose style, though florid, in the mode of the times, yet bore the freight of his meaning. This was Francis Marion, the "Swamp Fox," of South Carolina.

In a quaint old book published shortly after the Revolution Col. Peter Horry tells how a British officer, resplendent in regimentals, entered the colonial lines to discuss exchange of prisoners. The business concluded, Gen. Marion, "a swarthy, smoke-dried little man with scarcely enough of threadbare homespun to cover his nakedness" invited him to dinner. When the general called for service, one of his militiamen raked two big sweet potatoes from the fire and put them on a pine stump near the general and his guest. The well-bred British officer ate, apparently with great relish, but finally broke into a laugh, and, apologizing, explained that he was thinking of what his brother officers would say if his government gave them such fare. "I don't see, General, how you stand it," the guest observed.

"Why, sir?" replied Marion. "Those things depend on feeling. The heart is all; and when that is once interested a man can do anything. Many a youth would think it hard to indent himself a slave for 14 years. But let him be over head and ears in love, with such a beauteous sweetheart as Rachel and he will think no more of 14 years' servitude than young Jacob did.

"I am in love; and my sweetheart is Liberty. Be that heavenly nymph my companion, and these woods shall have charm beyond London and Paris in slavery. To have no monarch driving over me with his gilt coaches; nor his host of excisemen and tax-gatherers insulting and robbing; but to be my own master, my own prince and sovereign; gloriously preserving my natural dignity, and pursuing my true happiness; planting my vineyards and eating their luscious fruit; sowing my fields and reaping the golden grain; and seeing millions of brothers all around me, equally free and happy as myself; this, sir, is what I long for. * * * And when I look forward to the long, long ages of posterity, I glory in the thought that I am fighting their battles. The children of distant generations may never hear my name; but still it gladdens my heart to think that I am contending for their freedom, with all its countless blessings."

Washington put a period to the story, when, in a letter to Jay discussing the rising demand for a monarchy, he said: "What a triumph for our enemies to verify their predictions! What a triumph for the advocates of despotism, to find that we are incapable of governing ourselves, and that systems founded in the basis of equality and liberty are merely ideal and fallacious!"

In our sophisticated day, we eschew the studied eloquence of Washington and Marion, and regard as naive so frank a confession of attachment to ideals. Yet we know that they not only won America, but struck her keynote. Liberty and freedom, won at such sacrifice, are not to be surrendered quickly or easily.

Toward Normalcy.

A disposition on the part of the Senate to reduce the pay cut imposed upon Federal employes last year has been apparent for some time. With prices rising and with the Government spending enormous sums on recovery projects, Federal workers have brought forth some cogent arguments in support of their cause. The Senate is not inclined to discriminate against employes of the Government when Congress is in its most generous mood.

Under the Senate plan, one-third of the pay reduction would be eliminated immediately and salaries would be restored to their base rates on July 1. Full restoration was approved by a vote of 41 to 40, indicating that the Senate may compromise readily if the House is not inclined to support this amendment. But Government employes may reasonably expect a substantial reduction of the pay cut at the beginning of the next fiscal year.

All efforts to adjust salaries in accordance with changing costs of living appear to have been abandoned. At best this arrangement was a clumsy makeshift.

A Cold Climate.

If the mail trains finally got through the New England snow drifts James Roosevelt has now received a parental letter on his opposition to the child labor amendment. This letter will not be made public, he says. Nor, we presume, will his reply. Quite proper, although this correspondence would make interesting reading, and might even furnish material for speculation concerning the political ambitions of "Young Jim" in the State of his choosing.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has been urging the passage of the child labor amendment, was surprised when told that her son, patronage chief ex-officio of Massachusetts, had come out on the winning opposition side in that State. She announced she would write Boston and find out why. And Jim, pressed for comment, discreetly intimated that the subject was not meet for public discussion.

The reason may not be so obscure, however. The Massachusetts Legislature has refused to approve the amendment, and there is something about living in Massachusetts, and playing about with its statesmen, that is tempering to idealism on the minority side. Especially when one is definitely in politics in that cold and unemotional Commonwealth on Massachusetts Bay.

The Goldfish Bowl.

Paraphrasing his text from the Book of Common Prayer—"there are things in some codes that ought not to be there and things are out of some codes that ought to be there"—Gen. Hugh Johnson has invited the industries of the country to what he calls the great round-up on March 5. Until then, and as long thereafter as may be necessary, everyone with constructive ideas is invited to peer into "the goldfish bowl" where swims the "loose and hastily formed organization" known as the National Industrial Recovery Administration.

For the purpose of this appraisal, designed "to bring the code and other procedure of NRA as near to perfection and general satisfaction as possible, and to do it by one operation," there can be nothing but praise. From the analysis much information of inestimable value ought to be forthcoming. Some of this will come out at public hearings and some will properly be revealed behind closed doors. The information acquired, we presume, will be codified some time after March 5, and the result should be a carefully considered critique on the effectiveness, after nearly a year's experience, of NRA as a whole. By issuing his appeal for attendance at what he calls "A Field Day for Criticism," Gen. Johnson is probably doing the country as great a service as any one has done since the recovery act was passed by Congress. It should be a day of confession, a day of criticism, and a day of clarification.

In some respects this radio address was one of Gen. Johnson's most important speeches. "We want your help," he said, and there is no doubt that he will get it, from industry, from labor, and also from the less advertised but not less patriotic consumer. In addition to praise, as the Recovery Administration is frank to admit, there is room for criticism. If that criticism is both given and received in the spirit of mutual helpfulness it cannot fail to achieve constructive ends.

For the "goldfish bowl," in this case, is not merely an exhibit to be displayed for the admiration and edification of children. The invitation to comment, one hopes, is not an eloquent gesture to be followed by vicious resentment if some inharmonious expressions mingle with pleasurable "ohs" and "ahs." Those who have nurtured goldfish realize that even these graceful and attractive ornaments are as much benefited by instructed care as by indiscriminate admiration.

Circumstantial, But—

Some of this newspaper's subscribers have been demanding, of us and each other, "What's the matter with the weather?" Well, we don't know, but we do know that:

President Roosevelt sent the name of Willis R. Gregg to the Senate on January 12 as his nominee for Chief of the Weather Bureau to succeed Charles F. Marvin, who has brought us through both rough and gentle days since 1915.

Almost immediately thereafter the elements began to act "screwy." Although the January snowfall normally is 7 inches, flaky precipitation went on strike and refused to do more than a "trace" of work. But in February it got temperamental, or remorseful, or something, and pitched in with 50 per cent more than usual. And the month is not yet over.

As if that were not enough, the mercury shot down to the lowest mark in 20 years, just to show what it could do if it were so minded. In Boston it went to 18 below, an all-time record, and the harbor froze over. People up that way will in future date things from the big freeze, instead of the landing of the Mayflower. Even New York had 14 below zero and conditions not exceeded since the big blizzard of '88.

The change of pilots may have had nothing whatever to do with it, but at least the evidence is strong that somebody has had his hand on the wrong instruments. And Mr. Gregg is new at the job.

Paradox: The weaker the dollar gets, the harder it is to hold.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some 35 years ago the newspapers of America straw-voted The Post first place among newspapers. I have been relying on The Post most of the time, when in this part of the country, for over a third of a century.

Some few papers have equaled The Post (and maybe one or two are better—but not in Washington), and I find more good reading, and as little objectionable matter as could be expected.

In addition to the reliable news, especially do I, with others, appreciate Mr. Quillen's daily wholesome philosophy, and also Mr. Ellis' Sunday school feature.

And so, just now I am writing to plead that nothing keep out Mr. Quillen's work.

If he is sick—God bless him—we will pray for him.

If he is on a deserved vacation—well, we will be patient and rejoice with him.

But you, Mr. Editor, who are on the job for us everyday, please don't let any light "junk" jostle out of the forms Mr. Quillen's daily contribution.

NORMAN SANBRIDGE.

The Price of Gold.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We told the labor unions in 1913 if they kept up their strikes, as agreed upon, until labor received double the wages they then received for the same amount of labor, that people would simply have to pay double for the things purchased with this money and that nothing would be gained.

After wages were doubled people received twice as much or more for their labor, for their land, for their wheat, their hogs and their manufactures, but they could not receive twice as much for their gold because the amount of gold by weight contained in our United States dollar had been fixed by Congress many years before. This was not fair to Uncle Sam when he had billions of dollars in its vaults and was paying about 393 million dollars a year interest on the money borrowed of its citizens to meet the expenses of a war. The money thus borrowed bought materials which could never be sold to recover the money, but was blown up in an unforgivable war.

Congress has now evened things up by allowing the Nation to get twice as much for its gold, exactly as people were getting twice as much for everything else in 1928. Wall street declares that you should buy stocks because they are bound to come up. This is wrong teaching! I believe that it has been made possible by the President to hold the money inflation strictly to these honest limits. Suppose the President takes this added wealth and distributes it to the poor in wages and brings back a normal flow of goods? The rich have lost more in the depression than they will in the inflation.

Yet, when we have pledged in our paper money and our bonds to pay in gold at 22½ (?) gr. to the dollar, to be honest we must keep our money when backed by 11½ gr. of gold; to the same real value as the old dollar. In other words, while gold and silver double in value just as everything else had already done, nothing else must be allowed to go above the 1928 value in the new dollars.

I did not believe this thing could be done unless it were done internationally, but unless people who do not understand the plan "rock the boat" we seem in a fair way to land safely.

REPUBLICAN CWA WORKER.

He Doesn't.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to heartily indorse the letter of "Derby Wearer" in The Post of February 14, about the imbecility of men taking off their hats in the elevators of public buildings, and not in street cars.

Another example occurs to me, and I wish the shade of one of the late priests of Phoebus Apollo at the Oracle of Delphi would arise in the midst and solve for me the following Eleusinian mystery: An acidulous putrefaction of carnivorously and herbivorously developed protoplasm, consisting of 85 per cent water and 15 per cent inorganic salts, (if I remember my old high school chemistry correctly) goes into large department store to make a purchase. There are hundreds and maybe thousands of ladies on the floor, counting customers and salesladies, but he keeps his hat tightly glued to his head for fear somebody will steal it. There are one or more ladies in the elevator, which he takes to an upper floor and he immediately pulls off his hat out of respect to those ladies.

Are not the ladies on the floor entitled to the same respect as those in the elevator? If so, why does not his nobletts pull off his hat the minute he enters the store? Is not this on a par with the snobbery, caddism, and toadyism which has abolished the good old term "My wife," and substituted therefor Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Jones, &c., in a cheap imitation of the English nobility, who always refer to the wife of their bosom as Lady Jones, Lady Smith, Lady Brown, the Duchess, Marchioness, Viscountess of So and So, instead of the endearing term "My wife."

G. H. McCARTHY.
Chevy Chase, D. C., Feb. 14.

"Back to the Land."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I know that suggestions from the forgotten man are about as welcome as a skunk at a lawn party. But just the same, I have a few to offer. I firmly believe that when the American people look the depression squarely in the face they will realize that there never will be anything like enough jobs for all the unemployed, by millions. Therefore, there is but one way back to the land. The Federal land banks are holding enough farms to put this Nation on its feet, on a firm foundation within the next 18 months. Take these thousands of farms and divide them into 10-acre tracts and build houses on them with all the graft taken out. Build at least 1,000,000 of these houses, or enough to absorb at least 5,000,000 people. Sell these houses to American families on long term Federal finance, also with the graft taken out.

A billion and a half will do the trick and have car fare left. Where do we get the money? Offer a 15-year bond issue to the American people and see where it come from. In less than 10 years the Government will have every dime of the money back with the interest, and 10,000,000 happy and prosperous citizens. Too much of everything now? Sure we have, and we always will as long as we let a few farmers raise all the corn and wheat and hogs. If this policy were employed, these farms would pay some of the depositors some of the billions now in cold storage. There will be a lot of howls from a lot of people. But it will put 10,000,000 people on easy street.

EMMETT W. TAYLOR.
Washington, Feb. 8.

Congressmen Doff.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am one of the elevator operators in the House of Representatives Office Building. In order that I may not be suspected by "Derby Wearer" of being "illiterate" I will say also that I am a former newspaperman, and still write twice weekly for a certain publication.

Male elevator riders remove their hats when ladies enter the car not because they are "hayshakers" but because they are gentlemen. Members of Congress invariably doff their hats when riding in the same car with ladies. I do not believe they do so because they are used to nothing more impressive than the "church back home."

If the gentleman is afraid for his derby, or values it more than common courtesy, let him wear a fedora when riding elevators.

EDWARD JOHNSON.

As Others See It.

State Rights and the Republicans.

It is one of the more peculiar manifestations of these politically topsy-turvy times that the doctrine of State rights, which is now recognized by the Democrats only at Jefferson Day dinners, has been enthusiastically adopted by the Republican party. On Monday Republican orators all over the country were ushering it to a seat of honor at the Lincoln's Birthday celebrations. Alexander Hamilton, who once pleaded for a "solid, coercive union," would have had a rather miserable time at those celebrations. Jefferson would have listened incredulously, but, having once assured himself that he was still in full possession of his senses, might have spent a most exhilarating evening.

The Republicans, he might have concluded, were a rather sensible lot. They were against all this silly business of concentrating every sort of power and authority in the Federal Government—this centralization of control in Washington. There was, for example, the Republican Representative from Pennsylvania, Mr. Beck, who rose to protest against the steady absorption of State rights by the Federal Government. There was the Republican Senator from Iowa, Mr. Dickinson, who decried the "present program of Federal regulation and control" and pleaded eloquently for a return to "fundamentals." And there was Arthur M. Hyde, Republican Secretary of Agriculture under Mr. Hoover, who stood on the time-honored Jeffersonian doctrine of State rights and warned the Nation that "Washington has become not alone the Capital but the city hall of the Nation," and that "the States had surrendered their power in exchange for relief money."

We gather from this Thomas Jefferson has been taken over, bag and baggage, by the Republican party. The statesman whom the Democrats delight to honor on Jefferson Day and to forget the balance of the year, has been gleefully abducted by the opposition. We have, consequently, the strange spectacle of the party of Hamilton lambasting the party of Jefferson for ignoring the doctrine of State rights. Apparently the Democrats are for Jefferson so long as they do not have to practice what he preached, and the Republicans are for him so long as the Democrats reject his counsels.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THIS really ought to be on the woman's page because it has to do with the problems of the hostess, like the proper wines that should be served, the salads, what kind of games to play, and so on. Anyway, I should like to commend to those who have tired of charades, "murder" and bridge as a means of entertaining — to those I should like to present Crack-Down Johnson in a radio skit. As the flappers would say, he is a scream. Invite your guests on a night when he is broadcasting and your party carries itself.

BARGERON.

I came across him quite unexpectedly. My house was full of guests Tuesday night and there seemed to be nothing interesting to do. We were fed up on the usual games and the conversation was becoming strained. Suddenly my daughter called down that if we wanted to hear something funny we should turn on the radio. A few minutes later my guests were rolling on the floor convulsed with laughter. I really thought their sides would burst. Everybody went away singing our praises as party givers.

"Really," they said, "we have never had such a good time."

* * * *

Honestly, the man is better than Eddie Cantor and the Fire Chief put together. His versatility is one thing that gets my admiration and makes him funnier, I believe, than he would otherwise be. The way he shifts from one role to the other—my, my, it is amazing! One minute he is the hard-boiled, two-fisted cracker-down and the next he is soothingly entreating our industrial and business men to come right in and see him, that he is not bad at all. His voice changes that go with the different roles are really the key to his artistry. Now, when he is cracking-down, he talks in a low, guttural tone and then presto—you can almost see him throw off the bad wolf skin—there comes the dulcet tones of a soprano.

I am just dying for television to come in so we can see him shift from one role to another as well as hear him.

* * * *

All public performers, however, sooner or later reveal their weaknesses. Was his whole tirade against the stories on the "New Dealers" motivated because the author wrote more highly of one of Crack-Down's subordinates, Compliance Director Davis, than he did of Crack-Down? We must study our Freud on this.

The Crack-Down reveals that he has not read the book on "How to be an Executive" closely enough. If he will go back to it he will learn that many of the best executives are not men of any outstanding ability themselves, but are those who have the knack of surrounding themselves with able men. Now, instead of Johnson taking umbrage at the author's appraisal of Compliance Director Davis as an able man why doesn't he throw out his chest and agree.

"You bet he is a good man," he should say. "I hired him." Whereupon all fair appraisers of men would think that Johnson must be a good man, too.

We should not lose sight of the political significance of the Crack-Downs skit, though. It means that the Government has definitely gone into another field heretofore occupied only by private industry. It has gone into the entertainment field.

Not only is it feeding us, housing us and giving us money, but now it has unmistakably embarked upon the business of entertaining us. I suppose this is justified at a time when so many have not the means to pay for entertainment. But the Government should withdraw at the earliest possible moment. I remember very well how the union bands complained against the free concerts of the Marine Band.

There is a question, too, of whether even in the emergency period some little charge should not be made for the general. After all we are badly in debt. Why can't he be presented in the smaller cities and towns. I know of nothing that would draw better, bring out more of a crowd, than handbills distributed in Kalamazoo, for example, reading: "Tonight at the Opera House—Crack-Down Johnson in person, himself, in the Administration's version of 'The Revolution.'"

Because he is a revolution. Forces are seething within him. He is a tumult all by himself.

THE TUNNELS OF GIBRALTAR.

Squads of civil and military police have been searching the crannies and passages in the Rock of Gibraltar for an escaped prisoner, says the London Daily Telegraph. There are nearly 1,000 yards of tunneling piercing the rock, and one can explore the passages only by the light of flares.

In some places there is just enough room for a man to squeeze through. In others the passage widens out into a gallery on the outside of the rock, where guns are placed so that they command both sea and land. These galleries were begun by the military engineers toward the end of the eighteenth century, when the Spaniards menaced Gibraltar.

JOHN MILTON'S GRAVE.

Above the doorway of a warehouse in Bunhill row an upcast eye will espy a tablet, says the London Daily Telegraph. It bears this inscription:

"The site of the house in which John Milton wrote 'Paradise Lost,' and died, 1674."

The great poet lies buried in St. Giles, Cripplegate, Church, near by the altar. Twice the grave has been disturbed, on the last occasion in the year 1790, when Cowper wrote some bitter stanzas upon the desecration.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Today's Economics.

If you have the money to afford and the time to read a score of books on the New Deal and its questions, the publishers have assuredly given you a sufficient range from which to choose. I should say, in a rough guess, that 300 such works have appeared in the last five months. But if you want one book—a book which won't tell you the esoteric arguments on the gold bullion standard or describe the hobbies of Secretary Swanson, but which will give you the vital facts and issues of the economic scene—it is "Our Economic Society and Its Problems" (Harcourt Brace, $2.50), written by Rexford Guy Tugwell and Howard C. Hill.

* * * *

It looks and reads like a textbook. But after a welter of inspired essays and extremely technical discussions, it is high time we came to a basic textbook. Yet you must not expect the dry and academic text of college economics, the bare bones of supply and demand and diminishing returns. This volume holds the living economics of today—who is poor and why, and what can be done about it—told soberly and yet vividly.

There is a full account of present levels of living, with tables, graphs, even excerpts from Hamlin Garland and Sinclair Lewis. From that basis of fact, the authors move on to consider the ways in which these levels can be raised—by improving methods of production, by improving the conduct of business affairs, by redistributing income, by the wise use of income, and by international cooperation. A final section considers the alternatives to the nineteenth century doctrine of "laissez faire" (what might be called the "do nothing" or "Mugwump" policy).

In the course of the volume's 553 pages, there is room for everything from the fact that the average family supported by a worker at Henry Ford's 1930 minimum wage of $7 a day spent $1.66 a year on literature to the mental processes of deciding a purchase of beefsteak. In a larger sphere, there are reasoned discussions of everything from the stock exchange to the Five Year Plan. It is all pertinent and valuable.

The book is no hasty extemporization by the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and his co-author at the University of Chicago. They have been working on it for ten years, writing it since 1931. Something far deeper than contemporary politics causes them to say: "Laissez faire, which developed when the greatest need was for freedom of business enterprise, stresses the liberty of business at the expense of other kinds of liberty. Now other liberties are of greater importance, and can be secured only by social control."

"Our Economic Society" is imperative reading if you would understand the basic problems of our times. I have seen no better book for the purpose.

Death Rings Thrice.

James M. Cain, newspaper writer of Annapolis, Baltimore, New York and now California, gives us a hard and macabre little tale in "The Postman Always Rings Twice" (Knopf, $2).

A young bum stops at a hot-dog stand, becomes infatuated with the Greek proprietor's wife, stays to work there. A clandestine love affair involves two attempts to murder the Greek, the second successful. When the district attorney seizes the pair, a wily lawyer gets them off scot-free. Then they face each other, loving and hating at once. The plot is solved, like an Elizabethan drama of blood, by decimation.

Cain tells it with terrific terseness and power. His greatest feat is an avoidance of any echo of Mr. Hemingway. You will finish it at a sitting, and though you won't find it pleasant reading you will know that you've seen some naked human motives in action.

In the Margin.

The February number of The Landmark, monthly magazine of the English Speaking Union, prints a valuable little article on "Lincoln and England" by Roland Williamson (misspelled Ronald). The article will be reprinted in a book of Mr. Williamson's short-stories and sketches to be published this summer.

Mr. Williamson will be remembered for his book issued in 1929—"The Law Library in the Capitol"—which received international recognition. For 12 years he was assistant in charge of that library. Now retired from the Government service, he is engaged in writing and the practice of law here.

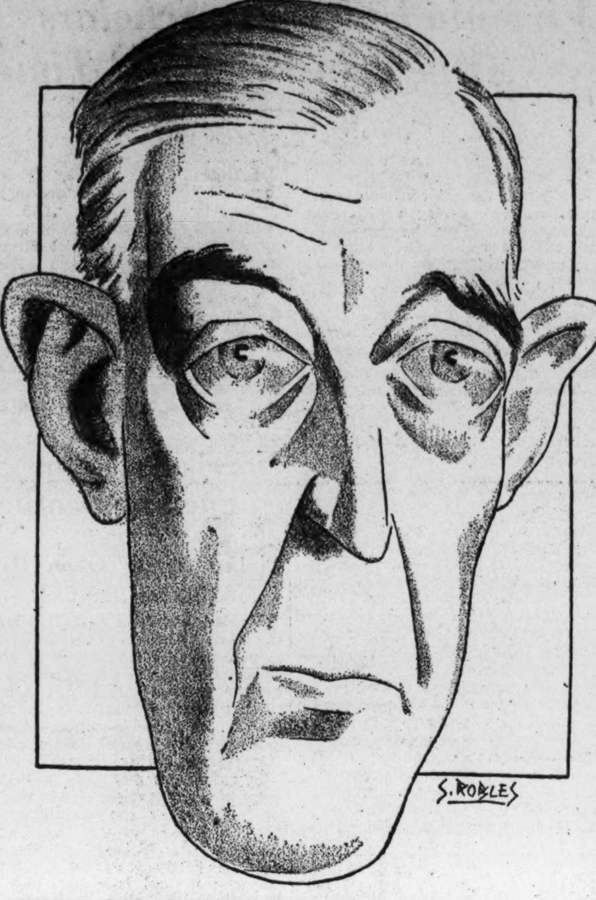
That the character of Daisy Miller was suggested to Henry James by none other than the young American girl, Julia Newberry, is the "audacious theory" put forth in a bit of literary detective work by Edgar Goodspeed, writing in the current Atlantic Monthly.

Both girls, says the article, were rich and attractive Americans, gifted, courted, independent and full of gayety and clever talk. Both died suddenly in early womanhood, in the spring of the year at Rome, and were buried in the Protestant Cemetery. Julia Newberry died in April, 1876; Henry James was in Rome in 1877 and admits that it was then that the idea of "Daisy Miller" came to him.

"It seems extremely probable," the writer deduces, "that the little tragedy of the young American heiress who had died there only the year before should come to his ears and move him. The figure of this girl with everything to live for, dying so prematurely so far from home, would move a much less gifted spirit than his."

Julia Newberry was a young American girl of 60 years ago, now become famous through the publication of her "Diary." Just published by Norton is a companion volume, "Julia Newberry's Sketch Book," containing her youthful drawings and a memoir by Tracy Mygatt.

The National Gallery



DAVID AIKEN REED, Senator from Pennsylvania. Born in Pittsburgh, 53 years ago. Princeton 1900. Had notable war record as field artillery major. Won a D. S. M., French Legion of Honor. In the Senate since 1922. Logical senatorial voice of Eastern Republicanism. Better lawyer than politician. Once snapped at the press, always a political error. Also made the mistake of becoming known as Uncle Andy Mellon's lawyer. Lives in S street's Presidential row. Keen, persuasive debater. Rated one of the ablest advocates of the Pennsylvania bar. No political panderer or pussyfooter, he sometimes has disappointed friends and invited attack from critics who, doing honor to his intellect and holding him to the loftiest standards of statesmanship, suspect him of politics if he falls short by their strict measurements. Hence, often under fire, but recognized as one of the Senate's best minds.

Paved Road Never Costly If It Passes Your Farm

By Robert Quillen.

The chief cause of our woes is the past and present indifference of the individual citizen.

The ordinary citizen enjoys the benefit of public schools, churches, parks, paved walks, courts of law and other elements of civilization without knowing or caring how these things are provided.

Public business isn't his business. He calls each subdivision of government "they". He feels no personal concern if the court house is falling down for want of repair or an industry is dying for want of protection. At most he wonders why somebody doesn't do something.

We can't build or preserve a nation while the average citizen feels that way.

He must learn the meaning of citizenship. He must learn to regard this country as his.

When prominent statesmen make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the world he must feel the same personal shame that would bow his head if a member of his family disgraced himself.

When a public official steals or wastes money, he must feel as resentful as though every cent came out of his own pocket.

When he sees a tractor with lugs defacing a surfaced highway, he must feel as he would if the same vehicle tore up his lawn.

The corruption of police, the stupidity of lawmakers, the negligence of officials and the failures of our judicial system should offend him as though the guilty ones were his personal employes—as, indeed, they are.

He should regard taxes as money invested in caring for his property.

That point of view and that frame of mind are vital to true citizenship.

This is your country—not "theirs". Its parks, streets and public institutions are yours in precisely the same sense that shares of stock are yours.

When you realize that and learn to feel the responsibility of citizenship, this nation will be cleansed and protected and developed as a private garden is. But never until then.

Apartment House Sold for $225,000

Buchanan Estate Buys Highview Structure.

Highview Apartments South, five-story building containing 60 apartments, at 2505 Thirteenth street northwest, was sold at public auction yesterday to National Savings & Trust Co. and H. Prescott Gatley, trustees of the estate of James A. Buchanan, for $225,000. They were the only bidders. The sale was advertised by American Security & Trust Co., trustee. Vernon G. Owen was the auctioneer.

The building is the southernmost of two erected in 1925 by Highview Construction Co., the northern building now being known as Castle Manor. B. Stanley Simmons was their architect and George E. Wyne, their builder. Their estimated cost was $800,000.

The Highview structure is of brick, stone and reinforced concrete. Its current assessed valuation is $287,240 of which $27,240 represents land and $260,000, building.

Motorist Relates Robbery.

James Miles, colored, 27, of 207 L street southwest, told police he was robbed yesterday of $52 by two armed Negroes, who jumped to the running board of his machine at Fourth and I streets northwest.

Boys Taken From Raft at Sea

For four days John Pitzer, of Oklahoma City, and Arthur Martin bobbed around on the Gulf of Mexico on a 4-by-6-foot raft, fighting off sharks, suffering almost unbearable hunger and thirst, before they were picked up by the liner Santa Elena and taken to New York. They stowed away on a Japanese steamer, then took to the raft when they discovered their ship was going to California instead of the Far East. Photo was taken as they maneuvered their tiny craft to the liner's side.

"Feelers" Out On Recognition Of Manchukuo

By Kendall Foss.

Recognition of the Japanese-created State of Manchukuo is in the wind again.

The word is being bruited about the world, and more than one chancellor is listening closely. Berlin particularly is responding to the bait, displaying a willingness to nibble. But London and Paris are alert, and Washington is not in ignorance.

On March 1, Henry Pu-Yi, chief of State of Manchukuo, is to ascend the Manchu throne and restore what are usually referred to as the departed glories of the Manchu Empire. The occasion may supply a sought-for opportunity.

Germany Stands to Gain.

Germany has the most to gain and the least to lose by such a switch in policy. There are interesting trade possibilities, opportunities for advantageous friendships, and presumably pleasing repercussions in Europe wrapped up in the step. On the debit side, there is only the cooling of relations with China to be considered—not a particularly serious factor. The Wilhelmstrasse is reported to hold Germany's withdrawal from the league released her from obligations not to speak to the newcomer in the family of nations.

Recognition of Manchukuo would evoke friendly feelings in Tokyo. These feelings might easily be converted into an understanding. And an understanding between Berlin and Tokyo could not fail to influence England's continental policy. If there is going to be trouble in Europe in the near future, Germany will want to know that England is going to stay away. An excellent method of assuring this is the sort of understanding with Japan which would mean Britain's interests in China might be jeopardized should she go against Germany in Europe.

Furthermore, there is a certain natural gravitation between Germany and Japan. Their philosophies are not unlike and they possess a common interest in the Soviet Union.

Germany used to take 1,000,000 tons a year of Manchurian soya beans. About a year ago, she placed a stiff duty on them. Swapping a tariff modification for some fat orders for machinery could be mutually interesting. Such a proposition is possible without recognition but recognition would unquestionably make it easier.

League Binds France.

For trade as well as political reasons, France, too, would not be averse to establishing relations with Manchukuo. Especially if Germany moves. France would like to establish an offset. Nevertheless, France can scarcely follow such inclinations. Her league obligations are still binding and her little friends in the league would be more than upset to see their protector thus sanction forcible detachment of territory. The precedent would be too embarassing in view of latent European possibilities.

Nor would Britain be likely to act unless the United States were ready. And of this there is not the slightest official indication.

Washington remains cold to signs this ticklish subject is about to receive another airing. Former Secretary Henry L. Stimson proclaimed the attitude of the United States toward Manchukuo in January, 1932. That policy still holds. Neither legal nor practical considerations seem to call for a revision.

Legally, Manchukuo is a living violation of the Nine-Power Treaty which guarantees the territorial integrity of China. Practically, there are few, if any, visible disadvantages in the present state of nonrecognition. There is small reason to suppose trade possibilities are affected, while recognition might easily estrange the Chinese market proper to a painful degree.

Cloud on U. S. Horizon.

One cloud mars the serenity of the horizon so far as this country's continued nonrecognition of Manchukuo is concerned. The Japanese have shown signs of an intention to use recognition as an ace in obtaining a revision of the 5-5-3 naval ratios in 1935. They have mentioned refusing to attend the conference and are believed to be considering supporting a demand for a Manchukuan navy.

Both alternatives are unpleasant to a nation fundamentally interested in peace in the Pacific. If such possibilities develop into serious probabilities, it might be found advisable to head them off by extending recognition.

At the moment, nothing could embarrass Japan more than American recognition of Manchukuo. Until the bandits have been finally suppressed and order completely established, the necessity of protecting Americans and their property would be anything but welcome.

Hotel Man's Son Injured Coasting

Jefferson Ford, jr., 10, was recovering yesterday from injuries in a sledding accident and was still trying to figure out how it happened.

Policeman William K. Snider found the boy wandering in a daze on the Rock Creek-Potomac parkway, near Q street bridge, late Tuesday. Two lads coasting nearby told Snider their chum had hurt himself in a spill and said he lived at the Lafayette hotel.

The policeman took Jefferson home and learned he is the son of the president of the Lafayette Hotel Co. The boy was treated by a physician.

Grebe Puzzled At Icke's Bar From Interior

Idaho Irrigation Congress Leader Says He Knows No Reason.

Boise, Idaho, Feb. 21 (AP).—George W. Grebe, an attorney of Kuna, Idaho, declared in a telephone conversation last night "there must be some mistake" regarding an announcement yesterday by Secretary Ickes in Washington barring the Idahoan from further "solicitations and representations" in the Interior Department.

Secretary Ickes made public a letter he wrote to Grebe, president of the Federal Irrigation Congress, saying the latter had "loosely misrepresented the facts relative to allotments of public funds for Federal projects."

Commenting on the statment, Grebe said:

"The only solicitation in which I indulged while back there was for the Salmon River Tunnels. I assume this means the department is unfriendly to these tunnels. It may also be Ickes' offensive to break up the Federal Irrigation Congress."

The Salmon River tunnels are part of a proposd $6,700,000 projct for bringing watr from th Salmon River into the Boise River to augment water supplies for the 300,000-acre Boise Valley.

The Federal Irrigation Congress was formed three years ago at a meeting in Boise called by Grebe to which came settlers from Federal irrigation projects in several Western States.

Grebe, a former Idaho State Senator and a Republican, several weeks ago in Washington advocated a relief plan for projects in Idaho, Nebraska, Montana, Utah, Nevada and Colorado.

The relief he announced it was his intention to seek was along the lines of that proposed at the annual convention of the organization in Boise last fall.

Police Catch Man Taking Typewriter

Two policemen, patroling near North Capitol street and New York avenue northwest, early yesterday, were astonished to see a figure crawl through a smashed gas station window.

The officers, Privates N. T. Imlay and L. J. Walker, edged closer and waited. A few minutes later the figure emerged. Two hands descended on the figure's shoulders and a typewriter dropped to the street.

The prisoner was taken to the Second Precinct Station. He said he was Elton L. Skinner, 24, of 2123 Eighteenth street northwest. He was held for investigation.

Roosevelt Linked With Hitler, Duce

W. R. Castle Sees Personal Liberty Wiped Out.

Boston, Feb. 21 (AP).—William R. Castle, Undersecretary of State during the Hoover Administration, declared last night that President Roosevelt's Administration had moved as had Hitler and Mussolini, and had wiped out personal liberty.

Congress, he charged, was a mere rubber stamp for the Roosevelt Administration, and was not living up to its oath. He predicted defeat for Republican office holders "who have blindly followed the President in radical departures from constitutional government."

The former State Department executive spoke to the Business and Professional Women's Republican Clubs here.

Man Asks $25,000, Says Cyclsit Hit Him

William L. Adams, 1326 Columbia road northwest, yesterday filed suit in District Supreme Court for $25,000 against the Western Union Telegraph Co., charging a messenger boy, on a bicycle, knocked him down.

Attorneys Alvin L. Newmyer and Lewis H. Shapiro declared Adams was crossing the intersection of Fourteenth street and Columbia road northwest, January 16, when the messenger, rounding a corner, collided with him.

Telephone Litigation Develops 'How Old Is Anne?' Complex

Life of an Instrument Is (Is Not) Said to Be 5 Years.

How long is the life of a telephone?

That question, innocent as it sounds, took up the time of an imposing array of legal talent, not to mention a District Supreme Court justice yesterday, and at the end of the debate, each side was calling its own.

For example, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. is seeking to forestall a 10 per cent reduction in telephone rates. To do that, the company must show that its valuation figures are properly reached. And part of the figures are obtained by charging off each year one-fifth of the cost of certain equipment, so that at the end of five years the equipment is technically nonexistent.

Not so, claims the Public Utilities Commission.

If, after the five-year charge-off has been made, and there still remains a perfectly good telephone, the company must count it in its equipment and not charge off a 100 per cent cost.

A case that will take weeks is unfolding. Actuaries who, one of them claimed, had figures that went far beyond mere mathematical computations, auditors and a host of others are being placed on the stand before Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

G. W. (DEFLATED).

George Washington ne'er told a lie
(This goes for trees and axes),
But in his day he never had
To swear to income taxes.

To falsify was not his line—
He simply didn't care to,
But back in George's time they had
No loss by storms to swear to.

All statements false he did abhor—
He knew no legal rackets;
But never did he know the urge
To dodge those upper brackets.

He walked the straight and upright path,
Obeying all conventions;
But still you know he didn't have
To swear to those "exemptions."

To any thought of subterfuge
He'd raise the wildest ructions
(He didn't have to sit all night
And figure those "deductions").

Against an urge to tell a lie
He'd adequate defenses;
He didn't know that item called
"Legitimate expenses."

He didn't know that awesome blank
With question after question,
To fill his heart with wicked thoughts
And hamper his digestion.

He never faced that double sheet
With all those numbered sections,
Demanding study through the night
And subsequent corrections.

He never had to fret and squirm
With eyes forlorn and beady,
And estimate the vast amounts
He'd given to the needy.

He fought wild tribes of savages,
He chased each Tuscarora,
But still he never had to face
A grilling from Pecora.

Historians agree he was Beyond dishonest statements;
Still in his time he never knew
The battle for abatements.

George Washington ne'er told a lie—
That rare distinction his is . . .
But in his day there never were
So many probes and quizzes.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Novels and Astronomy.

While we do not read works in pure literature with the hope or even the wish to acquire scientific information, I think poets and novelists ought to pay some elementary attention to objects like the moon. When Stevenson came to grief on his management of the moon in his novel "Prince Otto," he declared that the next book he wrote he would write it with an almanac. Perhaps this is what other novelists might do with profit.

Years ago Hugh McCulloch, a young Harvard graduate, whose promise of success was cut short by a lamentable early death, but whom I remember with admiration and affection, submitted a poem to the Century Magazine where the last line of every stanza was

The editors accepted the poem, but informed the poet that they were going to change the last line, inasmuch as the waning moon does not lie low in the west, but has the stubborn habit of performing that maneuver in the east. The young author was very angry and forbade them to meddle with his poem. "I am a poet, not an astronomer, and I shall place the moon where I please." To which the editor replied, "You can place the moon where you please in some magazines, but not in the Century." So they printed "weary" instead of waning, which made the young author very weary indeed.

Francis Brett Young, the admirable English novelist, wrote a novel called "The Crescent Moon," in which the crescent moon is frequently seen rising, which, of course, it never does; and in how many paintings have I seen the moon with its wrong side turned toward the sun!

Novelists use the moon for decorative purposes, sometimes as spotlight for the heroine. I read a very famous novel once where the heroine dies, and the hero decides to bury her, which, after all, is the least he can do. She is lying on the ground and the moon is shining on her dead face. As he digs the grave, the moon remains in exactly the same place, the laws of nature being suspended for the immediate purpose of the author. Finally, when the grave is completely dug, he lowers her body, and where it rests on the bottom of the pit the moon illumines her face, while the rest of her body is in darkness. The effect is startling.

I am convinced that the reason why there were so few first-rate German novels in the nineteenth century was because of the constant and sentimental manipulation of the moon. In music and in lyrical poetry the Germans were magnificent; but you can count all the first-rate novels written in German in the last century on the fingers of one hand. I used to wonder why; and after mature reflection I decided it was the moon.

N. Y. Hotels Hit By Health Raiders

LaGuardia Orders Drive to Clean Up Kitchen.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Squads of health department inspectors toured big hotel kitchens at the order of Mayor LaGuardia today, leaving in their wake a series of summonses alleging violations of the sanitary laws.

Hotel men, informed by Health Commissioner John L. Rice that results of the investigation were being reported "directly to Mayor LaGuardia," recalled the mayor had threatened to "crack down" on them for refusing to negotiate with the union that called a strike of kitchen employes on January 26.

Led by a man in a doughboy's helmet carrying an American flag, some 2,000 strikers paraded past the principal hotels today shouting "don't scab—fight."

Prisons Filled By School Jam, Teachers Told

Blocking Education Turns Youth to Drifting, N.E.A. Group Hears.

Cleveland, Feb. 21 (AP).—A belief that the Nation must either expand its public school capacity or enlarge its penitentiaries was voiced today by one of the country's leading educators as eight subgroups of the National Education Association assembled here in conventions.

Expressing the above opinion, S. D. Shankland, executive secretary of the National Association's Department of Superintendence, said the problem arises from the fact that thousands of young men and women, unable to find employment, also are unable to return to the already crowded schools. He added:

"Blocked from returning to school, they've gone to the streets or the open road and an increasing number has drifted to the reformatories or penitentiaries. I'm surprised only the increase has not been greater."

Dr. Shankland was one of the speakers today in the convention of the National Association of Deans of Women.

In separate session, the National Vocational Guidance Association began a period of discussion seeking an answer to the question: "What is the quickest and best way of getting the Nation's unemployed back to work?"

Carroll R. Reed, superintendent of schools in Minneapolis, in one of the speeches before this group, stressed the need of giving greater attention to the occupational work of the children in the schools.

Preview Reveals "Beloved" as Pretentious and Potent Drama—Some Aftermaths

Epochal Story Covers Entire Cycle of Life

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

It is a pretentious picture that Universal will disclose for the first time in Washington at the special midnight, holiday preview scheduled for the Rialto Theater tonight at 11:30.

Screened for two curious dramatic desks yesterday noon, through the sheer generosity of Manager Rodney Collier of the Rialto, "Beloved," the production in question, revealed itself as one of those epochal, if not epic, stories that span several generations with considerable comprehensiveness.

It is a subject which earnestly, and not unsuccessfully, essayed to do for music and musical composition what "The Conquerors," "The World Changes" and "The Power and the Glory" did for politics, finance and industry, and what "Broadway to Hollywood" did for the theater—trace a family history through three generations of trials, triumphs and tribulations.

Boles vs. Barrymore.

Since Universal evidently is determined to make a Lionel Barrymore out of John Boles—despite the fact that his metier is more nearly represented by such gay things as "My Lips Betray," in which he scored so emphatically with Lilian Harvey—he is cast in "Beloved" in the role that corresponds to those played by Richard Dix, Paul Muni, Spencer Tracy and Frank Morgan, in the order named, in the earlier productions cited above.

The picture opens with the celebration of his babyhood by the playing of exquisite chamber music in the home of his father in Vienna in 1838. The love and appreciation of fine music are born in his blood and bred in his bone. The vicissitudes of his life are followed through the drudgery of teaching violin and piano, in the South before the war, in New York afterward, and through the specious exploitation of a picturesque figure patterned after the late P. T. Barnum, the honky-tonks of the Bowery and the weary rounds of the publishing houses.

Vicissitudes of War.

Carl Hausman, artist at heart and hack through force of circumstances, experiences the turmoil and travail of a revolutionary outbreak in his native Austria, the War Between the States in this country, the Spanish-American War and the Great War. His renegade son is lost in the Spanish-American conflict and his grandson survives the recent European holocaust to become the George Gershwin of his day.

In his last noble gesture, Carl, his beloved wife passed on before him, sits in a box and hears the symphony that has been the creative work of a lifetime acclaimed a masterpiece as it is played by a mighty orchestra. And there the chronicle ends.

There is a vast amount of beauty in "Beloved"—beauty of spirit, beauty of scene and beauty of music. There are moments of exalted drama, poignant and penetrating; intervals of excitement and thrill and, it must be said, still other periods in which the picture sags away from the high level of excellence that characterizes the greater part of its length.

The Blonde Miss Stuart.

Gloria Stuart appears in the principal feminine role opposite Mr. Boles and shares the necessity with him of putting on years up to a decade beyond the three score and ten that ostensibly marks the span of life. This is a bit of an order for them both. Neither Mr. Boles nor Miss Stuart is of such physical contour as to make realistic old age a matter to be simply solved by white wigs and palsied hands. Their cheeks are still round and their eyes still bright through all the disguising devices of the make-up experts.

However, this is carping criticism of a picture that reflects such admirable purpose, adheres to so rigid an observance of wholesomeness and high idealism and manifests such obvious sincerity as "Beloved."

You will find on the Rialto screen at midnight tonight a picture which, while not perfect, swings the balance so far on the side of substantial worth that you will remember it gratefully for many a day.

It begins to look a little like old times in the motion picture business. Perhaps "sound" is the word instead of "look." At any rate, the point is that Norma Talmadge, returning to New York from abroad and prancing down the gangplank smothered in flowers sent to the boat by Georgie Jessel, declares that she will resume picture making for an English producing company in two months, and Gloria Swanson, denying reports that she has secretly filed divorce proceedings against her current husband, Michael Farmer, has signed a contract to make a series of pictures in Hollywood. Now, if Mary Pickford and Lillian Gish will only express a similar determination to carry on, we will be pretty well back to where we started! Worse things could happen.

Sally and Her Famous Feather Fan

Here is the famous Sally Rand, sensation of the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, with one of her provocative ostrich plume fans, two of which she waves with counterfeit abandon in "Bolero," the new film play coming to the Earle screen on Friday. "Bolero," it will be recalled, is the George Raft starring vehicle in which Carole Lombard makes her debut as a dancer, scarcely less sensational than Miss Rand—or more cumbersomely garbed!

Four Years Old.

"The Green Pastures," Marc Connelly's modern miracle play and the theater's back of the hand to depression, will be four years old next Monday, February 26.

On that date, the far-famed drama will be presented under the auspices of Ohio University, at Athens, Ohio. The performers in Athens will be the 1,460th presentation of the play since its New York opening in the Mansfield Theater on February 26, 1930.

This fourth season undoubtedly will be entered in the record book as its most important because it was the one that witnessed the Dixie triumph of "de Lawd" and his dusky angels.

Harrison Still "De Lawd."

The beginning of the fifth year of "The Green Pastures" finds Richard B. Harrison, 69-year-old actor, still giving his reverent portrayal of the Deity. Interesting in this connection is the comment of Brooks Atkinson, scholarly commentator of the New York Times, who had this to say a week or so ago:

" 'The Green Pastures' has done more of the Lord's work than any other modern play in English. It is still wandering around the country like the mendicant friars of Chaucer's time, and so long as that grand old man, Richard B. Harrison, is vigorous enough to play the part of the Lord there is no reason why 'The Green Pastures' should not go on forever."

One might inquire of Mr. Atkinson just what else it is doing. After all, a play can not achieve antiquity any faster than time itself passes. On that basis, "The Green Pastures" has never faltered.

Memory of an item that should have been set down here during Miss Skinner's week of repertoire at the National is revived by our research department. It answers the challenge of an esteemed and erudite afternoon contemporary, Mr. Edward de Star Melcher.

Lack of glamour in American women and of a sufficient number of glamorous women in the lives of American men are the compelling considerations keeping Cornelia Otis Skinner's treasure-house of dramatic solo-dramas barren of American characters, our research department was informed.

She thinks Dolly Madison is the most glamorous American woman and "the woman who helped assassinate Lincoln" about the most interesting from a dramatic point of view. So they may be added to her repertoire of famous historical characters some day.

Another Post Mortem.

As long as we are started on post mortems, one more won't hurt.

Miss Isabelle M. Parks, one of this column's most faithful correspondents and ambiguity pointer-outers, wants to know in these words:

"Am I unusually stupid, or are you just a little crazy, or what is it all about?

"Of course, I read your review of 'The Lost Patrol,' and I could swear that you said very distinctly that the little band was reduced one by one until only the sergeant, McLaglen, was left, and that he died just as the rescue party arrived. Then I read Mr. Melcher's review. At the end of his story, he asked a question—Should McLaglen have been rescued at the last minute? to which he replied—'I think not.'

"Well, that was all right with me. I thought maybe Mr. Melcher had an argument with some one as to whether the ending should have been changed to permit McLaglen to be rescued, and that he voted in the negative.

"Then I went to see the movie and I certainly came out in a daze. I simply can't see how you figured that McLaglen was killed at the end. When he ducked to the ground at the appearance of the last Arab, I thought he had been shot, but when he arose you got a good look at him from practically all angles. There was no sign of a wound, and I couldn't see that he gave any indication of having been wounded. Of course, he didn't speak when asked where his men were, but, after all, that was natural enough.

"Why did you think he was killed? I now think Mr. Melcher must have been objecting to the ending as he understood it, and I rather agree that having had so much gore they might as well kill McLaglen off and make it unanimous. Maybe you were familiar with the original story, and know in that everybody died. As for me, I don't even know if there was an original story from which this versio was adapted."

A Fielder's Choice.

As a matter of fact, RKO-Radio, when they made this talking version of one of the most popular silent pictures ever made in England, left the ending intentionally indecisive and non-committal in order to permit each spectator to supply the ending in his own mind which he individually preferred.

In the original version, the entire patrol was killed off—which seems to this typewriter the logical climax of the story.

To be sure, one doesn't see McLaglen, the ostensibly surviving sergeant actually survive. Neither does one see him perish. The rescue party rides immediately away, giving the impression that there was nothing left to rescue. Furthermore, the character of the sergeant would have suffered the deprivation of an equal meed of heroism with the others if he had lived after they all had died.

To this column, Mr. McLaglen was dead at the end of the picture. Anyone wishing him alive then has only to believe it and it is so.

Nothing could be fairer than that.

Despite a West Coast opening second only to that of "Little Women" and a critical appraisal by preview committees of which the following are typical samples, "The Lost Patrol" did not do a profitable week in Washington.

"Gripping, powerful tragedy of the futility of war. A strong plea for peace."

"The strongest war drama since 'Journey's End.'"

"My work necessitates my seeing many pictures. Unless I am greatly mistaken, this will be one of the outstanding pictures of 1934."

"Everyone to whom I have described the picture is demanding to know when they can see it."

These are the expressions of critical favor bestowed upon this exceptional film. But Washington would have none of it—or, at most, very little.

Pound of-Flesh Note.

Association Buys Hall.

Shenandoah Junction, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Purchase of the International Order of Odd Fellows hall from the grand lodge has been announced by the Shenandoah Junction Community Association for use as a town hall.

All Safe

Carrier Pigeon Is Rescued, Message Forwarded.

Thanks to Uncle Sam's parcel post service, a carrier pigeon, forced down by snow and cold while bearing a birthday message from the Grafton (W. Va.) High School to President Roosevelt, was safe at the home of its owner, Dr. Roy Matthews, of Washington, yesterday.

Thanks also to the Postoffice Department, the President has received the greeting.

The pigeon took refuge at the home of Mrs. Lynn Magruder, at Kearneysville, W. Va. She mailed the message to the White House and the bird to Dr. Matthews after H. H. Dismer, local merchant, notified her that it belonged to the Washingtonian.

Patronage Charge Made in CWA Row

Beehler Presents Letter to Neely From Lantz.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Charges that leaders in the fight against the Barbour County CWA and welfare boards were seeking patronage were lodged today with the State CWA investigating committee by William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator.

Producing a letter he said was written by W. H. Lantz, Barbour County Democratic chairman, to United States Senator M. M. Neely, Beehler, read into the record the following quotation:

"We further intend to see that the party patronage is awarded to those most deserving rather than to renegade Republicans or Democrats, who may be found in either camp during the course of a campaign."

Elliott Charged With Slaying Boy

Indicted for Killing Youth Last December.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Dewey Elliott was indicted by the Berkeley County grand jury here yesterday for the slaying of Luther Lamb, 15, shot as he was returning home from school in mid-December.

Elliott was arrested Monday. He has denied all knowledge of the shooting.

Police Grab Three After Cafe Holdup

Victims Identify Trio in Hagerstown Robbery.

Three Negroes, arrested several hours after the William Bond restaurant was robbed were identified by the proprietor. One Negro covered Kenneth Bond with a revolver, another seized the proprietor and the third emptied the register of $15.

The safe in the American Oil Co. filling station containing $37 also was stolen early today.

Elmer Halderman, alias George Vincent, 50, alleged safe cracker, will act as his own attorney when he goes to trial for breaking and entering a local bottling plant. He told Judge Frank G. Wagman he was competent to handle his own case and also asked for a certified copy of the indictment.

Freeze Stops Town's Water.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Wayne Heights, 2 miles east of here, was without water today for the second time in two weeks. A temporary by-pass water line, constructed after the 6-inch main was broken by a steam shovel during construction of a bridge across the Antietam Creek, was frozen yesterday.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Boy Scouts of Hagerstown and Washington County will collect bed clothing and wearing apparel for the Red Cross Saturday.

Chamber Asks County Fusion For Maryland

23 Would Be Combined Into 8, Pursuant to Roosevelt Plan.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). The Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce has been asked by the Annapolis chamber to cooperate in a movement for the consolidation of the 23 counties of Maryland, in line with the economy program of the Roosevelt Administration.

The Annapolis chamber stated that the President's plan of public works program is aimed at reorganization of State governments, including the consolidation of counties and their taxing powers, to the end that old political machines which profit from the existing set-ups be torn down. The Annapolis chamber quoted an economist as saying that eight counties would serve Maryland as well as the present 23, and would cut county taxes in half.

Counties should have larger areas as the automobile has simplified travel, removing the necessity for small units, and hence population should limit the extent of county areas, the Annapolis chamber said.

Williamsport Nominations.

Williamsport, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). The Progressive ticket here has nominated the following for the town election March 5: Richard G. Hawken, candidate for burgess; Charles W. Harsh, for assistant burgess, and Harry H. Shank and John A. Conley for commissioners.

Hawken is now assistant burgess. Burgess G. A. Miller, who has served two terms, declined to be a candidate.

Dance Given At Sail Loft By Friedells

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the nicest of the last parties before Easter was the dance given last evening by Capt. Wilhelm Friedell, U. S. N., and Mrs. Friedell for their attractive debutante daughter, Miss Lucie Friedell, in the sail loft at the navy yard.

The sail loft, with its background of dark green palms and colorful array of flags and pennants ruled by Old Glory at one end of the hall, was a colorful setting for the gayety of the Capital younger set, who were out for one more glorious evening before settling down for a few weeks of much needed rest.

The presence of many blue-uniformed midshipmen, on a short furlough from the Naval Academy on the Severn River, added to the zest of the evening and the color of the scene.

Miss Friedell received her guests with her father and mother, standing before a background of palms. Mrs. Friedell was costumed in pale pink chiffon, and her daughter was wearing a becoming frock of white chiffon, sprinkled with silver and with touches of silver and rhinestones on the shoulders and at the back. Her corsage was of pink roses and lilies of the valley.

For several hours the merry throng danced, and at midnight a supper was served. Later there was more dancing and then the young society members returned to their homes and the quiet of the remaining Lenten season.

Mrs. Carl Lamen was hostess at a small luncheon at the Carlton yesterday.

Mrs. F. Douglas Pine will give a dinner at the Shoreham this evening for her guest, Miss Nancy Guptill, of Sudbury, Mass.

Mrs. Charles H. Fullaway entertained at luncheon yesterday in the garden restaurant of the Carlton Hotel for ten guests.

Among the dinner groups at the Shoreham last evening was a party which included Maj. and Mrs. Ralph G. Barrows, U. S. A.; Maj. and Mrs. Thomas E. Bourke, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. and Mrs. Robert E. York, U. S. A.; Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle, Mr and Mrs. Elijah Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Hardy Todd, Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. William Goodwin.

Miss Anna Fadden Hostess Tonight.

Miss Anna Genevieve Fadden will entertain at a dance this evening in her home at 2040 S street in honor of Miss Helen Jeannette Fadden and Miss Gladys Irene Anderson, who were graduated from the College of William and Mary last year. Also in the receiving line will be Dr. Francis J. Fadden, jr., of Englewood, N. J.; Miss Bernice McGuire, Mrs. Michael J. Ready and Mrs. Francis J. Ready.

Mrs. Sutton McKee was hostess at a small luncheon party yesterday at the Carlton.

Mrs. Ralph L. Sabin entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham in honor of Mrs. Howard Hanger, of Paris, and Mrs. Lloyd M. Tillman, of Philadelphia. The guests remained for bridge after luncheon. Covers were laid for 50.

Mrs. E. M. Weaver, widow of Maj. Gen. Weaver, with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. Sewall, have moved to 3505 Rodman street, Cleveland Park, where they will make their home.

The marriage of Miss Louisa McCarthy Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Carson, of Killahevlin, Riverton, Va., to Lieut. Thomas David Ferguson, Air Corps, will take place on Saturday evening, March 10, at 8 o'clock, in the bride's home. Miss Carson has chosen as her maid of honor and only attendant her sister, Miss Virginia Lockhead Carson. Lieut. Ferguson's groomsmen will be cousins of Miss Carson, Mr. Frank J. McCarthy, jr., of Richmond and Lexington; Mr. Julian Binford McCarthy and Mr. William Holliday McCarthy, of Richmond, and Mr. Harold Smith, of Riverton.

Miss Carson's Bridal Set for Saturday.

Capt. S. R. Hurt, of Lexington, Va., is a guest at the Dodge Hotel and is accompanied by Mrs. J. M. Hurt, of Blackstone, Va.

Mrs. Henry C. Morris was hostess to a group of friends at luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in compliment to Mrs. Everett Bacon, of Montclair, N. J., who is visiting Dr. and Mrs. John W. Turrentine in Washington.

Mrs. Florence Tarr Martin, of Orange, N. J., gave a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday for her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Radford E. Mobley, whose wedding took place at 11 o'clock in the morning at St. Alban's, with Dr. Charles Warner officiating. Mrs. Mobley is the former Miss Barbara Francis Martin. Following the luncheon the couple departed on a wedding trip.

Much interest is being shown in the Manassas Battlefield Ball, to be given next Tuesday at the New Willard by Bull Run Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans. In addition to those previously mentioned, the following will act as patrons and patronesses:

Princess Margaret Boncampagni, Dr. Leonidas Pitamic, Minister of Yugoslavia; the Director of the Budget and Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, the former Senator and Mrs. Davis Elkins, Senator and Mrs. Mason L. Bachman, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Representative Zebulon Weaver, Representative Henry B. Steagall, Representative and Mrs. Lamar Jeffers, Representative Virgil Chapman, Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph, the District of Columbia Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, the District of Columbia Commissioner and Mrs. George E. Allen, State Senator John W. Rust, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, the Solicitor General and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Rogers Young, Mrs. Eugene Barr, division president, U. D. C.; Mrs. Fred L. Volland, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. R. Dickinson Jewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Adair, and Mr. John H. Small.

Chancellor Gray Host to Faculty

Entertains American U. Groups Today.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of the American University, and Mrs. Gray, will entertain this afternoon and evening at their residence on the university campus.

The afternoon guests are the members of the graduate faculty of the American University and their wives. At the tea tables the following ladies will pour: Mrs. Frank Collier, Mrs. Charles C. Tansill, Mrs. F. L. Benton and Mrs. Harry Johnson. Miss Hazel Feagins and Miss Sara H. Dow also will assist.

In the evening the guests will be the members of the faculty of the College of Liberal Arts and their wives. These ladies will assist Mrs. Gray: Mrs. John Bentley, Mrs. Walter Shenton, Mrs. Wesley Gewehr and Mrs. Will Hutchins.

Monte Carlo Ballet to Give Concert Sunday

The Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, officially sponsored by the hereditary Princess Charlotte of Monaco, which is acclaimed in Europe for its artistic value and beauty, and which heretofore has been seen in this country only in New York, will come to the Capital for two appearances on Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening, March 4 in the National Theater.

Diplomatic representatives of foreign countries and Washingtonians representing the arts will be invited to be patrons.

The dance concert has been widely acclaimed for colorful, picturesque and authentic form. Col. Vasily de Basil, formerly an officer of distinction in the Russian army, and more recently director of the Russian Opera in Paris, directs the company.

Among those who will attend the performance are Miss Moira Archbold, Senator Bronson Cutting, Mrs. Pierre Gaillard, Mr. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Baron Ungern-Sternberg, Lady Julia Reckitt, Miss Lisa Gardiner, Maj. and Mrs. Richard La Garde, Mrs. Louis Ecker, Mrs. D. K. McCarthy, Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, Mrs. John Waldon, Mrs. Frank Frost, Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, Mrs. G. T. Hollister, Col. and Mrs. B. E. Ederton.

Students of dancing from the Chevy Chase Seminary, King Smith Studio School, Trinity College, Arlington Hall and other private schools in the Capital will attend.

New Englanders Hosts at Dance

All States' Ball Tonight Marks Washington's Anniversary.

All States will honor the memory of Washington in an elaborate program and ball tonight in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel. The New England Society is sponsoring the ball.

A floor show will be presented by Mr. Phil Hayden.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Dr. Clifton P. Clark, president of the Sons of the American Revolution, will speak. Mrs. Oreon Marie McKee, president of the Society for Creative Artists, will recite an original poem on patriotism.

During the intermission of dancing there will be songs by the George Washington University Glee Club, and a pageant featuring early American dances by the Capital Society of the Children of the American Revolution.

The executive chairman is Miss Betty Durr. Mr. Elmer E. Field, president of the society, heads the committee on arrangements.

Among the guests expected to attend are the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Ewing Y. Mitchell; the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Robert Walton Moore; Senator Capper, Senator Frederic Walcott, Senator and Mrs. Fred Brown, Senator and Mrs. Jesse Walcott, Senator and Mrs. Robert Reynolds, Senator Richard Russell, Representative Isabella Greenway, Representative and Mrs. Schuyler Merritt, Representative and Mrs. Charles Tobey, Representative and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Representative and Mrs. Edward Kenney, Representative and Mrs. D. Lane Powers, Representative and Mrs. Edward C. Moran, Representative and Mrs. Herman Kopplemann and Representative and Mrs. Charles Bakewell.

Ambassador Saito Feted by Attache

Col. Shizuichi Tanaka Is Host at Reception.

The Military Attache of the Japanese Embassy, Col. Shizuichi Tanaka and Mme. Tanaka, entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock in honor of the recently arrived Ambassador of Japan, Mr. Hiroshi Saito and Mme. Saito, in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel.

The Japanese colors of red and white were used as the motif of the decorations. Clusters of carnations, tulips and buddleia were arranged about the room. On the tea table were several large cakes with icings molded into reproductions of the Japanese flag.

The Ambassador and Mme. Saito received with their hosts. Mme. Saito wore a gown of brown crepe with a hat to match, and Mme. Tanaka was in black lace.

The Japanese Consul General in New York, Mr. Kensuke Horinouchi, who came to Washington yesterday to greet the new Ambassador and Mme. Saito, was a guest.

The guests numbering 200, included the higher ranking officers of the Capital's Army and Navy set and their families.

Constance Matlack, Mr. Lloyd to Wed

Mrs. Keith F. Warren, of Lovell, Me., has announced the engagement of her sister, Miss Constance Revere Matlack, to Mr. Edward Lloyd, jr., son of Commodore and Mrs. Edward Lloyd, of Annapolis and Wye House, Md.

Miss Matlack is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matlack, of Providence. She is a member of the Providence Junior League and for several years has made her home in New York.

Mr. Lloyd is the ninth in direct descent of the first Edward Lloyd, of Wye House. He is a graduate of Princeton and is associated with the New York office of the First of Boston Corporation.

Society Welcome Awaits Willards

Rear Admiral to Reside Here on Retirement.

A warm welcome awaits Rear Admiral and Mrs. Arthur L. Willard, who will return to Washington next week, after an absence of several years, to make their permanent home here.

Admiral Willard, who is now commandant of the Fifth Naval District and commandant of the Naval Operating Base at Norfolk, Va., was formerly commandant of the Washington Navy Yard. He and Mrs. Willard have a host of friends in the Capital.

The admiral will be retired on March 1, and with Mrs. Willard has taken an apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Randall, Mr. Hampson Are Married

The wedding of Miss Ida Virginia Randall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Randall, of Takoma Park, to Mr. Victor Peter Hampson, formerly of London, England, took place last evening at 6:30 o'clock in the Takoma Baptist Church. The church was decorated with ferns, palms, red roses and lighted tapers. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William E. LaRue in the presence of members of the family and a few intimate friends.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a becoming suit of chocolate brown faille with a blouse of white satin and a small, close-fitting hat of the same brown. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and forget-me-nots.

There were no attendants. Mrs. Randall, mother of the bride, wore a handsome gown of plum-colored velvet and a small black velvet hat. Mrs. H. W. Hicks, sister of the bride, who with Mr. Hicks came from their home in Elkins, W. Va., to attend the wedding, was wearing a gown of dark blue georgette and a hat to match.

Miss Barbara Martin Bride of Mr. Mobley

Radford E. Mobley, Washington correspondent for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Akron Beacon-Journal, Omaha World Herald and other Western newspapers, was married yesterday morning to Miss Barbara Martin, a school teacher of Maplewood, N. J.

The ceremony was performed at St. Albans Church by the rector, the Rev. Charles T. Warner. The bride is the daughter of Lawrence Martin, chief of the division of maps at the Congressional Library, and Mrs. Florence Tarr Martin. She was given in marriage by her mother. John Foscue, secretary to Representative John McDuffie, of Alabama, was best man.

Miss Danielson Named College League Envoy

Miss Emma L. Danielson, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. W. A. Danielson, of Washington, a member of the senior class at Mount Holyoke College, is one of the 24 undergraduates who have been chosen as delegates to the eighth annual meeting of the New England Model League of Nations.

The sessions will be held at Harvard University the week-end of March 8, with 33 colleges and universities taking part. Mount Holyoke will represent China, New Zealand, Finland and Luxembourg, with six delegates for each country.

The Model League, founded in 1927 by a group of colleges in New England, has the twofold purpose of stimulating interest in the League of Nations at Geneva and acquainting undergraduates with the problems of present-day diplomacy.

Following the general pattern of the real League of Nations, the Model League will conduct its work in six committees, discussing legal and constitutional questions and technical, general humanitarian, economic and political subjects.

Mrs. Peter Hill Dunn Plans Florida Journey

Mrs. Peter Hill Dunn will leave Washington the end of the week for Miami, Fla., where she plans to spend several weeks. Her aunt, Mrs. Harry Meem, with her small daughter, Eleanor, who is convalescing from an illness, will go to Florida as soon as Eleanor is able to travel. Mr. Meem and their other daughter, Anne, will motor South later to spend several weeks in Miami, and the family will return to the Capital together in the early spring.

Wave Shampoo Restores Luster To Harsh Locks

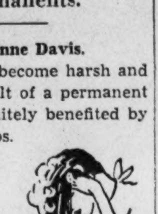
By Ruth Anne Davis.

Hair which has become harsh and brittle as the result of a permanent wave can be definitely benefited by the right shampoos.



On Connecticut avenue is a shop which has many trained operators, and many special preparations originated for the care of the hair. Among a wide variety of products is a permanent wave shampoo created to give luster and softness to coarse hair. This may be purchased in the shop or in stores which carry this excellent line of goods.

Operators will be glad to give shampoo advice to interested customers. They have all kinds of knowledge at their finger tips. Recently they told us about a permanent wave oil which, like the shampoo, is good for dry and harsh hair, and helps to set it in soft, natural waves. One bottle of this oil will last indefinitely, as it should be applied sparingly.

Trolley Pass Containers.

Now that street car passes are to be found in the pockets of most of us, a leather store made a wise move when it started featuring the small pass cases. These are made of leather exactly the size to hold the pass and protect it from tearing and bending. Sometimes it's comparatively easy to mislay a small bit of pasteboard and a leather container is more convenient to keep it handy.

They may be bought in plain Moroccan leather, brown or black, for as little as 25 cents.

* * * *

Mirrors as Brighteners.

Mirror trimmings are fashionable for the dining room and for the boudoir. A local store is featuring some mirror vanity boxes sure to give any dressing table a glamorous look.

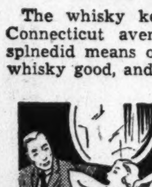
One size, which is about 6 by 10 inches, has a little drawer sliding out of one side. The smaller one simply opens at the top.

Mirror mats, either large or small, depending on the size of the vanity box, may be bought separately. The combination adds an air of brightness and richness to the room. The boxes are useful for tucking the powder and rouge away in order to keep the top of the dressing table less cluttered up, and the drawer less crammed with spillables.

* * * *

Whisky Improvers.

The whisky kegs on sale in a Connecticut avenue shop offer a splnedid means of making inferior whisky good, and good whisky better.



They're made of sturdy white oak, and bound with shiny brass bands. The interiors are well charred—all ready for use.

These kegs come on stands which have runners on either side to hold the glasses, six in all.

According to the proprietor of the shop, the sale of them is increasing as the liquor legality date approaches. In a case like this, the wise shopper will shop early.

A great many persons now are turning their cellars into private bar rooms. They will not fail to recognize in these kegs attractive and practical furnishings.

* * *

Lace Evening Gloves.

For a long time the gloves counters of many shops have had long lace mitts, but now a store on F street has long evening gloves made entirely of silky lace. During warm spring evenings these will be infinitely preferable to the heavier kids, and may perhaps add a bit of femininty to a costume.

They are 16-button length and come in green, eggshell, pink, blue, black, brown and white—$1.50.

Reduced Lighthouse Lamps.

The lighthouse lamp just now reduced from $3.50 to $1.98 is an ideal decoration for a cellar room, boy's den, or attic bedroom.

The brass base has little windows through which a low light shines when the lamp is on. The large bulb at the top is covered over with a parchment shade featuring the picture of a sailing vessel.

* * * *

Tropics Brought Here.

Some little time ago a very small shop opened downtown. It sold only a few tropical fruits. But a demand for these products grew more and more pressing. Gradually the shop expanded so that finally it sold not only unusual fruits but nuts, vegetables, jellies, sirups and jams.

Business continued to grow. Now, we notice there are flowers for sale there, too—beautiful long sprays of the beautiful forsythia, lovely bunches of hyacinth, dainty bouquets of forget-me-nots. Soon large shipments of Florida flowers will be coming in and we will be able to eat our tropical fruits in a truly tropical atmosphere.

Details of Many Recent and Gayest Fashions Originally Found in Garb of Simple Peasants

By Amos Parrish

New York, Feb. 21.—Looks as if fashion has been junketing in many lands, and come home with souvenirs galore, picked up among the peasants. And now they are gayly adapted to her own purposes.

Smocking, for instance, and shirring. You see both used on spring dresses—and both are found in the costumes of Russian and Austrian peasants. The dress at the top in the sketch has soft smocking at the shoulders.

The newest play fashions for this winter's resort wear and next summer's vacations have filched tartan plaids and peasant stripes, natural crashes and all kinds of roughly woven fabrics such as you see sturdy foreign country folk wear.

Play suits and shorts and sports frocks are made of these materials and gayly splashed with peasant colors. Sports accessories . . . handbags, beach bags and beach sandals, often come in such fabrics, too.

Tyrolian Influence.

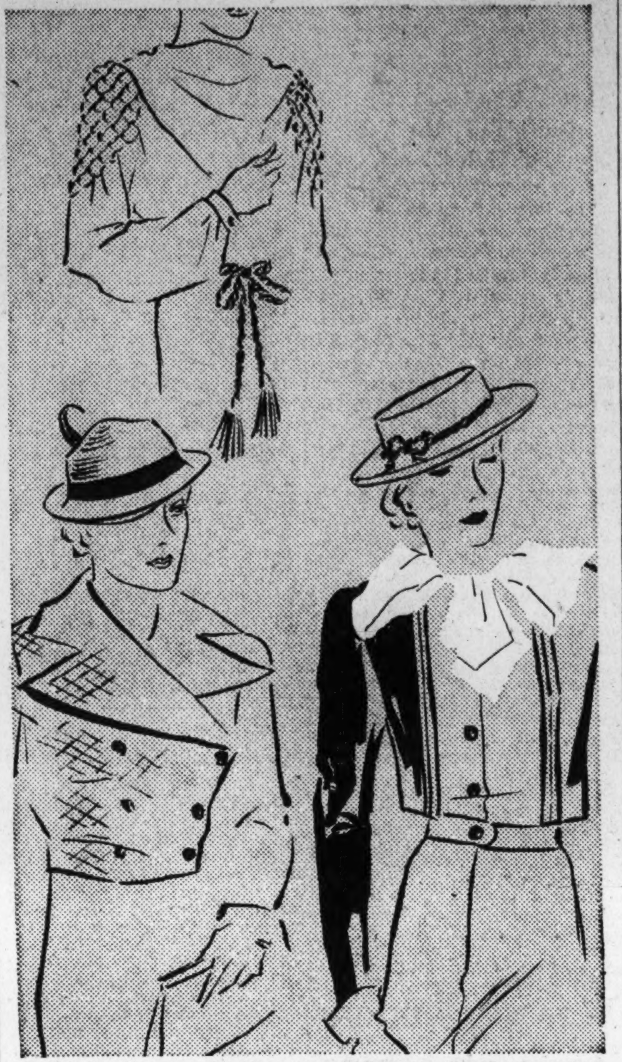
If you were to walk a Tyrolian Alpiner through a smart shop, there'd be several things that would look like home to him. Hats with tapered crowns and rakish feathers, copying the one twisting in his hands.

His jacket would be somewhere about too, though he'd never recognize such dressed-up versions of it. But the short, fitted styles in jacket frocks and in separate sports packets are distant cousins of the Tyrol jacket family. The figure at the lower left in the illustration wears a Tyrolian hat and jacket.

Mexican Influence.

The short, out-swinging bolero jacket is a Mexican peasant fashion. As are the dashing combinations of brilliant reds and yellows, blues and greens that make such vigorous patterns in new prints.

The flat, straight-brimmed hat with slightly curled edges is another Mexican peasant detail that's becoming one of the smartest of the new millinery fashions. There it is, worn with a bolero, on the figure at the lower right in the sketch.



Frocks of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Then you'll recognize the picturesque silhouette of a fisherman's head in dozens of new hats that roll off the forehead and come straight down to cover the neck in back.

The Breton sailor, with oval, rounded crown and gently rolling up brim comes from that picturesque northwestern shore of France.

So take it all in all, the peasants of many countries, if they knew or cared about it, might proudly boast of being the designers of some of the gayest and most original fashions worn in the most sophisticated places.

Here Are Gentlemen Who Prefer Brunettes

London, Ontario, Feb. 21 (AP). Long black tresses carry the most appeal for gentlemen of the University of Western Ontario. Blondes are out.

A poll of male students revealed an ideal girl equipped with blue eyes, a fair complexion, 122 pounds, and 5 feet 5½ inches in height to go with the long black hair. She would be a good dancer and bridge player, athletically inclined.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Hallucinations.

Some one asks for an article on hallucinations. The word comes from a Latin one, meaning to wander in mind. Stedman's dictionary defines hallucinations: A subjective perception of what does not exist.

In other words, a hallucination is a something that is imagined. As the term is generally used the "imagined" is limited to objects that are supposed to be seen—visual hallucinations; or supposed to be heard — auditory hallucinations. When we say a person has hallucinations we generally mean he thinks he sees animals, insects, or something else that is not where his mind places it.

A good illustration is the snakes that a man is supposed to see when he has delirium tremens. If the man can be convinced that the snakes are not there his mental condition is far less serious than it is if he persists in seeing them, accepts them as real, and can not be talked out of his belief.

If he is obstinate about his hallucinations we call them delusions. Men with delusional hallucinations are either insane or else they are pretty well on the way there. If the delusional hallucinations are fixed the outlook is even more serious.

An illustration of a fixed delusional hallucination is the man who hears voices where there are none, who believes he hears them, and who can not be talked out of it, and who will return to the theme whenever he gets a good chance. In every hospital for the insane there are people who say the Lord talks to them every little while and who can not be argued out of their belief.

By no means all of the hallucinations are the result of the mental state commonly called insanity. Certain drugs are quite likely to cause them. That alcohol has that effect is a matter of common information.

Wise Hostesses Will Not Allow Soup to Be Inferior to Other Courses; Susan Mills Tells How Several Tasty Varieties Are Prepared.

By Susan Mills.

It is often a mistake of the harassed hostess to be careless with the soup. She thinks, "Well, if the roast is right and the vegetables are right, nobody will pay attention to the soup."

But such is not the case. The French chefs understand the importance of soups, both as to their place in the serving of the dinner and their attractiveness to appetite and eye.

With a heavy dinner a thin consomme is suitable. With the clear soup as a base it may be varied with innumerable ways with the addition of diced vegetables, slender pieces of cooked spaghetti, cooked choped meats and so on.

Old-Fashioned Consomme.

Here is a good old-fashioned recipe for consomme. The given quantities will serve 18 persons, but the soup can be bottled and kept until ready to serve.

Simmer two pounds of beef from round, a knuckle of veal, one small fowl with five quarts of water. (Three pounds of beef should be used if fowl is omitted.) Then add one tablespoon each diced carrots, turnips and onions, a tablespoon salt, one-half teaspoon thyme, a teaspoon peppercorns, one bay-leaf and a sprig of parsley. Simmer one hour, strain through a wet cloth; cool. When ready to serve remove the layer of fat, simmer gently and add two tablespoons sherry and a lump of sugar.

A claret consomme may be made by adding a stick of cinnamon to a pint of the broth, then adding a pint of claret and a pint of hot water and a tablespoon sugar. Pour a cup of this over three beaten egg yolks, cook until spoon is coated, add the remainder, remove from fire and fold in three beaten egg whites and serve.

A word about cream soups. A thin cream soup may be served with a heavy dinner, but all thick soups should be presented when the rest of the fare is light. Here is a novel and delicious soup.

Cream of Watercress.

Cook two bunches of chopped watercress with a tablespoon of butter. Add a quart of white stock or beef stock. Simmer for 20 minutes, and add a tablespoon each of butter and flour, cooked thoroughly, with two cups of hot milk, one-half teaspoon salt and a dash cayenne. Serve garnished with a cup of whipped cream and a half cup of fresh cress tips.

Another interesting cream soup is Cream of Chestnut.

Cook together a tablespoon each of butter and flour; add two cups hot milk or stock, one-half teaspoon salt and a blade of mace. Add to a pint of chestnuts that have been shelled and blanched a dash of celery salt, nutmeg and cayenne and a quart of hot water. Cook together, drain chestnuts, mash and return to water in which they have been cooked. Add to cream sauce, bring to boiling point, add one beaten egg and a cup of hot cream and serve.

A little experimenting and additions of various ingredients will produce many delicious soups. As the chefs invent, let the housewife invent as well. An addition of this and that—and few trials and errors will eventually result in astonishing successes, and the housewife can serve a soup of her own invention with a sense of genuine pride.

Now that we are on the verge of returning wines, a suggestion about the suitable type with soups is in order. Sherry slightly cold, served in the slender stemmed glasses should accompany this course. Bread sticks or melba toast may be served.

Southeast Community Dance.

A dance, under the auspices of the Southeast Community Center, will be held in Buchanan Auditorium tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

Afternoon Coat of Novelty Wool

A wind-blown collar of summer ermine gives a breezy effect to this afternoon coat of beige novelty wool. The bracelet sleeves also add a new note.

Corset Covers Are Revived in Spring Fashions

Paris Modes Designed Along Lines That Require 1890's Methods.

Paris, Feb. 21. (U.P.).—If you aren't built that way, ladies, then you'll just have to wear corset covers, because that is what Worth, Patou, Le Long and the smartest of the Paris dressmakers have decreed for the 1934 clothing season.

What with Worth's spring flowers now abloom, and the curtains going up every day on his rivals' exhibits, there are plenty of new styles to see, and are they eye-fulls?

We haven't gone back to the directoire days, when a Frenchman remarked "so slight a veil remains that I hardly know whether the removal of its transparent folds would not be a gain to modesty," but we're rapidly getting there, particularly regarding bathing suit styles.

The Greeks not only had a word for it, but they also had some good lines for it, and this year's line is decidedly of the Greek influence. It is not a bad line, either, because it flatters our best figures and our not-so-best figures, and it can always be combined with new materials or other features to give the quality of novelty.

We are going to have folds and loops rather than ruffles and rouffs, and there is going to be so much white in the material that the men will have to wear smoked glasses.

Aside from that, you can throw your imagination around high shoes with buttons or lacings on the side instead of in front.

Also hats with brims and crowns. No more pancakes, freshman caps or clown hats. And again, take warning about the corset covers.

Mae Westian styles are here again.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If February 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m.

If you were born on February 22, you are ambitious enough never to be entirely satisfied with your present condition, and will by striving succeed in advancing your interests. You have enough stability of character not to allow success, or power to upset your equilibrium. Many times one's advancement is deterred by their underrating the ability of business adversaries, whose aspirations are the same as theirs. A good rule to remember is never to take anything for granted.

The child born on February 22, as soon as it is old enough, must be taught how to concentrate its attention on whatever it undertakes to do, whether it is a game being played or lessons to be learned. Children born on this date are very imaginative, and unless trained, are apt to let their minds wander, and become enveloped by the clouds that enfold their air castles. These children can be taught to be practical without warping their imaginative powers. Their creative ability is remarkable, and will be more apparent as they grow up.

South Carolina Party Tonight

State Society to Give George Washington Birthday Fete.

One of the outstanding social events in celebration of Washington's Birthday is the dance of the South Carolina State Society to be held at the Shoreham Hotel tonight. There will be dancing from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. with intermission for supper at 11 o'clock.

In the event of an early adjournment of Congress, this may be the last dance of the South Carolina Society this season.

The officers of the society are Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, president; Gen. R. L. Carmichael, Mr. Hugh E. Phillips, Gen. Francis Le J. Parker and Mr. F. William McMaster Woodrow, vice presidents; Miss Grace Roper, secretary; Mr. Ben. P. Fishburne, treasurer, and the following members of the executice committee: Senator E. D. Smith, Mr. Edgar Morris, Mr. Charles E. Jackson, Mrs. Alexander M. Bull, Mrs. R. L. Carmichael, Mr. J. Austin Latimer, Mr. Charles M. Galloway, Mrs. K. L. Hill, Mr. L. E. Boykin, Miss Rebecca Dial, Mr. Horace G. Smithy, Mr. Dixon Davis, Mr. Barnwell Aiken, Miss Theresa McDavid, Mr. R. J. Cheatham and Mrs. Bruce Card.

Blow-out Causes Plane Mishap.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

While returning to London after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British home secretary, is abducted, taken to a building resembling a prison, placed upon a gallows and told he will be hanged unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be executed the following morning for murder. A message arrives that Mrs. Brandt is waiting at Rossiter's home to give him fresh evidence. He is released, hears her story, promises a reprieve—and faints as he lifts the telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. When he regains consciousness he learns Brandt has been hanged.

On her way to Rossiter's home for dinner, Mrs. Brandt vanishes. Rossiter disappears. Scotland Yard is called. Young Detective Pank learns that Lord Edward engineered the abduction of Rossiter the night before Brandt's execution. Rossiter and Mrs. Brandt return. He tells detectives he and Mrs. Brandt went into hiding to escape from a mysterious band, of which Keynsham supposedly was a member. A key was sent to Rossiter by Brandt. The gang make desperate efforts to obtain possession of the key.

Keynsham rejoins his associates in France. He tells them Brandt sent the key to Rossiter as a matter of vengeance against his associates in the international ring. Rossiter refuses to turn over to Scotland Yard a mysterious box.

"I have every sympathy with you, Matterson," Sir Humphrey said, "and for that reason I am not going to lose my temper again. I look upon Lord Edward Keynsham, notwithstanding the grave suspicion which he has drawn upon himself by his recent behavior and by his association with criminals, as a man whom we must take seriously into account. If he has nothing illuminating to say—in other words, if he fails to justify himself—he must take his place with the others. He will gain nothing by making me wait. On the other hand, there has always been an unexplained mystery about this business, and that unexplained mystery may be better solved if I wait for his coming."

"Apart from the official point of view," Matterson persisted, "you are Mrs. Brandt's executor. She has expressed her wish to have the box opened at once."

"She has countermanded it this afternoon. I had a telephone message from her almost at the same moment as I received Keynsham's dispatch, begging me to wait for his arrival, when she herself would be present."

Matterson clenched his hands.

"Do you realize this, sir?" he demanded. "It would be perfectly possible for Keynsham to produce a small bomb in this room, wreck that box forever and destroy every record it contains."

"It might be possible, but he won't do it," was the bland reply. "In any case you and your men should be sufficiently alert to stop any action of that sort."

The subcommissioner's expression was for a moment darker even than before. Twice his lips parted and he was on the point of fatal speech. Twice he restrained himself.

"May I ask whether Lord Edward fixed any hour for his arrival?" he inquired.

Tells About Telegram.

"No exact hour. The telegram was handed in at Fokestone. He had to make a forced landing somewhere near Lympington. I understand that he is coming on by car."

Again the two men relapsed into silence. Matterson, notwithstanding his military career, or perhaps because of it, possessed a strictly official mind, and the present situation was intolerable to him. Sir Humphrey, who should have been a miracle of correctness, to whom the etiquette of the profession should have been sacred, was plainly inclined to temporize with what could be nothing less than criminal conspiracy. All because of the man's sister, Matterson told himself savagely! A home secretary influenced by a woman! The thing was indecent. * * *

There came at last the sound of a car stopping outside, voices, footsteps in the hall. The door was opened and closed. Detective Inspector Pank, with his arm in a sling, approached. There was a gleam of excitement even in his pale blue eyes.

"You can show them in," Sir Humphrey directed.

"Be careful that they are alone," Matterson added, curtly. "Keep a guard on all the doors and, unless Sir Humphrey has any objection, I should like you to remain, Pank. You can use your right am?"

"Perfectly well, sir. I trust, however, there will be no necessity. Lord Edward does not look very aggressive."

"Don't forget, Matterson," Sir Humphrey pointed out, as Pank left the room, "that this is our only chance of receiving a reasonable explanation of everything that has happened. That's my bargain with Keynsham, and I think it's worth waiting for. The contents of that box, however surprising they may be, might tell us nothing without an interpreter."

Keynsham Arrives.

The door was thrown open. Lord Edward entered, and by his side Katherine Brandt. Sir Humphrey gave a little start. Even Col. Matterson forgot for a moment his fury. Keynsham's forehead was bandaged, he was still in his flying clothes, and he walked with the help of a heavy stick. He was paler than any one in London had ever seen him before, but his voice when he spoke, anxious though it was, was full and strong.

"You got my message, Humphrey? What about it?"

"I have waited," Rossiter replied.

"Thank God!" was the fervent exclamation.

"You will have a good deal to explain today, you know, Edward," the home secretary continued. "I am not guaranteeing you any protection or any immunity. All that I am offering you is freedom of speech. You know Matterson? Here he is with half the fighting force of Scotland Yard surrounding us. We have been led a pretty dance by someone and he wants to get his own back. Katherine, do let me offer you a chair."

"It would be much more to the point if you offered Lord Edward one," she begged. "He has come straight up from the south coast after crashing near Folkstone, and he would not even wait to be bandaged. I had to do it in the car. Do be humane and give him something to drink."

"Sit down by all means," Sir Humphrey invited. "Here's your drink, Edward," he went on, mixing a stiff whisky and soda. "We will give you five minutes to pull yourself together."

Keynsham lingered for a moment, leaning heavily on the stick which he grasped with his left hand, his right on the back of the chair to which Sir Humphrey had pointed. He had the appearance of a man who had met with a more than ordinary accident. His eyes seemed to have receded farther into his head, the knuckles of the hand which gripped his stick showed white, his lips parted slowly and falteringly.

Inquires About Box.

"You are sure that you have not opened the box?" he asked, uttering every word as though he feared to part with it.

Sir Humphrey pointed to a green baize-covered receptacle which looked like a portable radio, and which stood upon a table close at hand.

"I have not," he declared. "More than once I have asked myself, Keynsham, why I should have shown you this consideration. Matterson, here, is furious with me. Anyhow, I have done it. There is the box unopened. In five minutes I am going to examine its contents."

Keynsham sank into his chair.

"Five minutes will be quite long enough," he muttered, swallowing half the contents of his tumbler. "Only the second crash I have ever had in my life. The worst of luck, too. I ran into a fog just this side of the channel. However, I'm here in time. Thank God for that!"

"For your own sake or for ours?" Matterson asked coldly.

"For every one's," was the curt reply * * *

The minutes ticked on. Presently Sir Humphrey rose quite calmly to his feet.

"The five minutes," he announced, "have expired."

Keynsham dragged his chair to the table and sat down opposite the box. Sir Humphrey lifted off its green baize cover, disclosing a strongly made coffer of oak with brass corners. On the top of it was stamped in gilt letters "The Keynsham Trust." From a groove underneath the handle Rossiter drew a key.

"I am now about," he said, fitting the key in the lock, "to open the box."

Pauses for Moment.

For a monent he paused and glanced quickly around. Matterson and Pank were standing one on each side of Keynsham in an attitude of intense watchfulness. Outside was silence. In the hall a policeman coughed. There was no sign whatever of any impending disturbance. Rossiter turned the key with firm fingers and pushed back the heavy lid. Every one leaned a little forward. Katherine Brandt was nervously clasping and unclasping her hands. Keynsham, though his face was still unusually pale, was fast recovering his composure. * * * Lying on the top of the box was a large calf-bound volume, also stamped in gold letters, "The Keynsham Trust." Underneath it were seven bulky packets of American bank notes. Sir Humphrey picked one up and turned it over in amazement. The bills were of the largest denomination he had ever seen.

"Good God!" he exclaimed. "I have never seen so much money in my life!"

"Don't bother about the notes," Keynsham begged impatiently. "I can tell you all about those in a few words. There are seven packets there with a million dollars in each. They are a special reserve fund of the Keynsham Trust. It was money we could find no profitable use for, so we locked it away for an emergency."

"And what, might one ask," Sir Humphrey demanded, "is the Keynsham Trust?"

Secret of Gang Revealed.

"The Keynsham Trust," he explained, "is the largest illicit business that has ever been known in the history of the world. It was started after the war as a collateral branch of the firm of Hamilton, Topps & Co., later Hamilton, Topps & Keynsham. In England and throughout Europe that firm, as you may know, does a large and admirably correct business. In the United States of America we have made some $40,000,000 in the industry commonly known as bootlegging."

There was blank silence—an utter and profound silence. Sir Humphrey held his head. Matterson metaphorically kicked himself. Pank groaned audibly.

"The commencement of the affair was really very simple," Keynsham continued. "After the war, some of us who still had the fever of excitement in our veins and the craving for adventure still throbbing in our pulses, happened to come together in New York. To be exact, there were the Marquis de Lusigny, Sam Clowes, a New Yorker named Bowman and myself. We were all broke and we wanted money, but we also wanted adventure. We have had all we wanted of both.

"De Lusigny possessed the largest vineyards in the southwest of France, and half a dozen steamships, but no ready cash. My firm, which I had just joined, had all the capital that was needed to start with, also a few steamships and a magnificent reputation, with an established business in fruits from South America and the West Indies. We had advantages which none of the others who followed in the same line ever had. We made them look like amateurs. Where other people could land 100 cases and often have to give away half of them, we landed thousands almost without molestation. We landed them in Canada, we landed them in Florida, we landed them in New York itself, in New Jersey and all down the coast.

Wonderful Facilities.

"I don't want to make too long a story of this, but on account of our wonderful facilities and because we were not afraid to fight when fighting was necessary, we flourished while our competitors, one by one, faded away. When we took stock a year ago each one of us was worth something like £2,000,000."

Of all the company in the room, Matterson seemed to be the most bewildered.

"I don't understand," he confessed. "I had an idea of something of this sort once or twice, but I put it out of my head because, after all, it is no crime in this country to supply a thirsty neighbor with drink. Why were you prepared to go to the lengths even of murder to prevent Sir Humphrey's opening this box? You must have known that its contents were perfectly safe in his hands, and that the money would be properly distributed."

"We had no anxiety about the money," Keynsham replied slowly. "What we feared was that Sir Humphrey Rossiter would consider it his duty as Brandt's executor to examine the contents of this book."

He drew the volume a little nearer toward him. No one moved. No one sopke.

"On the whole," Keynsham went on, "ours was a company of honorable men. In an evil moment and when we were all worked to death we let in a newcomer whom we all grew to hate as much as he seemed to hate us. To him had been allotted the post of clerk to the organization. He kept an abstract of the accounts, which you will find here, and he kept it with marvelous precision. He kept also a history of our day-by-day doings. I am not going to attempt to excuse any of our actions. I'm not sure that I consider any apology necessary.

Moose Women Will Hold Child Welfare Session

Work of Their Laboratory to Improve Childhood to Be Described.

Work of the Mooseheart Laboratory for Child Research will be the chief subject of discussion at the conference of the Women of the Moose to be held today, Friday and Saturday at the Willard Hotel. This laboratory, which concerns itself with the physical and psychological development of children, with character building and crime prevention, is financed by the women of the Moose fraternity.

Members of the advisory council of the Mooseheart Laboratory will discuss their work today and Friday. Dr. Edgar A. Doll, of Vineland, N. J., will speak on "Future Lines of Clinical Research on Children;" Dr. Paul L. Schroeder, criminologist for the State of Illinois, on "Psychiatry and the Modern Child," and Dr. Louise E. Stanley, chief of the Home Economics dedapartment of the Department of Agriculture, on "Importance of the Mooseheart Laboratory to a Nation-wide Parent Education Program."

Program for Friday.

Members of the advisory council scheduled for talks tomorrow afternoon are Dr. Charles H. Dudd, dean of the University of Chicago; Dr. Ernest Horn, of the University of Iowa; Dr. T. Wingate Todd, of Western Reserve University; Dr. John E Anderson, of the University of Minnesota, and Dr. C. A. Prosser, director, William Hood Dunwoody Institute, of Minneapolis.

Tomorrow evening, when "The Growing Child" will be the general subject, the speakers will be Dr. H. F. Helmholz, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.; Dr. A. J. Carlson, of the University of Chicago, and Dr. E. W. Burgess, of the University of Chicago.

Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, will be among the speakers at the conference on chapter development Saturday.

Mrs. Rogers' Greeting.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, member of Congress from Massachusetts, will bring greetings to the visitors, and Mrs. Margaret Johnson, of Chicago, will be conference leader. Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, will speak on "The Home as a Background for the Woman in Industry."

Mrs. Isabel Horton, of Cincinnati, will preside during the publicity session; Mrs. Mary Picard, of West Warwick, R. I., will have charge of the social service discussion; Mrs. Ethelmae Metzler, of Johnstown, Pa., will direct the library discussion, and Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder of the Women of the Moose, will preside during the discussion of the child care, and Dr. M. L. Reymart, director of the Mooseheart Laboratory for Child Research, will speak.

Charm Expert Is Guest for Tea At White House

Margery Wilson Tells How She Decides Ranking in Personality.

Two women, Mary Pickford and Anne Lindbergh, have already qualified for the list of the ten most charming persons in America, compiled by Margery Wilson, charm expert, with headquarters in New York. Miss Wilson spent yesterday in Washington and had tea at the White House.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt headed the list of the ten most charming persons in the world announced by Miss Wilson several months ago. Others were Mrs. Coolidge, Lady Astor, Ed Wynne, the Prince of Wales, Emily Post, Prof. Einstein, the Queen of Siam and Mussolini.

No Room for Dollfuss.

"I wanted to put Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria on the list, but there just wasn't room for him," said Miss Wilson yesterday afternoon. She admitted she is having some difficulty selecting five charming American men for the new group of ten.

"Although I have several in mind, I haven't yet chosen a single one definitely," she said. "I think Amelia Earhart will be included among the women."

It is not necessary to meet a person to learn whether he or she is charming, according to the charm expert. Although she placed Mrs. Roosevelt on her world-wide list, Miss Wilson had not met the First Lady until yesterday at tea. Mussolini also won his place on the list without the charm expert's seeing more than his photographs and newsreel shots.

Sincerity Tops Importance.

"Sincerity is the most important adjunct of charm," asserted Miss Wilson. "In addition to sincerity, a person should be entirely free from self-consciousness. She who wishes to be charming should cultivate poise and the ability to be genuinely interested in other people. Women are constantly asking me how they can become better conversationalists, in the hope of increasing their charm. I tell them that there are already too many conversationalists. What we need is more women who will be sympathetic listeners."

Age, physical beauty and temperament have little to do with charm, according to Miss Wilson. She has found some languid types charming. On the other hand, she has found high-spirited, vivid persons just as charming. And she has known fat, old women to possess more charm than beautiful young girls. Sometimes persons are born wtih it. More often they acquire it.

"The acquired kind seems to last longer," said the charm expert. "When anyone has gained something by consciously striving for it, he is more likely to guard it and preserve it than the person who is born with a gift and scarcely realizes that he has it."

Tit for Tat.

By Katherine Smith.

You watch me with amusement when
I've made myself a fool.
I'm filled with mute embarrassment,
You're self-assured and cool.

So, gleefully you torture me,
With mocking taunts that sting,
But then, when I retaliate,
It's quite another thing.

Post Parade

Lower House Personalities and Raiment Often Expertly Tailored.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

As idle spectator beside busy colleagues in press gallery of House of Representatives, listened to lawmakers hold forth on whether or not to have sales tax. Peering over railing, gathered impressions on all before the House except the sales tax. Herewith, then, with helpful assistance of co-workers, is presented:

Woman's-Eye View of the House of Representatives.

Direct, discerning eyes, leonine head and thick, white hair, flowing tie and crooked-stem pipe, all belonging to Speaker Henry T. Rainey, make him a compellingly attractive figure, with or without the eminence of the Speakership. Speaker Rainey gives his occupation as a farmer, though he has spent much time in the practice of law. He holds four degrees—A. B., A. M., LL. B and LL. D.

Dynamic Richard M. Kleburg, Representative from Texas, probably is accustomed to being called "Marietta's father." His daughter is among Washington's popular debutantes.

Two frock coats appear regularly as the garb of Representative Edgar Howard, of Nebraska, and of Finly Gray, from Indiana. Both frock-coated men wear their gray locks exaggeratedly long, especially Representative Howard. A woman would describe his locks as a "long bob." Representative Howard is said to strive in every way to be like that famous Nebraskan, William Jennings Bryan.

Much pressed, expertly tailored clothes of Representative Robert Low Bacon, of New York, make him an example of just how men of his importance should look, even to the precise white piping on his vest. Representative Bacon holds the rank of colonel in the field artillery.

"Hotfoot" Hastings, of Oklahoma, is a name Representative William W. Hastings has won for himself by being Johnny-on-the-spot, while "Porky" is another undignified name, fastened to Representative Harry P. Beam, of Illinois, for his supposed pork-barrel activities.

Bald heads are not numerous in this group composed mostly of middle-aged men. Scarcely more than a dozen bare pates were counted in the more than 50 members listening to the sales tax debate. More than half the members wear glasses, and more than half seem to prefer to wear dark blue suits.

'34 Girl Called Frank in Desire To Become Wife

Deans of Women Agree She Has Abandoned Coyness Formerly in Vogue.

Cleveland, Feb. 21 (AP).—Leaves from a dean of women's notebook:

The girl of today frankly admits she would like to get married, whereas, the old-fashioned girl shyly declined to confess the ambition.

Today's young woman looks on marriage as a partnership; her counterpart of a generation or two ago considered it (frankly) an economic need.

False Modesty on Wane.

That, anyway, is the gist of a series of comments by three well-known deans of women who are here for the convention of the National Education Association's Department of Superintendence.

Dean Agnes Harris, of the University of Alabama, president of the National Association of Deans of Women; Miss Harriett M. Allyn, academic dean at Mount Holyoke, and Dean Margaret S. Morriss, of Pembroke College, were as one in appraising the girls under their surveillance.

The three did not want to say the 1934 edition of the sweet girl graduate was better or worse, artistically, morally or spiritually, than her predecessors, but they were very emphatic that she was more attractive, had less false modesty and was more sensible.

Effects of "Rough Going."

Life, they agreed, had done something to the girl student in the last few years; perhaps her parents had a bit of rough going during the depression, and the girl, sensing her responsibilities, has accepted her share of the work. As Miss Harris put it, she has found "a much saner attitude toward the real values of life."

As for morality, if it must be talked of, commented the deans, the college girl of today has her individual standard of conduct, founded upon her own inner consciousness rather than on an edict thrust upon her by society. And that, added Miss Allyn, is as it should be.

Real Martha Washington Now Revealed to World As Bustlingly Domestic and Not Highly Educated

By Hope Ridings Miller.

For more than a century a dark-eyed woman in a powdered wig has gazed down from school walls upon generations of children. But to them, as all other Americans, she has remained only the wife of George Washington — the grave, white-wigged man at her side.

In recent years the Father of his Country has become a more human figure, thanks to the activity of his biographers. But what of Martha? Has modern biography ever pierced beneath her mask? Has she ever been accorded the flesh-and-blood reality that the wife of a great man deserves?

Of the many depictions of her given by biographers few are convincing. Early references to her were, without exception, laudatory. Her most authentic picture can be obtained by studying her through the eyes of her contemporaries, by reading her letters, and by examining her biographies to discover wherein they agree.

Hands "Always in Motion."

What kind of woman emerges from such a study? Above all, a bustling housewife. A plump, brown-eyed, little person whose hands, in the words of one biographer, "were always in motion." A comely matron flitting between her kitchen and her boudoir, reading her Bible every morning, greeting a houseful of guests every evening, and between times studying the fashion plates and planning her plumage.

Martha was not an educated woman. If she had been, it is doubtful that she would ever have become the wife of George Washington. Martha Conkling, writing of her in 1857, said:

"She possessed only such artificial accomplishments as the system of domestic instruction, then the sole means of female education in her land, enabled her to acquire."

We have no record that Martha was given to reading anything, except the Bible and an occasional newspaper. If one examines some of her letters, noting the number of misspelled words, it will not be difficult to believe the biographer who wrote: "Miss Martha Dandridge was taught little about spelling, but much about stitchery."

Contrast to Brainy Sally.

At the time George Washington met her, he was still under the spell of Sally Cary, wife of George William Fairfax, one of his closest friends. This great lady, the essential aristocrat, was one of the best-educated and most highly cultured women of her time. Keen, intellectual and vivacious, she was a direct contrast to the domestic-minded Martha, who, in the words of Rupert Hughes, "was neither learned in books nor eager to be." No doubt she appealed to Washington as the home-loving type of woman who would make him comfortable without taxing his mind too heavily.

Burned by the flame of his hopeless love for an intellectual woman, Washington sought Sally's direct opposite, and found it in the person of this attractive young widow, Martha Custis, whose very presence breathed peace.

He was never disappointed in Martha's domestic accomplishments. From the time she took charge of Mount Vernon until the day of her death everything was done on schedule. She managed the 200 servants with dexterity, and allowed nothing to deter her from her daily routine.

Adamant on Retiring Hour.

In all seasons she arose very early—never later than dawn. After breakfast she retired to her chamber, where she remained an hour reading the Scriptures. After that, she spent the morning attending to household duties. Her afternoons and evenings were devoted to entertainments, which were both frequent and lavish. None of the latter, however, lasted longer than 9 o'clock, her usual hour for retiring. Even after she became the First Lady she was careful not to allow public ceremonies to interfere with the lifelong habits of herself and her husband. If guests were still present when the clock struck 9, she smiled graciously and announced, "The General always retires before 9, and I usually precede him."

Nobody was more appalled and more chilled by the frigid state receptions than Martha herself. She grew tired of the incessant ceremony long before her husband did, and longed for the freedom of her peaceful home on the banks of the Potomac. At this time, she wrote to her niece:

"I live a very dull life here and know nothing that passes in town . . . There are certain bounds set for me which I must not depart from; and as I can not do as I like I am obstinate and stay at home a great deal."

Loved Company and Clothes.

This streak of obstinacy persisted. So long as she was First Lady she remained at home most of the time, or made calls on only her intimate friends.

Eventually she took a definite stand against the glacial White House social atmosphere by inaugurating a new series of entertainments for smaller groups. Usually these were dinners at which she presided with ease and elegance. From that time on, guests were frequent in the Washington household at meal-time, for Martha's hospitality was known far and wide.

Her love of company was second only to her interest in clothes. Lossing wrote that "even before she was married she always dressed with a scrupulous regard to the requirements of the best fashions of the day." This devotion to style reached its highest development after she became the First Lady. It has been suggested that George himself was somewhat responsible for this, as he had much interest in what she wore. The story goes that he often wrote the orders for her dresses, so he could be sure that she would get the colors that he preferred. Her silks and satins and flower-trimmed wigs were the most fashionable and most expensive that could be bought and her wardrobe was reputed to be the largest and most valuable in the United States.

True Picture of Original First Lady Finally Emerges to View.

L. G. Tripham, another of her biographers, set forth the idea that her love of dress was developed inordinately because she realized that she was lacking in intellectual attainments and sought to offset this lack by clothing herself grandly.

Her High Regard for Mate.

Her respect for her husband is another of her qualities on which all biographers agree. She usually referred to him as "General Washington." One historian, however, tells that often when visiting the soldiers during the Revolution, she spoke of her husband as "My Old Man." Tripham, writing of this report, said: "I discredit the idea that she ever let down the bars of her reserve enough to talk so familiarly among soldiers. Furthermore, no one to my knowledge has discovered evidence of her having the sense of humor which such a title as 'My Old Man' might imply."

This woman was an enigma to those who sought to learn her human qualities because she was so reserved. Even her intimate friends knew little about her, except that she dressed well and was interested in housekeeping. For some unknown reason, she kept her hour of morning devotion secret for more than 50 years. She even burned all her love letters from Washington, perhaps to protect the dignity of such communications. Only one was left (which she happened to overlook) and it is a poor specimen compared to the letters that he wrote to Sally Fairfax.

Martha's devotion to her husband, her industry, and her sociability were her dominant virtues. What, then, were her "warts"—those qualities that, according to H. L. Mencken, make a human being live in history or literature? Martha's weaknesses were her vanity, stubbornness, and a nonresilient mind. But these, tempered by her hospitality and her sympathetic attitude toward life, help to make her something more than a steel engraving on the wall.

Untutored Carib Indian Maids Thin Without Effort

Washington Explorer Says Natural Foods May Be Their Secret.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

While American women are suffering through such freakish diets as lemon juice and baked potatoes in a heroic effort to become sylph-like, a tribe of Indian women lounge in the sun, eat what they please, and stay beautifully slender until they are carted off to the happy hunting-ground.

These fortunate women are members of the Carib Indian tribe which inhabits the jungle along the Orinoco River in Venezuela. Earl Hanson, explorer, who made an 18 months' trek through the wilds of South America for the Carnegie Institution of Washington, says he never saw a fat woman among the Caribs.

"Most of them are short," said Mr. Hanson at his office in the Department of the Interior. "Good-looking? Well, I didn't think so at first, but after I had grown accustomed to them I decided that they were very attractive."

Natural Foods Credited.

Even though they have never heard of a reducing diet the Carib women stay thin because of their simple, natural foods, Mr. Hanson believes. They eat the pineapples, alligator pears, and bananas with which the Orinoco Valley abounds. Their staple food is "mandioca," made from the youca root after the poison has been driven out. Sometimes mandioca is eaten in grain form; sometimes it is ground to a powder, mixed with water, and eaten as a cereal; more often it is made into a hard, dry bread that resembles a phonograph record in appearance.

"The women gather the root, distill the poison, and then grind the remainder into grain-like particles or into flour," explained Mr. Hanson.

Although the Caribs never worry about food or figures, they have their troubles, the explorer found. No soap is the cause of most of their distress. The white men taught them to wear clothes and formerly gave them soap to keep the clothes clean. But with the collapse of the rubber market, the white men withdrew from the Orinoco Basin, leaving the Indians without means for obtaining the things they had learned to regard as necessities.

Strive for Morality.

"The nearest store is a thousand miles away and there are no transportation facilities," said Mr. Hanson. "Besides, the Indians have no money. The white men gave them cloth, needles, thread and soap in exchange for labor. Now, when a traveler arrives in a Carib village he is literally besieged by women begging for those things. First they plead for soap. Then they coax for cloth—bright calico is their favorite—and needles."

The Indians have taken the white man's teachings seriously, according to Mr. Hanson. They are determined to be clothed and when they have no cloth, they weave palm fibers into makeshift garments.

Since the Jesuits have been withdrawn, the Caribs have a hard time living up to the moral standards taught them by the white man, but they do the best they can. When a priest from Brazil visits them once a year they insist that he solemnize all the marriages that have been contracted since his last visit. The priest also has a busy time baptizing all the babies that have been born in the course of the year.

"But Carib families, as a rule, are small," said Mr. Hanson.

White Man's Evil Mark.

Before the white man came 300 years ago the Indians along the Orinoco had extremely high moral standards of their own, the explorer pointed out.

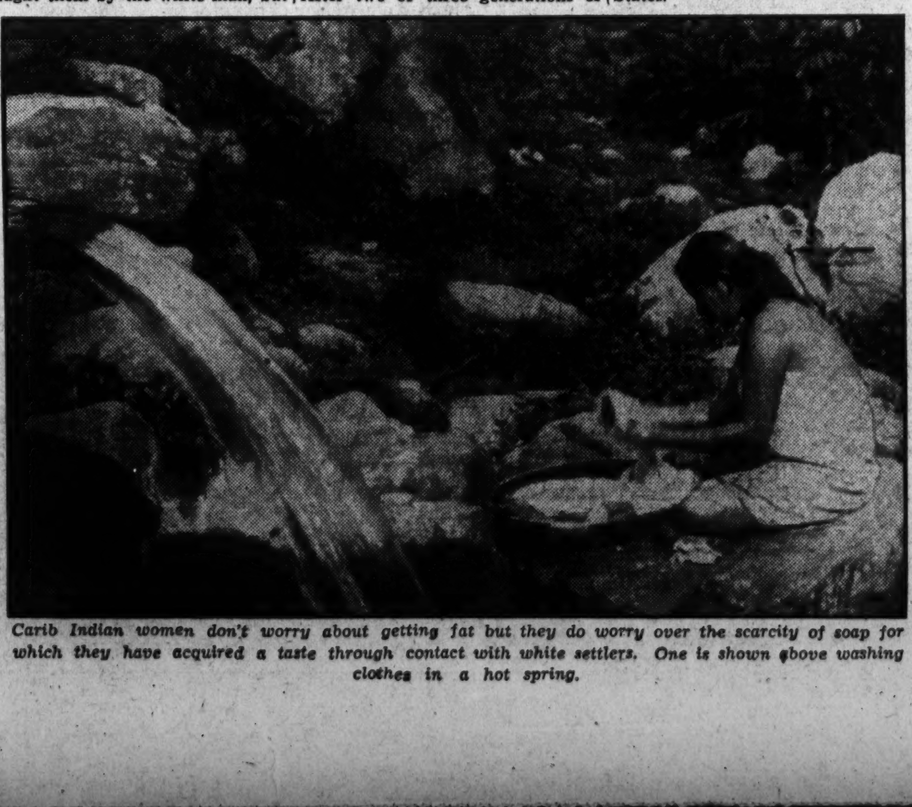
"It's the old, old story of civilized men invading a primitive land and perverting the ideals of the people," he said. "The Caribs were naturally temperate, but the white men taught them to drink. The white men also took Carib women for temporary wives. Since this usually meant plenty of calico, soap and gunpowder for the woman's household, her Indian mate did not object strenuously to the arrangement. After two or three generations of white men had visited the Orinoco over a long period of time, the Indians gradually learned to take the temporary wife idea as a matter of course."

Native Tribe of South America Likes Opera More Than Jazz.

In the village of San Fernando de Atabapo, where Mr. Hanson spent several days, the population of 60 was equally divided among whites, natives and half-breeds.

The small radio set that the explorer had with him created profound interest among the inhabitants of the village.

"The queer thing about it," said Mr. Hanson, "was that the white people wanted to hear only jazz music from Rio or Buenos Aires, while the Indians wanted operas and symphonies from the United States."



Carib Indian women don't worry about getting fat but they do worry over the scarcity of soap for which they have acquired a taste through contact with white settlers. One is shown above washing clothes in a hot spring.

Toiler Wives Held Natural Phenomena

Dr. Wood Calls Woman Traditional Provider of Clothing.

Says Married Workers Have Equal Chance for Happiness.

The married woman who works is an entirely natural phenomenon. In faring forth from her home to earn money in store, factory or office, she is merely obeying the rules laid down for her centuries ago, in the opinion of Dr. L. Foster Wood, national secretary of the committee on marriage and the home for the Federal Council of Churches.

"Many years ago a woman was supposed to weave cloth and make clothes for her family," said Dr. Wood yesterday morning at Calvary Baptist Church. He had come from New York to serve as chairman for one of the sessions of the second annual conference on marriage and home life. "Now that cloth is woven and clothes are made in factories, woman has simply followed her occupation," he continued. "The same thing holds true for other lines of work."

Effect on Happiness.

Women who continue working after marriage have just as much chance for happy and enduring marriages as those who give all their time to the home, believes Dr. Wood.

"It depends entirely upon the individual," he said. "Many women realize that there is no finer career open to them than being scientific and artistic homemakers. Others are unhappy unless they have self-expression in the business or professional world. The divorce rate is just as high, I believe, among one group as the other."

Dr. Wood has known many families in which the woman was the main financial support because her husband was unable to find steady work in days of economic distress.

Lonely Independence.

"I suppose this situation was galling to the men but most of them were philosophical enough to make the best of it. I never heard of its causing a divorce," he said.

When asked if he had noticed the wave of romanticism that is supposed to be sweeping over the world Dr. Wood replied, "Yes. There is undoubtedly a noticeable wistfulness among many women who have sacrificed their normal desire for marriage and a home in an effort to become independently famous and successful. They have found that independence often means loneliness."

Age for Marriage Varies.

Evidently the present generation of marriageable young women has been looking askance at "bachelor girls." The result has been an ever increasing number of younger marriages within the last year, according to Dr. Wood.

"Do I think persons who marry young have a better chance for happiness? Well, I don't think age makes much difference. Some persons are emotionally mature at 20. Others are not mature in that respect until they are 35 or 40. Some never grow up emotionally.

"Success in marriage depends upon an understanding of the psychology of the opposite sex. It depends upon knowing how to adjust differences in points of view and in knowing how to interpret sex constructively. Age has very little to do with it."

Wild Weather Style Forecast

Windblown Silhouette Made of Schiaparelli Sweeping to Popularity.

Stormy weather will continue throughout spring, extending into summer.

This isn't a forecast from the Weather Bureau, but a cabled report of Schiaparelli's spring showing. The stormy weather or windblown silhouette introduced by this designer in her midseason collection several weeks ago has gained momentum daily. Now other designers are also making coats and suits with stiff revers that come up to the chin and then stick out in front for several inches. The most effective windblown revers have rounded corners. This gives a more breezy effect.

Other notable features of the Schiaparelli opening were slightly padded, rounded shoulders, waist-length suit jackets, bright cellophane coatlets, skirts with shirring at the bustle point, and seashell clips.

When the suits have waist length jackets the silhouette is given a slightly top-heavy look with breadth concentrated in the shoulders above closely fitted lines. Skirts are slim. Blouses carry out the windblown effect with frilly jabots.

Evening gowns by Schiaparelli show that the designer has drawn part of her inspiration from birds and fish. Large flared flanges run up the backs of the formal gowns to the waist, giving a fantail pigeon impression. Sharp little fins stand out in back on evening jackets. When these are made of cellophane the colors usually are gold or flame red.

Schiaparelli's favorite colors for spring and summer are deep gray, called eucalyptus; flamingo pink, canary yellow and love bird green.

Valley Bureau Approves First Farmer Loans

Strasburg Credit Group Sends Applications to Baltimore.

Strasburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Directors of the Strasburg Production Credit Association today approved the first group of applications from farmers in Shenandoah, Clarke, Warren, Frederick and Page Counties for crop loans. The applications are to be sent to the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, Baltimore, for further approval.

P. A. Goodwyn, an official of the Baltimore organization, met with field inspectors of the local association to explain their work. The inspectors include Charles Newman, Mount Jackson, for Shenandoah County; G. L. Wilkinson, Front Royal, for Warren County; Richard B. Smith, Berryville, for Clarke County; Charles Rosenberger and G. Wilson Whitmore, Winchester, for Frederick County, and D. D. Kite, Stanley, for Page County.

Fauquier Awaits $50,000.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—More than $50,000 is expected to be distributed to Fauquier County farmers for participation in the corn-hog reduction campaign. Benefit payments at present contracted for equal $35,000, covering an average corn acreage of 5,170, of which 1,274 has been contracted to the Government in 1934.

New Bureau Open.

Warsaw, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—A production credit association has opened here, with R. A. Farmar handling applications from farmers of Richmond, Westmoreland, Lancaster, Northumberland, Essex, King William, Middlesex, Mathews, Gloucester and King and Queen Counties. The local organization has an authorized capital of $100,000, of which $75,000 is supplied from Baltimore and the remainder by farmers' subscriptions.

Hubbard Back on Job.

Kilmarnock, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). C. W. Hubbard has been recalled by the Northumberland County supervisors to become county agent, a position abolished when he was removed several years ago. H. S. Barksdayle has assumed the office of county agent in Sussex County, succeeding Mr. Hubbard.

Many Farmers Sign.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Approximately 101 Rockbridge farmers have filed corn-hog reduction contracts with C. E. Allison, county agent. These represent a 1932-33 average of 1,710 acres of corn and 4,514 hogs marketed. These signers should receive a total payment of about $20,000.

200 Sign Corn-Hog Pact.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Approximately 200 farmers in Jefferson County have signed the corn-hog production agreements, according to B. Heath Holden, county agent.

They have agreed to reduce corn production 20 per cent and hog production 25 per cent.

Buses Uninsured, School Officer Says

Disclosure Made After Spotsylvania Crash.

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—That none of the busses transporting pupils in Spotsylvania County is insured, was admitted yesterday by Dr. J. Wallace Massey, of the County School Board, who disclosed that the board "did not feel justified in spending so much of the county's money" in view of high insurance rates.

No investigation has been called into the February 15 accident in which a school bus overturned near Massaponax, injuring Herman Shields, 12, and Helen Hawkins, 14.

In connection with the question of who must pay the children's hospital bills, Dr. Massey said he understood they should not have been on the bus, but were getting an "extra ride."

Charleston House Against Rum Bill

State Monopoly Measure Is Beaten, 45 to 31.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.) The House of Delegates late today apparently defeated the State liquor monopoly bill, although announcement of the vote was deferred until tomorrow.

An unofficial tabulation indicated 45 votes were cast for measure and 31 against it, with 63 required for passage.

The bill had been amended to exclude wines and beer from the State monopoly as passed by the Senate. The bill provides submitting repeal of the State prohibition amendment at the next election.

Court in Frederick Pays Norwood Honor

Frederick, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Resolutions by the bar association on the death of former State Senator Frank C. Norwood, the oldest member of the bar, were presented at a special session of the circuit court, with Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard on the bench.

The resolution was prepared by a committee, of which former State Senator Jacob Rohrback was chairman.

In response, on behalf of the court, Judge Urner ordered the resolutions to be entered upon the records of the court, and added, "Mr. Norwood was a highly esteemed member of the bar."

Women's Club Meets.

No Fiddlers 3

"King" Cole Sent to Cell for Marital Fraud.

York, Pa., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Samuel C. "King" Cole, self-styled king of newsboys, who is known in almost every city in the country as well as in foreign lands where he has traveled and sold papers, has had his wanderings cut short.

He drew from 18 months to 3 years in prison here, after being found guilty of fraudulently obtaining $4,200 from Mrs. Effie Tyson, York widow, by a false promise of marriage.

G. F. Lindenmuth, warden of the York Jail, said Cole made a signed statement, which was produced in court, stating that he had married four times and had never got a divorce. The statement said he married women at Toledo, Ohio, in 1915; at London, England, in 1921; at Harrisburg, Pa., in 1923, and at Seattle, Wash., in 1932. Cole's arrest followed receipt by Mrs. Tyson of a letter from Cole's last wife in Baltimore.

"Now, I've finally got the taxpayer licked," Cole told Judge H. C. Niles when he pronounced sentence.

Ferry Line Runs To Eastern Shore

New Service to Richmond Opened Yesterday.

Richmond, Feb. 21 (AP).—Inauguration of daily ferry service between Deltaville anad Harborton, bringing the Eastern Shore closer to Richmond and this vicinity, was started today by the Richmond-Eastern Shore Ferry Corporation.

The ferry left Deltaville at 9:15 a. m., and reached Harborton at 12:30 p. m., and returned to Deltaville immediately, arriving at 4 p. m.

Beginning tomorrow and continuing daily, the ferry will make two trips between Harborton and the mainland. It will leave Harborton at 5:30 a. m. and 4 p. m., and leave Deltaville at 9:15 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Dining-room service will be provided on the ferry.

State Canners Reelect Price

Virginia Association to Meet Next Year in Roanoke.

Luray, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—Charles Price, of Stanley, was reelected president of the Virginia Canners Association at the annual meeting here today.

F. W. Brugh, of Nace, was elected secretary treasurer. Vice presidents named were G. H. Burkholder and Lynn Morgan, of Thaxton, and R. J. Bolton, of Christiansburg. Roanoke was chosen as the 1935 convention city.

The canners code and marketing agreement was presented by Dr. LeRoy Strausberger, of Baltimore, followed by a round table discussion on the code, conducted by W. C. Smiley, of Roanoke.

The canners approved the code as written by the National Canners Association, and officers were authorized to work with the administration committee on a marketing agreement.

Dr. Gordon Ward, economist of Blacksburg, addressed the group on "the monetary situation."

R. Gray Williams, of Winchester, was the principal speaker at the association's banquet last night. D. F. Aleshire, of Luray, was toastmaster.

Romance Nipped By Grim Sleuths

Frederick, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Romance was rerouted but not routed here yesterday for Ellen Bupp, 18, and Robert Simmons, 19, both of York, Pa., when a deputy sheriff nabbed Miss Bubb as they were entering the courthouse for a marriage license.

Shortly before the couple arrived, instructions were received from York to detain the girl, who was said to have escaped from matrons who were taking her to a house of detention.

Taken to the sheriff's office, the prospective bridegroom held the girl in his arms until the arrival of a York officer, who took her into custody. No charge was placed against Simmons, but he also returned to York.

Other officers are Clarence I. Ways, vice president; Harold Deetz, secretary, and Guy C. Chadwick, treasurer. The organization starts with 26 members, most of whom are licensed operators.

County's New Job Committee Begins Duties

Spotsylvania Unit Follows Members Resigning Last Month.

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).Spotsylvania County's new reemployment committee, succeding the group of three who resigned a month ago, began functioning yesterday.

The new committee, announced here yesterday by E. W. Koontz, reemployment adjustor for this district, is composed of Marion Woods Mills, C. R. Andrews, Mrs. E. R. Colbert, Miss Susan Dickinson and Wilson V. Waller. The chairman has not yet been chosen.

Mr. Mills, a member of the county civil works advisory committee, will be the contact member between the two organizations. Mr. Waller is labor representative on the committee, Miss Dickinson represents relief organizations, Miss Colbert represents women's organizations, and Mr. Andrews is general representative of the citizens at large.

College Aid Outlined.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). The plan for Federal aid to deserving students at State Teachers College here has been outlined by President Morgan L. Combs.

An average of $15 per month is made available to a maximum of 10 per cent of the enrollment, or 62 students, who will be engaged in certain employment, such as assisting in the dining hall or library or in secretarial capacities.

Half on Roster Hired.

Heathsville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Half the registered unemployed persons of Northumberland County have been engaged by the CWA here, which during the first phase of the CWA program had a total pay roll of $29,089.33 for men and $1,440.75 for women.

In this county, 1,677 men and 172 women registered, 862 men and 84 women receiving employment on projects.

Another Airport Planned.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Local CWA officials are planning a flying field at Meadowville, 5 miles from here, where 50 acres will be leased by E. W. Winmill at the reported figure of $1 per year for five years.

Emory and Henry Host to Orators

High School Declaimers to Compete Tonight.

Emory, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The nineteenth annual interhigh school declamation contest will be held here tomorrow night at Emory and Henry College. All accredited high schools in this vicinity will participate.

French Clevinger, president of the Hermesian Literary Society, will preside, and R. E. Hale, president of the Calliopean Society, will be secretary.

Dr. H. M. Henry, dean of the college, will award the winning medal. Judges will be Dr. E. R. Casto, Prof. A. S. Withers, and Prof. V. S. Armbrister

After the contest, speakers and the audience will attend a folk festival in the gymnasium.

Miss Rankin Talks On Need of Peace

Fredericksburg Club Hears Leader Speak.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—That at no other time in history has peace been so vital to the future of civilization, was the keynote today of an address by Miss Jeannette Rankin, first woman elected to Congress, here under auspices of the international relations committee of the Fredericksburg Woman's Club.

America's leadership in maintenance of world peace was stressed by Miss Rankin, who commended the President for his foreign policy and outlined the necessity of peace education and peace determination in this country.

For her work in Congress after election from Montana in 1916 and her activity with peace organizations and in the "peace lobby" in Washington, Miss Rankin is recognized as a leader in the cause.

Covington, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). By a unanimous vote the Covington Town Council last night denied the request of attorneys of the Virginia Public Service Co. that the town repay a citizens' committee $750 for expenses which the committee incurred in preparing a brief opposing the municipal power plant here.

Meeting Series Will Spur NRA At Hagerstown

State Compliance Officer to Attend 4 Sessions Hearing Complaints.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). An experiment in spreading the gospel of the NRA will be attempted here Monday by Arthur E. Hungerford, NRA compliance director of Maryland, and if found to be successful it probably will be used as a model for other communities.

Following a conference between the Washington County compliance committee chairman, Roger Whipple, and the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce directors, it was announced that Monday's program, as outlined by Director Hungerford, will be carried out, with the State director and his staff in attendance.

A series of four meetings will be held. Director Hungerford will attend a meeting of the county compliance board and help discuss any complaints before the committee.

Following this meeting, Hungerford will meet with a group of Hagerstown and county business leaders, to discuss NRA compliance, advantages of NRA, and suggested improvements.

Later, Hungerford will confer with women, including wives of farmers and industrial workers, clerks, housewives and business women.

In the evening, the director will meet employes, both organized and unorganized, and at this, as at other meetings, he will receive complaints, most of which, he feels, are based on misunderstanding.

Meanwhile, 529 men engaged in CWA projects in Hagerstown and Washington County will be laid off Friday, following orders from Washington. Many of these, however, are expected soon to be absorbed in PWA projects to be started shortly.

100 Out at Charles Town.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Reduction of CWA workers here to 278 will take effect Friday. The cut will affect 100 men.

Judge the new FORD V8 on what it will do

Thousands of people who can afford to spend two or three times as much for a car, are today choosing the Ford V-8 for 1934, instead. Here are some of the reasons.

POWER. The Ford V-8 for 1934 gives you better than 80 miles per hour with the quicker acceleration and greater smoothness of an 8-cylinder motor. Power has actually been increased by 12 per cent over last year's model.

COMFORT. The Ford V-8 for 1934 offers more actual body room than many other cars that cost considerably more. It offers you new Clear-Vision Ventilation, with the window in one piece. It offers you free action for all four wheels—plus the comfort of Ford Cantilever Springs and the proved safety of a front axle.

SAFETY. With the new Ford V-8 you get an all-steel body, safety glass, welded steel-spoke wheels, exceptionally low center of gravity and more braking surface per pound of weight than any other American-made car we know of.

ECONOMY. Gasoline economy is increased by two or three miles per gallon with the new Ford V-8. Test runs show that the new engine will give 20 miles per gallon at 45 miles per hour.

$30,000 Spent Monthly to Feed and Clothe Wanderers.

2,150 Listed in January; All Who Can Work Given Jobs.

Down in the old Memorial Methodist Church at John Marshall place and C street, the District Bureau of Transient Relief daily is caring for 1,100 homeless men, women and children.

Under the direction of Arthur Rosichan, social service expert, the bureau has created for those it feeds, houses and pays, a city within a city. Practically everyone who is able to work is given employment in his chosen line in the bureau's extensive office, or in the shops it maintains.

Through steady expansion, the bureau has equipped and put into service its own barber shop, tailoring establishment and shoe shop.

60 New Clients a Day.

The bureau extends to many parts of the Capital, where lodges are maintained for its clients, whose numbers have been swelled by a succession of cold waves.

From 60 to 65 new persons apply to the bureau each day, and the facilities are taxed to capacity. Rosichan said yesterday he hoped to expand to the point where he could accommodate 2,000 each night.

In January the bureau handled 2,150 new cases. Of these 1,800 were single men, 39 single women and 90 families. They came in "gondolas" coal cars, in box cars, in busses, in delapidated automobiles, and occasionally in buggies.

Divided in Three Classes.

These transients, according to Rosichan, are divided into three classes: plain drifters, those seeking work, and those trying to get home. Many were "white collar men."

Where it is possible, Rosichan said, those seeking their homes were furnished with railroad or bus fare.

"These, however, were only 5 per cent of the total," Rosichan asserted.

The remainder linger, eating thrice a day and sleeping in the lodges. Their work pays them on a sliding scale of 90 cents a week, but their labors compensate for their food and keep.

Spends $30,000 Monthly.

The bureau spends an average of $30,000 a month. The food furnished the destitute is good and plentiful. The lodges are sanitary, with facilities for bathing, good beds and electric lights.

There are nine lodges, where transients sleep, eat and make their headquarters. The transients are divided in the lodges according to color, age and sex. There is a special lodge for "white collar workers."

Ellison Nominated For Law Medal

Campaigned to Enforce Liquor Law.

Dr. Everett Monroe Ellison, who as president of the Citizens Service Association for Law Enforcement, campaigned here to enforce the eighteenth amendment, is the first nominee for the 1933 law enforcement medal of the United States Flag Association, it was announced yesterday.

In a recent statement explaining the rules under which the medal will be awarded, F. Regis Noel said. "The law enforcement medal will be conferred upon the resident of the District of Columbia who during the year 1933 did the most to advance and promote the enforcement of law in the District." The nomination of Dr. Ellison was submitted by Page McK. Etchison, religious work director of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Other nominations for the medal are being invited. They should be sent to F. Regis Noel, chairman, law enforcement medal jury of award, Transportation Building.

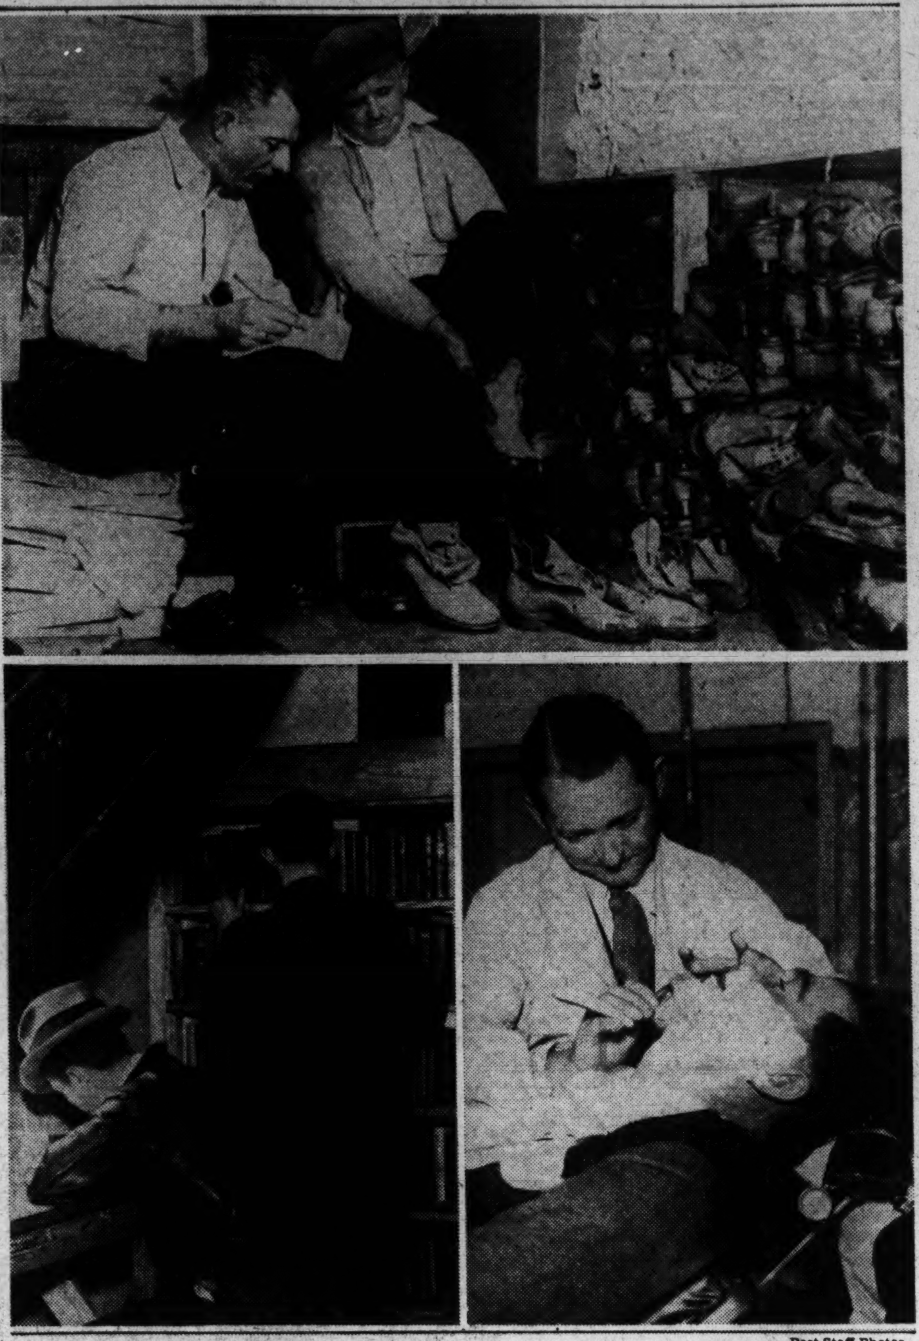
Transient Relief Life Is Looking Up



Post Staff Photos.

House District Group Spends A Day Jesting

"Indifference" to Affairs Draws Rebuke From G.O.P. Member.

With the chairman away, the House District Committee played yesterday, engaging in much more or less joshing about what they might do to help the plight of the voteless, unrepresented District.

But the committee voted to report only one of several pending bills, and that a minor one, to authorize the District Commissioners to sell the unused Potomac school property in the Southwest. The bill already has passed the Senate.

One of the suggestions advanced in the interest of Washingtonians was that all of the District, save the Capitol and White House Grounds, be ceded back to Maryland. This came from Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas.

The plan would give Washingtonians both a vote and representation in Congress, Patman said, as a new Congressional district could be formed.

Irked somewhat by the levity with which District issues were being treated, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, observed that the committee was showing "too much indifference" in handling District legislation.

He suggested that the membership of the committee be reduced to five members in order that more careful consideration could be given to local bills. He criticized the usual small attendance at the weekly committee sessions.

Although there are 21 members of the committee, usually only a half dozen or so are in attendance.

The committee discussed informally the proposed amendments to the District liquor act and indicated that the Senate District Committee would be asked to hold a joint session to consider the amendments, most important of which would remove the restriction now limiting chain store companies to a single license for only one store.

Navy Ready to Fly Mail When Needed

The Navy is "not anxious but ready" to operate the air-mail route to Cuba should the Postoffice Department decide to cancel the mail contract now held by the Pan American Airways, Admiral William H. Standley, Chief of Operations, said yesterday.

He said the Navy has enough men and planes, adequately instrumented, to fly the mail at a moment's notice, and that he believed if any water route were taken away from private operators it would be the duty of the Navy to fly it.

Eleanor Washington Howard Joins in Rites for Kinsman

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

Serene in the memories of her seventy-eighth eventful years, Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, patriotic leader and great-great-grandniece of Gen. George Washington, today is quietly celebrating, in her apartment in the Army and Navy Hotel, the 202d anniversary of the birth of her distinguished kinsman.

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. ELEANOR W. HOWARD.

Mrs. Howard has the added distinction of being the only living member of the Washington clan who was born at Mount Vernon. She is the sole survivor of the merry group of seven children of John Augustine Washington, jr., who could claim this National shrine as their birthplace.

Strangely enough, that baby girl of a distant yesterday has grown to possess the strongest facial resemblance to George Washington of any of his living kinsmen and kinswomen.

Naturally, the hopes and joys and achievements of a large family connection—she has a daughter, four grandchildren, an array of nieces and nephews and 22 grandnieces and 30 grandnephews living—occupy much of Mrs. Howard's attention and time. She is an inveterate letter writer and the walls of her Washington apartment are lined with historic pictures, and the bookcases are filled with books on the days of Washington, ancestry and the deeds of the great. Much time is spent in delving into these books to find out just who is who, and Mrs. Howard is always delighted to find a Washington strain in her friends or acquaintances.

Prominent in the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Howard has held many high offices in that organization, as well as having served as the National head of the Children of the American Revolution.

Memories of Mount Vernon and her life there as a child are frequently recalled by Mrs. Howard in conversation with her close friends. She remembers other Twenty-Seconds of February, when her family went together on a pious pilgrimage down the sloping hills of Mount Vernon to lay wreaths, fashioned from the garden green, on the tombs of George and Martha Washington and other members of the family. She can recall the awe the children felt at the simple ceremony, and she remembers the fun they had, too, playing about the broad verandas of Mount Vernon—those sisters and brothers of hers, Louisa Fontaine, Jane Charlotte, Anna Maria, Elizabeth Selden, Lawrence and George.

An ardent and life-long member of the Episcopal Church, Mrs. Howard takes great pride in the fact that among her nephews, who are the sons of a sister, Anna Maria Washington and her husband, the late Right Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, Bishop of southern Virginia, are no less than five Episcopal clergymen, including the Right Rev. Henry Saint George Tucker, the present Bishop of Virginia; the Rev. Henry N. Tucker, Suffolk, Va.; the Rev. Augustine Washington Tucker, head of St. Luke's Mission, Shanghai, China; the Rev. Francis Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, and the Rev. Beverly Dandridge Tucker, jr.

Today, as she celebrates Washington's birthday, Mrs. Howard can see in the glass of memory, those other sunrises and sunsets at Mount Vernon on the Potomac, "the dearest spot on earth" to her because it is literally "Home, Sweet Home."

Justice Weighing Plea of Bankers

Warren and Cooper Want Indictment Quashed.

Justice Peyton Gordon, District Supreme Court, last night had under advisement a motion by attorneys for Bates Warren and Col. Wade H. Cooper to quash the indictment against them.

The indictment charges, first, that the two, as officers of the closed Commercial National Bank, conspired to misapply the funds of the bank, and second, that they actually misapplied a sum approximating $90,000.

Virginia Society to Dance.

The Society of Virginia will hold its annual colonial pageant and dance in honor of Washington's birthday at the Willard Hotel tomorrow at 9 p. m.

D. C. to Mark Washington's Birth Today

President's Wreath to Be Placed at Monument.

Fraternal and Patriotic Groups Will Hold Special Rites.

Led by President Roosevelt, the Nation's Capital today will bow its head and pay city-wide tribute to the memory of George Washington on the 202d anniversary of his birth.

Impressive ceremonies will attract District patriotic organizations, fraternal orders and citizens to the Washington Monument, to various community halls, social centers and churches, and to the Tomb of Washington in Mount Vernon.

The President's wreath will be placed at the base of the Monument at 9 a. m. It is expected a representative of the Chief Executive will offer the wreath. Following this, floral tributes will be deposited at the shaft.

Masonic Rites at 9:30.

Members of the advisory board of the Masonic clubs of the District will visit the Monument at 9:30 for special rites, led by Samuel B. Reeder, president of the board and master Mason. The National Masonic president will be represented by Edwin C. Berney. State President Frank J. Day and 150 Masons will participate in the ceremonies.

The American Legion will raise flags of the 48 States around the Monument at 8 a. m.

At 9:30, legionnaires will form a motor caravan, led by George Washington Post, No. 1. The motorcade will journey to Mount Vernon, where a wreath will be placed on Washington's Tomb, followed by brief services. At 10:30 a. m., military mass will be said at Immaculate Conception Church, and legionnuaires have been invited to attend.

Four societies, composed of descendants of soldiers of the Revolution, will hold exercises in Memorial Hall. These are scheduled for 9:45 a. m., under direction of Dr. Thomas Green and other officers of the Sons of the Revolution. This society will be assisted by the Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution and the Children of the American Revolution.

Secretary Dern to Speak.

The principal speaker will be Secretary of War Dern. Mrs Russell Henry Magna, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will deliver an address.

The Knights of Columbus will observe the day by an exemplification of the fourth degree at the Mayflower Hotel at 2 p. m. These ceremonies will be under the direction of Arthur B. J. Williamson, master of the fourth degree for the District. The ceremonies will be followed by a banquet at 7 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

A pilgrimage to the Washington Tomb in Mount Vernon will be made by two Boy Scouts from each troop in the District, with 15 Eagle Scouts as guards of honor and standard bearers. E. L. Mattice will be in charge of the pilgrimage.

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants will hold special exercises at the Old Engine House, Nineteenth and H streets northwest, at which an address will be made by Senator Royal S. Copeland, New York. Washington's Farewell Address will be read by Fred A. Emery.

At the Jewish Center, open house will be held throughout the day.

All-State Ball Slated.

An All-State ball will be held at the Washington Hotel in the evening, under the auspices of the New England States Society. Speakers will be Mrs. Magna, Dr. Clifton Clark, president of the District Society, Sons of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Oreon Marie McKee, president of the Seekers Club of Creative Artists.

A memorial-social program will be held by Filipinos of Washington at 2117 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, under auspices of the Visayan Circle, Inc., a Filipino organization.

Thousands of children, who have been given the usual holiday by District and parochial schools, will visit the Monument and otherwise observe the day. The Monument will be open to visitors from 12:30 until 4:30 p. m.

The Public Library and all its branches will be closed today, while the Library of Congress and the Folger Shakespeare Library will observe half-holidays.

All divisions of the Library of Congress, including the copyright office, but excluding the law library and Sunday and holiday service, will be closed.

CWA Artist to Paint Dr. Ballou's Portrait

A portrait of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, is to be painted by a CWA artist here, Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, chairman of the Board of Education committee on school art, announced yesterday.

The portrait will be placed in the Franklin Administration Building.

Hunger Drives Wild Fowl to Man

George H. Newton, of Belle Plain, Va., scattering feed to scores of the thousands of waterfowl which have been starving in the Potomac during the recent cold wave. Hunger drives away the birds' fear of man.

Grain Fed Game Cut Off From Food Source by Ice and Snow.

Lives of thousands of water fowl on the ice-covered tributaries of Chesapeake Bay and the lower Potomac are being saved by feeding with grain furnished by the Biological Survey, the Maryland State game warden and sportsman, Paul G. Redington, chief of the bureau, reported yesterday.

"Only limited funds," Mr. Redington said, "are available for the bureau's operations, and these will be used as long as they are available. If the emergency continues after depletion of Federal funds, it is hoped that interested sportsmen and conservationists will cooperate to supply grain to maintain the work."

The bureau's game protector, stationed at Cambridge, on the Eastern Shore, reports that the only open waer is at the eddy currents of the streams, often a mile or more apart.

"Each," he says, "is filled to capacity with water fowl—ducks, geese and swans—and lal are apparently in serious condition. Scroes of dead birds are picked up daily."

The games protector's reports were confirmed by a bureau scientist who investigated. The species most seriously affected are black ducks, pintails and pidgeons. Canvasbacks are suffering, but not so much, as they feed in deeper water.

Feeding operations begun a week ago in the Potomac just below Washington have saved large numbers of black ducks, ringnecks, baldpates and coots, the bureau announced.

12 Wholesalers Here Get First Liquor Permits

Licenses Allow Imports Now; Retail Hearings to Start Monday.

The Liquor Control Board yesterday issued its first licenses, granting permits to 12 wholesalers, who may now bring stores of liquor to be ready for delivery when retail licenses are granted.

The following concerns were granted permits to deal in all types of liquors: The Hopfheiser Co., 808 Twelfth street; Dixie Distributing Co., 926 Fifth street; Benjamin F. Crouse, 1424 Florida avenue northeast; Milton S. Kronheim Co., 410 Ninth street; Potomac Sales Co., 1242 Sixth street northeast; Beitzell & Co., 1357 New York avenue northeast; the House of Stover, 808 Earle Building; Dove, Carter & Co., 619 Woodward Building; District Wholesale Corporation, 1104 Ninth street, and the International Distributing Co., 917 E street.

Permits to distribute light wines and beers were granted to the Valley Forge Distributing Co., 901 Seventh street southwest, and District Beverages, Inc., 65 G street northwest. Officials said a larger number of wholesale licenses would have been granted if applications had been filled out properly.

Public hearings will be started Monday on applications for retail licenses, continuing for three days. Liquor sales here are expected to be authorized March 1.

Superintendent Ballou Is 55 Years Old Today

Frank Washington Ballou, superintendent of District schools, named after George Washington, because he was born on the natal day of the first President, will be 55 years old today.

The Board of Education, at the close of its meeting yesterday afternoon, extended felicitations to the superintendent.

National Plumbers Group to Meet Here

The National Association of Master Plumbers will hold its 1934 convention here in May, it was announced yesterday by Robert J. Barrett, president of the association.

The convention and exposition will be held in the Washington Auditorium May 28 to 31. Headquarters of the association are in this city.

Joint School Urged to Cut Eastern Jam

Combined Junior-Senior Plant at Anacostia Is Ballou Plan.

Support From Citizens Will Be Solicited at Hearing.

Construction of the proposed new Anacostia school as a combination senior and junior high was proposed to the Board of Education yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou as a first step in the program to relieve congestion at Eastern High.

The proposal, without precedent in District school history, was made as an alternative to building an addition to the Eastern High. One of the two steps should be taken, the superintendent said, to solve the problem at Eastern, the most congested school in the District.

Under the Ballou proposal, another school building would be built in Anacostia following construction of the combination junior-senior high, to be established as either a senior or junior school.

Will Query Citizens.

The superintendent was instructed to seek reaction at once to his proposition from District officials and citizens. Citizens will be asked to confer with the board at a special meeting.

An initial appropriation for the Anacostia Junior High School was eliminated from the school budget by the Budget Bureau. Citizens, however, are planning a determined appeal to District Congress committees to return the appropriation.

Both the board and school officials are prohibited by law from making an appeal themselves, and it is hoped that citizens will take the initiative on the combined Anacostia structure.

Congestion Illustrated.

To illustrate the need for relief at Eastern, Dr. Ballou demonstrated a map prepared by Charles Hart, principal of the school, showing that 475 Eastern pupils live east of Anacostia River.

Enrollment at Eastern is 2,800, while the maximum for the building is 2,000. By the time an addition or a new building is constructed the enrollment will be 3,500, Dr. Ballou estimated. Jere J. Crane, assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of business affairs, has drawn plans for an addition to cost $500,000.

The Great Shadow.

When everything to thunder went, and all our assets petered out, the man who didn't owe a cent was in great luck, beyond a doubt. Then ruin knocked at every door, and happy was the gent inside who didn't owe at any store, who'd kept his credit straight and wide. For all the boys were buying things and paying 50 cents a week; their cars were good enough for kings, their radios were truly sleek. They dressed like princes of the realm, their stand-off was their one best bet; then came the slump to overwhelm the giddy lads who were in debt. The man who paid up as he went could look the whole town in the face; he might not have a pewter cent, but still he moved with queenly grace. He had not worn his credit out, he'd kept it clean from last to first; now he could buy a quart of kraut and seven pounds of wienerwurst. Now he was welcome in the store where merchant princes held their sway, and he could buy a peck or more of doughnuts or of shredded hay. Sad was the lot of those who owed for everything they'd bought in years; the bailiffs chased them up the road and prodded them with rusty spears. Wherever they might chance to go, some fellow cried in frantic tones, "When will you pay me what you owe? When will you dig up fourteen bones?" Oh, when the ship of luck comes back, and we are safely all aboard, let's put no mortgage on the shack, let's buy no junk we can't afford.

Passage of Racing Bills by Virginia House Today Conceded by Foes

Large Crowd Drawn by Debate

Revenue to State and Ban on Bookmakers Cited by Hall.

By Doug Warrenfels.

RICHMOND, Feb. 21.—Debate on horse racing bills began in the Virginia House of Delegates today, with passage tomorrow conceded by opponents.

Vociferous backers of the sport drew repeated warnings from Speaker Brown by cheering Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, and other pari-mutuel champions. Minority critics had their say in silence.

Potential State revenue from the tracks was stressed by Hall. He pointed out ten States legalized racing last year. He insisted Virginians should have the same privileges as residents of Maryland, West Virginia and North Carolina.

Give State Revenue.

"Why not give the State revenue from racing as long as the people are going to gamble anyhow?" he asked. "If you do this, crooked bookmakers will have to leave the State."

The speaker explained only three tracks could be established and local option clauses protected reactionary counties.

Hall contended the measures were constitutional. He cited decisions of Illinois, Kentucky and Utah courts which upheld pari-mutuel bills after they were attacked as in violation of constitutional lottery bans.

Delegate G. A. Harris, Suffolk, urged the House to reject the bills. "We shouldn't pass unconstitutional legislation," he declared. "These bills violate the fundamental principles of law. I'll never vote to establish any monopoly."

Constitutionality Upheld.

The constitutionality of the proposal was upheld by Delegate E. C. McCue, jr., Charlottesville.

"When the time comes to vote," he warned new members, "let your conduct on the roof garden be your guide."

Delegate J. Tinsley Coleman, jr., Lovingston, directed sharp verbal thrusts at racing. He said the State could survive without gambling revenue. He recalled a Nebraska court decision, which declared pari-mutuel wagering unconstitutional.

"What in the hell is the constitution between friends?"

As various court decisions were cited, Delegate Haskins Hobson, of Chesterfield, threw the House into laughter by citing a decision ruling on the relative value of poker hands in which the court was not according to Hoyle.

The two bills, which were explained in detail at the opening of the debate by Hall, would operate a racing commission to regulate and control the sport in Virginia. The commission would consist of three members to be named by the Governor. A racing season of not more than 100 days would be provided with not more than 40 days racing allowed at any one track. Racing on Sunday would be prohibited.

Betting Only at Track.

Pari-mutuel betting would be permitted only in the pari-mutuel booths at the track. Mnors could not bet. Tracks would have to be at least a mile length and the bill would require at least six races per day with purses of $600.

Delegate Hall said the "take" would be 8 per cent, with 3 per cent going to the State and 5 per cent to purses and upkeep of the track. In addition, there would be a tax of 10 per cent on admissions to the track and a license tax of $5 on trainers, jockeys and other attendants.

Virginia Tech Five Will Battle Wasps

To Close Season Tonight in Underdog Role.

Blacksburg, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Virginia Tech indoor teams will meet two foes at home and two more at Lexington tomorrow night in court and mat double-headers. Varsity and first-year basket ball teams play Emory and Henry in the season finale for both Tech teams on Memorial Hall court here, commencing at 7 o'clock. Varsity and first-year wrestlers meet Washington and Lee in Doremus gymnasium at Lexington.

Keen interest is aroused here in the visit of Glenn Roberts, high-powered scoring ace of the Wasps, and his fast stepping cohorts from Emory. Tech fans are eager to watch the leading scorer of the State in action.

The Tech varsity has a disastrous season in its wake and is favored to bow before Coach Pedie Jackson's shot-markers. Fortified with a smashing triumph over Greenbrier Military School, the Tech freshmen will make a dogged stand against Emory's clever first-year five.

Conference Group to Weigh Plan to Ease Eligibility Rules

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb 21 (AP).—A proposal to make less rigid the requirements for participation in intercollegiate athletics will confront the Southern Conference executive committee when it gathers here tomorrow night in advance of Friday and Saturday's annual meeting of the conference.

The proposal, submitted by the committee on the constitution and by-laws, would remove the requirement relating to graduation from high school, but would retain the compulsion that participants offer at least 15 Carnegie units at first matriculation from an accredited high school or an approved preparatory school. At least 11 of the 15 units would have to be in acadamic subjects.

Eligibility Rules.

In addition, the committee recommended the elimination of another eligibility rule requiring that no student shall be eligible for varsity athletics until he has passed 24 semester hours or 36 quarter hours. This rule further provided that for a student to be eligible for participation in athletics for any ensuing year he must have passed 24 semesters or 36 quarter hours of the previous year provided, however, that hours for the second and third quarter or second semester shall be regulated by the separate institutions.

These suggested changes are among the 25 proposed amendments to the constitution and by-laws which will be considered at the conference. The executive committee has asked unanimous consent to consider not only the recommended changes but to make any other suggestions.

Proposals to increase the powers of the central booking office and to increase from $600 to $1,000 the annual appropriation for it and proposals to eliminate sections of the by-laws setting up the offices and defining its duties forecast considerable argument when the matter comes up for consideration.

Broadcast Proposal.

Another proposal recommending the elimination of a section in the by-laws prohibiting the broadcasting of games played in Southern Conference territory in which a conference school is a participant will come before the meeting.

College boxers, under another proposed amendment, would be forbidden to participate in matches where spectators pay for admission unless they are participating as representatives of the institutions in which they are enrolled.

Among other proposed amendments are suggestions for setting definite dates for basket ball, track, boxing and wrestling tournaments.

Allegany High Teams Win Double-Header

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Allegany High School's basket ball teams remained in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League pennant races by taking both ends of a double-header from Central High School on the Campobello court. The boys won, 44-19, and the girls scored, 16-9.

Curry and Stearne each tallied 5 goals while Gerdeman had four double-deckers to his credit. Ray Ritchie scored 10 of Central's 19 points. At half time A. H. S. held the long end of a 37 to 4 score.

Allegany's girls, paced in scoring by Marjorie Leonard, who garnered 9 points, easily subdued the Central sextet in the opening game of the twin bill.

Coaching Offer Is Ready for Tebell

Will Get Richmond U. Bid Upon Release From Contract by Virginia U.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 21 (AP). Release from his contract at the University of Virginia, which has one more year to run, is the only barrier between Gus Tebell and the job as head coach at the University of Richmond, it was learned today. Tebell conferred this morning with President F. W. Boatwright.

Although no school official would be quoted, it was learned at the University of Richmond that the institution did not wish to be placed in the position of offering the job only to have it turned down. For this reason, it was said, Tebell must be free from his present contract before a final agreement can be reached with Richmond authorities.

Must Get Virginia Release.

To be released from his contract, it will be necessary to go to the Virginia 3-3-3 committee, which is headed by William H. White, jr., of Washington.

Certain points of difference between Richmond University and Tebell, concerning salary, were understood to have been settled at the interview today.

Before meeting Tebell, Dr. Boatwright had said "we hope to iron out any differences of opinion and to have a definite announcement very soon."

Cage Tourney at Davis.

Davis, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Eight basket ball teams representing four counties will compete in the sectional high school basket ball tournament which will be held here Friday and Saturday, March 2 and 3, according to announcement by Director C. M. Stalnaker of Davis High. Grant, Hardy, Tucker and Pendleton counties will be represented.

Grid Drills Prolonged.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Winter football drills at N. C. State will be continued until March 10 or longer, Coach Hunk Anderson announced today. The drills were scheduled to end Saturday of this week.

Grudge Bouts On Mat Card Tonight

E. Dusek-Malecewicz and Boesch-Collins Bouts Promise Much.

PROMOTER Joe Turner tonight presents his agony boys at the Auditorium in the only sports entertainment listed here as part of the celebration of George Washington's birthday. The show will be presented in five acts, two of which seem to have struck a most popular chord in the anticipation of the fans who love the performers tough and the going rough.

Just because a bout is listed as a feature, it not necessarily will be one, but there is no question but that tonight's headline fracas between Ernie Dusek and Joe Malcewicz will be the outstanding one of the card if not the best seen here in many moons.

Too frequently in rassling matches, the participants go about their work so nonchalantly as to give the impression that they are merely putting in their time, but when Ernie and Joe clash tonight a real brawl appears to be a certainty.

Grudge Element Added.

Besides the natural roughness of both men—each figuring the best way to win matches is to pound and punish his foe until he is worn to a frazzle—there is the grudge element which started when Rudy Dusek, Ernie's older brother, had words here two weeks ago.

Rudy refused a challenge from Malcewicz at that time, suggesting that the Polish gentleman go get himself a reputatin. So Joe replied that he would clean up the whole Dusek clan—there are five earning their living in the cauliflowered ear industry—and he threatens to wipe up the mat with Ernie tonight. He is a peppy, scrappy hombre, with a weaving style of defense and the ability to get in and away fast while throwing thor-hammers from all directions. It should be quite a bout.

Paul Boesch, who neatly tied up both the Masked Marvel and his manager last week by choking both almost to death in the ring-ropes, meets the same man, who says his name is Lee Collins and that he never again will handicap himself by wearing a hooded contraption in the semifinal. Here again appears the personal peeve angle, which promises the cash customers the fighting type of bouts that they crave.

In the other matches, Frank Judson meets Little Beaver, Hans Steinke tackles Buck Weaver and Jack Hurley takes on Adville Brown. Escorted women guests will be admitted free.

V. M. I. Track Stars Drill Hard for Meet

Lexington, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—A dozen V. M. I. indoor trackmen, elated at their strong showing in holding Virginia to a fraction over five points as a margin of victory in a triangular meet in which thhe Cadets outscored Washington and Lee for second place, are in hard training for the Southern Conference meet at Chapel Hill.

Maryland, Wash.-Lee Court Game Canceled

Maryland's basket ball game with Washington and Lee tomorrow night at Ritchie Coliseum has been canceled at the request of the Generals. The team is scheduled to play in the Southern Conference tournament next week, but the faculty advisory board ruled that the players could not be excused from classes for both the Maryland game and the tournament.

Three-Year Pact For Tebell Urged

Student Senate Acts After Richmond U. Report.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 21 (AP). The student senate of the University of Virginia, today unanimously recorded itself in favor of offering Gus Tebell a three-year contract to remain on the coaching staff at the University.

Meanwhile, it was reliably reported, that the release from his contract with the University of Virginia was the only barrier between Tebell and the job of head coach at the University of Richmond. His present contract has one more year to run.

Senate members, representing every phase of undergraduate actvities, agreed that it was the overwhelming wish of the student body that Tebell be retained, but they went on record as opposing public mass demonstrations in his behalf such as have been talked among undergraduates.

Hagerstown Quintet Bows in Winchester

Catfish Smith to Get Georgia Job, Report

Atlanta, Feb. 21 (AP).—The Journal says Vernon (Catfish) Smith, former all-American football end and baseball star at the University of Georgia, soon will be named as baseball coach at Georgia to succeed Bill White.

White has been named as a scout for the Atlanta club of the Southern Association.

Mat Card at Danville.

Danville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Leo Wallick, of Michigan, will meet Jack Steel, of Idaho, tomorrow night as the feature event of the wrestling card sponsored by the American Legion at the armory. Young Sampson, of Syracuse, is matched to meet Pug Gravely, of Martinsville.

Snow Too Abundant, Ski Meet Postponed

Lancaster, Mass., Feb. 21 (U.P.). The annual Lancaster ski meet has been postponed indefinitely because there's too much snow.

The ski ball and selection of a "queen" will be held tomorrow, but the actual skiing must wait until the snow isn't quite so deep.

G.W. Freshmen Rally, Trim Emerson

Sannefax Shoots Goal in Last Minute to Win by 29-28 Score.

A LAST MINUTE field goal from the trusty arms of Cannefax, star center of the G. W. Frosh outfit, spelled defeat for the Emerson Institute basket ball team on the Boys Club floor yesterday. The score was 29-28.

The Institute five led for 39 of the 40 minutes of play, but a fourth quarter rally by the Colonial yearlings after they trailed at the end of the third inning, 27-19, spelled victory.

Tipton High Scorer.

Ollie Tipton, former Roosevelt flash, was the high individual scorer of the fray, the Emerson guard snagged 6 field goals and 5 fouls for 17 poins. Whitely, center of the G. W. Frosh team, was best for the winners, bagging a dozen points.

It was the last game of the season for the Colonialets.

Maryland State Five Wins Over Blue Ridge

Frederick, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Maryland State School for the Deaf set back Blue Ridge College, New Windsor, in the school gymnasium, 36 to 24. The victory evened a defeat handed Maryland State by the collegians at New Windsor last week.

The Maryland School team, in charge of Harry C. Benson, athletic director, and James A. McVernon, coach, left today to take part in the annual Eastern States title tournament of schools for the deaf in the new gymnasium of St. Joseph's Institute, New York City, Friday and Saturday. Women Enter Title Tennis Semifinals

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Play in the twenty-seventh annual women's indoor singles tennis championships reached the semifinal round today, the four survivors being Norma Taubelle, New York, seeded No. 2; Jane Sharp, Pasadena, Calif., seeded No. 3; Millicent Hirsh, New York, No. 4, and Helen Pedersen, Stamford, Conn., 17-year-old newcomer who eliminated the No. 1 favorite, Mrs. Henry C. Brunie, on Tuesday.

In the doubles, the two top-seeded teams both gained the final round. They are Mrs. Brunie and Mrs. William V. Hester, jr., Brooklyn, and Misses Taubelle and Sharp. Both advanced as a result of easy, straight-set triumphs.

Navy's Spurt Trims Penn, 43 to 25

Borries, With 15 Points, and Dornin Leaders in Wild Attack.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). After battling to a 16-to-16 stand off in the first half, the Navy basket ball team staged a whirlwind attack at the opening of the second session to overwhelm the University of Pennsylvania, intercollegiate leaders, here today. The final count was Navy, 43; Penn, 25.

The second half was a veritable rout of the Quakers, Navy rolling up 19 points in seven minutes of play, at the same time holding the enemy without a marker.

As has been the case in nearly all local games this season, the Red and Blue players found themselves powerless to check Buzz Borries and Dusty Dornin. This pair of Navy stars literally ran wild at stages, shooting goals from all angles and under difficult conditions. Borries, with 5 field goals, and as many from the penalty stripe, grabbed scoring laurels. Dornin trailed by only 2 points. He accounted for 6 field markers and one from the mark.

Middies Get Jump.

Both teams were keyed to a high pitch for the fray, but the five Tars appeared the more composed and, getting the jump on the invaders, it looked for a time as though the battle would be a Navy walkaway. Borries put the opening punch in the Navy attack with a foul goal, followed quickly by a field marker. A few seconds later Dornin broke through to score a field goal. At the close of 10 minutes the Middies had taken the commanding lead of 13 to 5. From then on, however, Penn showed a tighter defense and steadily closed the gap, and just before the whistle for the intermission, Hashagen, who was the outstanding player on the floor for Penn, shot from court to knot the count at 16-all.

The second half got under way in precisely the same fashion as the first, although it was Mandelkorn, and not Borries, who shot from the strip, and followed up with a field goal. With Borries and Dornin flashing their most brilliant work, the Middies rolled along to crush the Penn defense and, after 8 minutes had elapsed the home team had increased its score to 35 to Penn's 18. Four minutes later, Borries retired from the game, and Johnny Wilson, Navy mentor, steadily injected other substitutes into the game, but the visitors had wilted badly, and 7 points was the extent of their efforts.

Rutgers Tank Victor.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Rutgers and the Naval Academy broke even on the sports of the tank here this afternoon. The former took the relay to win the swimming match by 38 to 33, while the Navy made another stride toward the intercollegiate championship by winning at water polo, 31 to 15.

Reaching the 400-yard relay, the last event in the swimming meet, the Navy was leading by 3 points. Hopes were high as Hyland gained a yard on Kyle in the first lap. However, Clift, the second Rutgers swimmer gained five. Stevens and Brick swam the third lap on even terms, but Spence added two yards to his team's margin, swimming against Plichta, who had beaten him in the 220-yard free style.

Carey Ousted As Dodgers' Manager

Dropped After 2 Years; Reported at Odds With Players.

Stengel May Get Post; Marty McManus Is Also Mentioned.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21 (AP).—Max Carey, born Maximilian Carnarius, today was deposed as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, of the National League, after two years as leader of one of the most colorful, but likewise erratic teams in baseball.

No successor has been appointed, but Charles D. (Casey) Stengel, Carey's right-hand man on the Dodger staff, is speeding East by train from his home in Glendale, Calif., to discuss the post with the club directorate.

Stengel is the unofficial choice of the Brooklyn fans and a colorful leader of the best Dodger traditions, but there was the possibility he might turn it down because of loyalty to Carey, who brought him back to the big time after several years in the minors.

McManus Mentioned.

If Stengel should refuse an offer of one of the most prized berths in baseball, it is the general belief that Marty McManus, an old friend and associate for many years of the Dodgers' general manager, J. A. Robert Quinn, is first in line. McManus recently was signed as a Dodger player after being let out as manager of the Boston Red Sox, and appears certain at least to be named Stengel's first assistant.

Carey, one of the smartest of them all as star outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates from 1911 to 1926, took over the management of the team two years ago after Wilbert Robinson, leader of the flock for 17 years, had finally been ousted by his long-time enemy, Stephen W. McKeever, the Dodger president.

Sought Speed on Club.

Noted as a great base runner himself and an exponent of inside stuff, Carey attempted to rebuild the club along lines featuring speed and cleverness. He inaugurated calisthenics at the spring training camp, much to the consternation of veterans accustomed to "Uncle Robbie's" genial ways. In the new scheme of things such Flatbush idols as Babe Herman, the outfielder, departed. Attendance at Ebbets Field went into a decline and so did the team.

After finishing third in 1932, the Dodgers barely escaped the cellar last year, winding up in sixth place while reports of internal strife grew. It was said Carey was at odds with a number of players, including Joe Stripp, third baseman, and none too well satisfied himself as the result of a 50 per cent cut in salary.

Signed 1934 Contract.

Rumors of his departure were stilled just before the end of the season when he signed to a new contract for 1934 at a reported $12,000 a year. During the winter, however, after Quinn had been brought in as general manager, the rumors were revived when it became apparent that Carey was not being consulted on trades or deals.

Virginia Swims To Double Win

Generals Upset by Frosh and Varsity Teams.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Virginia's swimming teams upset the dope here this afternoon by registering a double victory over the Natators from Washington and Lee University, State champions for the past four years.

The margin of victory in each case was 8 points, the Varsity score standing 46 to 38, and the Freshman result, 37-29.

In the Varsity encounter, the Cavaliers annexed both relays and first place in three other events. Graveley, of Virginia, won the diving event, with his teammate, Mackenzie, second.

High-point man for the meet was McDavid, of Washington and Lee, who won both dash events and 220-yard free-style race.

Freshman.

50-yard breast stroke—Won by Forrester (Virginia); second, Tagoon (W. and L.); third, Taylor (W. and L.). Time, 0:36.

50-yard back stroke—Won by Wishner (W. and L.); second, Malo (Virginia); third, Strause (Virginia). Time, 0:35.4.

50-yard dash—Won by Lund (W. and L.); second, Mustin (Virginia); third, Wronsk (Virginia). Time, 0:25.7.

100-yard dash—Won by Brashier (W. and L.); second, Croake (Virginia); third, Tucker (Virginia). Time, 0:59.

220-yard free style—Won by Malo (Virginia); second, Armistead (Virginia); third, Sanford (W. and L.). Time, 2:40.2.

Below Zero Triumphs by 4 Lengths; Ridgeview Scores at $9.30.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 21 (AP).—In a finish that found three horses fighting it out noses apart, the B. B. Stable's Moane Keala hung on with great courage to emerge a winner in the 7-furlong event that occupied fourth place on an eight-race program here this afternoon. It was the twelfth winner saddled by Trainer Hirsch Jacobs at the meeting and the eighth success for Owner Isidor Beiber, both men leading their respective divisions to date. E. F. Seagram's Prize Package, running fastest of all at the end, was second, with A. Hullcoat's Pardee third. Moane Keala paid $5.50 and the time was 1.24 1-5.

Jimmy Hunter broke Moane Keala well and swung the elderly mare into early command. Fervid was quickly disposed of and Porter's Dream set sail for the favorite, But Moane Keala also shook off this challenge. Prize Package came with her usual rush in the last furlong and missed getting up by the narrowest of margins.

Eddie Lee Wins First.

Tremolo, heavily played in the first race, a maiden affair, was left at the post, and, although making up a world of ground, it was a lost cause. Eddie Lee, a handsome colt, making his first start, showed in front from the break to the judges to score by a length over Pass, with Shuffle Off third. There were many who knew Eddie Lee was going to run, for he was backed down to $8.80 for $2.

Below Zero, which galloped home only to be disqualified in her last outing, again had no trouble outfooting a flock of maiden 2-year-old fillies, the Tryster filly scoring by four lengths under Johnny Gilbert. Gobet headed Hope Eternal for second money. Below Zero paid $3.20.

Aunt Flor Scores.

Earl Porter, who was back in the saddle today and saying that he was not sick, as it was reported yesterday, but that he "went fishin'," failed to get out of his slump in the third race. The Geneva boy was astride the favorite, General Lejeune. After getting off slowly with the gelding, Porter took the General the longest way home and finished second, three lengths behind the pace-making Aunt Flor. General Lejeune just got up to nose out Meloy for the place. Aunt Flor stole into a long lead and won as Jockey Renick pleased, to pay $7.30.

Porter found his stride with the running of the fifth event. The Illinois lad brought Ridgeview from off the pace to register by a length and a half at $9.30 for $2. Parity outlasted Drombo, taking the place by a head.

Sabula, which won over the turf course the tail end of last month, returned to similar competition in the sixth race and again demonstrated her extreme fondness for grassy going. The daughter of Macaw just laughed home, cantering past the pagoda pole with a half dozen lengths advantage over the unfortunate Pot au Brooms. Pre-War was a well beaten third. Don Meade rang up a riding double on Sabula, which returned $6.30.

Earl Porter was on much the best horse in the seventh race, and his mount, Little Corporal, galloped home first by five lengths. His backers collected only $3.10 for $2. The victory gave Porter a double and 19 Hialeah triumphs, one less than Gilbert. David W. drove to the place, a length and a half clear of Try Fair.

Spud, $4.30, won the last contest by a head from Ukraine, with Gallic third.

FIRST IN WAR, FIRST IN PEACE - BUT SECOND IN THE HEARTS OF HIS SWEETHEARTS... WASHINGTON WAS TURNED DOWN BY 3 WOMEN BEFORE HE MARRIED

Like most young boys, George Washington at one time had an ambition to become a sailor. He went further than merely day dreaming, however, and at one time prepared to leave home and sign up as a cabin boy on a British ship. His mother learned of his intention, talked him out of the idea, and gave him a pocket knife as her part of the bargain.

It takes little imagination to see that this episode made a great difference in the future of young George, and that consequently the future of the United States was vastly affected by the bargain a colonial mother made with her young son.

George Washington, as every schoolboy has been taught, was "first in war, first in peace"—but with his sweethearts he rated somewhat lower. At least three women refused his proposals of marriage, or refused to take him seriously. The first was Mary Cary, Washington's first love. She married a wealthy gentleman. Next Miss Betsy Fauntleroy spurned his love. Some years later he met Mary Phillipse, of Yonkers, N. Y., but she, too, refused Washington's proposal. She married Roger Morris a few years later..

Washington finally married, in 1759, Martha Dandridge, widow of Col. Daniel Parke Custis. The marriage was an extremely happy and successful one—but, as some biographers have pointed out, she no more represented his first love than he did hers.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 21.

Not a bad day, fellow, not a bad day. Three winners and three seconds for which we are duly thankful. I received your wire and that wasn't a mediocre crack about having Mike bite Brass Monkey the next time he runs to see if the horse isn't lead. However, I honestly believe that we shall get some gold out of that thar critter ere the meeting is o'er. Tomorrow is George Washington's Birthday, all day long, and I can not tell a lie. I picked these horses right out of the entries.

BILL.

First race—Claremont turned in a sizzling effort last out and should make it two victories in a row tomorrow. He must not take chances, however, because Lynnewood will be right there to make a battle out of it. Apprehensive is in excellent shope now nad will be dangerous.

Second race—No Saint gets another chance as far as I'm concerned, if if he is to oppose the highly touted Basquine. The latter has worked sensationally. Red Sunset to complete the money picture.

Third race—Dornoch is biting off quite a mouthful in htis field, but on occasions has impressed me as a sprinter to be respected, even among this brand of hoof slingers. No standout, but worth an across-the-board shot. Energetic Boy may stick it out in this field to be close. Blackmock and Fair Joan to fight for the rest.

Fourth race—Davoc is the logical choice here after his fine exhibition the other day. The remainder of the field includes five horses with good chances of being close. They are Star Bud, Squeeze Out, Barkantine, Lofty Lady and Plight.

Fifth race—This is the toughest spot on the card. Personally, I lean toward Gold Step. However, Character won in the mud very cleverly and can not be discarded. Feudal Lord for the show end.

Sixth race—We could do worse than back Sandwrack to lead this crew to the wire. He is in clever hands and is said to be fit. Haggerson and Waterway for the other awards.

Seventh race—Prince Tokalon has been a constant performer hereabouts and earns the top ranking in this company. Fort Dearborn and Boy Crazy are the chief contenders.

Loop to Fine Players Catching Last Put-Out

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 21 (AP). The new Dixie League has passed a rule that the player who catches the final put-out and keeps it is to be fined $2, the sum to go to the home team.

A sports writer figures there will be 750 put-out balls in the league this season worth $937.50 wholesale. The fines of $1,500 would mean a neat profit for the home team.

W. & L. Matmen Oppose Tech Tonight

Grapplers to Go Back to Regular Divisions for Final Dual Meet.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). With the date of the meet changed from Saturday to tomorrow in order to avoid a conflict with the Southern Conference boxing tournament in Charlottesville, Coach A. E. Mathis' Washington and Lee wrestlers are ready for the final dual affair of the season against the Virginia Tech varsity and freshman teams, coached by Mathis' former pupil, Earl Tilson.

The Washington and Lee varsity grapplers who dropped in weight for the Navy meet last Saturday will go back to their regular divisions against the Techmen, with LeRoy Hodges, who wrestled at 175 against the Middies, giving way to Ed Seitz, and Glenn Shively, reserve 145-pounder, who fought at 135 at Annapolis, surrendering to Doc Sloan.

Cocaptain Harvard Smith will return to the 155-pound class, which Seitz took for the Navy meet, and Ruge DeVan will be back in his old position at 145. Frank Crew, 118 pounds; Fred Sarkis, 126 pounds; Cocapt. Charlie Pritchard, 165-pounds, and Hugo Bonino, heavyweight, will be in their usual places. Sarkis and Pritchard are conference title holders.

Although tied by Navy last Saturday, the Generals who held the Southern Conference championship, have not been defeated this season. They have registered victories over Johns Hopkins, Roanoke Y. M. C. A., Davidson, North Carolina State and the University of North Carolina. Pritchard, Crew, Bonino and Smith have not been beaten this season, and the others have lost only once each.

Rockville High Plans Tourney on March 2

Rockville High School will stage its fifth annual sportsmanship tournament Friday night, March 2, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, in the school gymnasium. The tourney is sponsored by the school's chapter of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood. and will be a strictly invitational affair.

A bronze cup will be awarded the winner of the tournament, determined on the following system of scoring: Twenty points to a team winning a game, 2 minus points to a team for every personal foul committed, 15 minus points to a team losing both games played.

Charlottesville Five Beaten by Woodberry

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—The Woodberry Forest quintet defeated the Charlottesville School for Boys here today, 28 to 21. The home team took the lead at the start and held it throughout in spite of the accurate shooting of Little, which kept the losers in the running all the way.

Capt. Fuller Patterson, of Woodberry, was high scorer, with 15 points, while Little trailed him closely with 13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EDDIE LEE, $8.80, $7.20, $4.90; PASS, $4.10, $3.40; SHUFFLE OFF, $8.20.

EDDIE LEE, a good looking colt, got away fast, showed good speed, saved ground and won easily. PASS worked his way up and finished gamely. SHUFFLE OFF, well up all the way, had no excuse. BARDSTOWN finished with a rush on the inside. BERNIE K on the outside. OUR SENATOR had speed for half a mile and then tired. He is improving. TREMOLO was left at the post and was lengths out of it, but went after field and closed a big gap.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway), nursery course. Purse, $700; the Helpful. For maiden 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:44. Off at 2:49. Winner, C. H. Knebelkamp's blk. f. (2), by Tryster—Low Degree. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 3-5.

†P. H. Faulconer entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELOW ZERO, $3.20, $2.50, $2.30; GOBET, $20.00, $6.20; HOPE ETERNAL, $2.90.

BELOW ZERO was much the best of the field. She dashed into lead, opened wide gap, and was only galloping at end. GOBET ran straight and finished fast on inside. HOPE ETERNAL broke well, but was hard ridden all the way. SUN REVERIE ran good race. There was a lot of crowding just after the start, in which MOLLY, APERTIF and DIANE S were knocked about roughly.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:20. Winner, Middleburg Stable's ch. f. (3) by Our General—Quick Batter. Trained by C. Phillips. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AUNT FLOR, $7.30, $3.20, $2.70; GENERAL LEJEUNE, $3.30, $2.50; MELOY, $3.20.

AUNT FLOR broke running, was sent to the front with a rush, opened wide lead and never was let down. GENERAL LEJEUNE was pounds the best, but was the victim of a poor ride. He got away slowly and was steered the overland route for entire trip. MELOY, always well up, saved ground and held on gamely. SUNNY TOM displayed good speed. ZOMBRO had a flash of early speed. CONFLAGRATION closed a big gap.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:48. Off at 3:51. Winner, B. B. Stable's br. m. (6), by War Shot—Awapuhi. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:24 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOANE KEALA, $5.50, $3.70, $2.60; PRIZE PACKAGE, $13.80, $4.10; PARDEE, $2.80.

MOANE KEALA got away flying, went to the front with a rush and, steadied along, saved ground at every stride and just lasted to win. PRIZE PACKAGE, favored by light weight, closed gamely and would have won in another stride. PARDEE broke good, but was allowed to drop far out of it. He was taken wide entering stretch, closed with a rush. PORTER'S DREAM, well up for six furlongs, then tired. OFF DUTY closed fast. ESCADRON rounding to and should go well from now on. FERVID quit.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:17½. Off at 4:22½. Winner, Jones & George's ch. m. (6), by Prince of Umbria—Dangerillo. Trained by J. V. Pons. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25 Time, 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIDGEVIEW, $9.30, $4.80, $3.90; PARITY, $10.20, $7.40; DROMBO, $3.50.

RIDGEVIEW got away well and was rated along on the outside, began to move up around turn and closed with a rush in stretch, but was doing her best to win. PARITY displayed unusual early speed and held on gamely. DROMBO followed pace closely for all the way and ran good race. PRIMUTE had no mishap. INFLATE tired chasing the pace. FLAGHORN broke slow, but closed some ground in last half mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $800; the Drexel; claiming prices, $4,000 to $3,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start fair. Won galloping; place, easily. Went to post at 4:50. Off at 4:51½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's b f. (4) by Macaw—Florida Blossom. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SABULA, $6.30, $3.40, $2.90; POT AU BROOMS, $3.50, $2.60, PRE WAR, $4.00.

SABULA likes the turf course. She ran into lead early and rated along to top of stretch drew out, winning galloping. POT AU BROOMS had a very rough trip. He was repeatedly blocked and going into first turn was almost knocked down. He recovered and finished fast. PRE WAR was unprepared for the start and had to make up a lot of ground. BIG RED broke on top, but was allowed to drop back to last place. MOUNTAIN ELK had speed for half a mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:17½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE CORPORAL, $3.10, $2.70, $2.40; DAVID W, $6.10, $4.00; TRY FAIR, $3.80.

LITTLE CORPORAL ran into lead turning out of back stretch and drew away in last furlong. DAVID W moved up with a determined bid entering stretch and was next best. TRY FAIR showed good speed. BORDER PATROL ran an improved race. PATRICE RUNYON was almost knocked down by HUNTER LYON going into first turn and again turning out of back stretch. Her winning chances were ruined.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:43½. Off at 5:47. Winner, H. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPUD, $4.30, $3.70, $3; UKRAINE, $9.20, $7.10; GALLIC, $14.30.

SPUD broke well, but was eased back going into first turn, moved up on inside, then came to the outside in stretch and, closing gamely, won going away. UKRAINE rushed into lead, displayed good speed and held on gamely. GALLIC was hustled along all the way and ran fair race. KIBITZER was clear of interference and well up, had no mishap. MARCASITE tired after getting into a contending position.

V. M. I. Quintet In 3 Contests This Week

To Meet Virginia Tonight, Richmond Tomorrow, W. & M. Saturday.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Except for the Southern Conference tournaments in basket ball, wrestling and indoor track, most V. M. I. teams will close their seasons this week. The varsity basketers have the heaviest card, with successive games against Virginia, Richmond and William and Mary.

Fresh from the 43-to-26 defeat of V. P. I., Capt. Stumpy Travers and his mates will travel to Charlottesville tomorrow to try to repeat an earlier victory over the Cavaliers. On the next night the Cadets will be seeking revenge at Richmond, and on Saturday they will be set to add another victory over the Indians, who were nosed out, 23 to 19, at Lynchburg.

Boxers in Tourney.

Four Cadet boxers will compete in the Conference tournament at University. Capt. Eddie Bain, undefeated lightweight; Willis Cavedo, clever bantam; Custis Burton, aggressive welterweight, and Joe Oatley, hard hitting heavy, will wear V. M. I.'s colors against the South's leading leather pushers.

V. M. I.'s strong wrestling teams, each of which scored convincingly over V. P. I. teams by identical scores, 25½ to 6½, last week, will meet strong opponents Saturday. The varsity matmen will entertain Temple University at Lexington following a freshman boxing meet pitting the young Cadets against Petersburg High School.

Seek to Repeat.

The Cadet matmen hope to repeat last year's victory over the Philadelphia team. Bill Currence, undefeated in five starts in the 155-pound class, is regarded as a potential winner, along with Capt. Charlie Dorrier, 165; Charlie Lathrop, 135, and John Burgess, 175, all of whom have won four out of five matches.

The freshman grapplers will travel to Woodberry Forest for their last meet of the season on Saturday. The first-year basketers will close their card Thursday against the Virginia freshmen, who downed the young Cadets, 34 to 31, in the season's opener.

Stocks Capture Fractional Gain In Quiet Sales

Caution Persists on Eve of Holiday; Trading Cut to 1,899,920 Shares.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Imminence of a holiday and persistence of the general mood for caution, which recently has characterized trading, kept stocks within narrow bounds today.

Low-priced issues, mainly representing the automotive industry, still held the speculative floor. Turnover in several of them was substantial, though gains were largely fractional. Old-time favorites loafed along drowsily, uninspired by activity in the currently popular issues.

Some of the former roused a bit during the last hour, but their move had little vitality and it quickly abated. Closing prices showed small changes on the whole, the averages being up three-tenths point in a turnover of 1,899,920 shares.

Packard Shares Advance.

Packard, on a volume comfortably over 100,000 shares, advanced a major fraction. Studebaker touched its best price in a couple of years, while Hupp and Graham-Paige churned vigorously without accomplishing much.

Electric Auto-Lite, Budd Manufacturing, Timken-Detroit, Kelvinator, Maytag, McKesson & Robbins and Glidden achieved gains up to more than a point. Aviation shares were mixed, United Aircraft firming about 1, while Douglas sold off. New York Dock, Austin Nichols and Burns Bros. coal issues were more or less strong.

New York Central reacted when the new financing plan was announced, but held above $40, which is the first conversion price for the proposed bonds.

Phone Is Quiet.

American Telephone was very quiet both before and after the regular dividend was announced for such action by the directors had been widely expected. At best the shares were up nearly a point; they closed a shade lower.

North American's dividend in cash—the company had previously paid in stock—was accompanied by word that the directors thought "while present conditions continue" part of the earnings should go to stockholders rather that all the available income should be invested in the business as heretofore.

Steel shares apparently had discounted the encouraging midweek trade reports on their industry. Iron Age said momentum had been gained on several fronts, pushing the operating ratio to 44½ per cent of capacity against 41 per cent a week ago and 19 per cent last year at this time.

Autos Best Customers.

The automobile factories remain steel's best customers, but the review thinks public works contracts and more rapid railroad rehabilitation will sustain volume and bring successive weekly increases.

Electric power output last week was under the immediately preceding period, which contained a holiday, but the rise to over 1933 approached 12 per cent. Forecasts of the freight car loadings figures to be published Friday mentioned a fairly good rise as probable.

Money markets are giving no indication of seasonal firmness, but this is not surprising in view of the reserve bank's cheap money policy and the influx of gold. The system's weekly statement will be published Saturday. Because of tomorrow's holiday; the assumption is that its changes will be relatively unimportant.

Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—A few sales, comprising a fair amount of wool in the aggregate, were closed on 48s, 50s, ¼ blood fleeces. Strictly combing Ohio wool of this grade brought 41c in the grease on a limited turnover, some being held at 42. Southern wools of 48s, 50s quality, shrinking lighter than the wool of the Ohio grade, have been sold at 42c in the grease, estimated at round 71, scoured basis.

Increased Demand for a Thirty-Hour Week Raises Interesting Questions as to Where Earlier Calculations Have Proven Wrong.

By Ralph West Robey.

One of the most interesting subjects of speculation at the moment is the reason for the increased outburst for further curtailment of working hours. There has been a smoldering demand for a 30-hour week, of course, for many months. Recently, nevertheless, the demand quite obviously has been increased and apparently is getting better support in Administrative circles. There is considerable reason for believing, accordingly, that in the near future a determined effort will be made to have industry absorb this additionel burden as a means of further easing the problem of unemployment.

In trying to make heads or tails of this trend the first thought that occurs to one is that it reflects an earlier miscalculation of what would be accomplished through the NRA and the PWA in the way of restoring employment. Had everything gone along as planned, and as explained to the public, we by this time should be far enough out of the depression to cease worrying about unemployment as an all-important problem. This does not mean that all unemployment would be ended by this spring, of course, but by and large we were given to understand that the increased demand for labor from private industry and through the PWA would make other artificial relief unnecessary.

Explained Plan for Ending CWA Relief by First of May.

This expectation, in fact, was the basis upon which we were assured that there would be no occasion for the CWA after the first of May. Just how many of the 4,000,000 men given relief through this organization it was expected would be put to work by private industry and how many by the PWA, never was indicated, but probably the PWA was viewed as more important. On the basis of contracts let last fall, it appeared there should be a substantial increase in the expenditures under PWA this spring. This is because there usually is about this much lag between the letting of contracts and the actual spending of money.

As yet, however, there has been no marked increase in the expenditures on Public Works projects. Accordingly no substantial field for placing the unemployed that are now on CWA is being offered here. It may be that there will be a substantial improvement later and PWA will afford a material outlet for taking care of the unemployed, but such betterment is not now obvious.

Private Employment Also Has Missed Expectations.

On the side of private employment there are two factors to consider. The first of these is the absolute increase in the volume of business activity. For several weeks this has been increasing, but not at any phenomenal rate, and the actual level of business is materially below what we were assured it would be by this time. It is quite possible, therefore, that here, too, an error was made on anticipating possible outlets for the unemployed.

The second factor in private employment is the possibility of technological improvements. I have no basis upon which to estimate how great these have been. It is possible, nevertheless, that the higher wages and shorter hours imposed by NRA codes have given some impetus to such improvement with the result that the present volume of business can be handled with fewer men. If this is the case, and there is no marked betterment of business in the near future, we will be faced with increasing unemployment as a result of the NRA. Which, if any, of these account for the increased demand for a 30-hour week is an open question. It is probable that all of them enter to some degree. In any event it now is quite clear that we still have the problem of unemployment ahead of us. None of the three great attempts to date—spreading work under NRA codes, public works expenditures and sharply increased business activity—have been an adequate solution.

Bond Market Edges Upward To New Highs

Activity Is Irregular as Sales Volume Rises to $15,692,000.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The bond market edged up into new high territory since 1931 today, but prices as a whole were a trifle irregular most of the time and trading occasionally bordered on dullness.

While transfers totaled only $15,692,000, par value, against yesterday's four-hour session aggregate of $13,215,000, the average for 60 domestic corporate issues was up one-tenth of a point at 85.1. The market will be closed tomorrow for the holiday.

Economic news continued cheerful. Iron Age found steel production progressing rapidly, due largely to automotive demands, and predicted further gains as the result of Government spending and railway needs. Car loadings were showing more than seasonal advances.

Of principal interest to the market was announcement of the New York Central's refunding plan which involves an offering of $59,911,000 of 6 per cent collateral bonds which are convertible into stock at $40 a share for three years and $50 a share thereafter until maturity in 1934. The new bonds were quoted on a "when issued" basis at a premium of around 12 per cent shortly after the terms of the offerings were made public.

The maturing debenture 4s were the most active on the list, some 1,150 changing hands at 100⅛, a gain of ⅛ of a point. The rest of the company's loans were up 1 to 2 points in moderate turnovers.

Other carrier obligations did little or nothing. Some of the utilities and industrials received attention. Among these, up fractions to a point or more, were some bonds of American Telephone, Armour, Bush Terminal, Consolidated Gas, Consolidated Coal, Hudson Coal, International Telephone, Loew's, Murray Body, N. Y. Dock, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, Richfield Oil and Western Union.

Government securities were again a bit mixed. Obligations of France, Argentina and Germany got up a point or so, but loans of Austria, Brazil and Great Britain eased.

Stocks—Prices advanced by an average of three-tenths of a point in spite of the preholiday trading. Caution persisted and kept quotations within narrow bounds. The volume of sales reached 1,899,920 shares.

Bonds—New highs were reached notwithstanding some irregularity which sometimes bordered on dullness. Advances averaged one-tenth of a point. Sales volume increased to $15,692,000.

Curb—Narrow changes marked trading and the tone was steady. There were modest advances scattered throughout the list. Sales totaled 352,000 shares.

Wheat—Preholiday readjustment of accounts gave wheat a slight advance. Other grains followed the rise. The market closed firm, unchanged to fractions higher. May wheat sold at 88⅜; July at 86⅝.

Cotton—Prices advanced $1 per bale, but lost most of the gain in late trading. March sold at 12. The general market rose 7 to 10 points. May close at 12.17.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed steady, 10 to 16 points higher. March sold at 10.43; May, at 10.70.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the U. S. at $35 per ounce. It stood in London at 136 shillings and 5 pence.

Dollars—The United States dollar rose slightly on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.09 to the English pound; 6:55 cents to the French franc, and 39.50 cents to the German mark.

U. S. to Sell Nitrate Of Soda to France

Hopewell, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). Citizens of this city are very much elated because France has awarded a contract to the Atmospheric Nitrogen Co. of Hopewell for $1,240,000 worth of nitrate of soda. This news came from Paris, where it was announced that France would buy 40,000 tons from the United States; 20,000 tons from Norway, and 10,000 tons from Germany.

This is one of the largest export orders received by an American manufacturer this year. Whether the 70,000 tons of nitrate which France is purchasing will be used for the manufacture of high explosives or for agricultural purposes, or other chemical uses, is not known.

It is expected that shipment will be made in the near future from the local company's docks in Hopewell, from which nitrates were shipped in large quantities two years ago when the Japanese were shelling Shanghai and Manchuria.

Germany Cuts Foreign Debt 46 Per Cent

Berlin, Feb. 21 (AP).—During four years of "the depression" Germany has been able to reduce her foreign debt roughly 46 per cent between June, 1930, and January 1 of this year.

From a high point of 26,500,000,000 marks in 1930 the foreign debt has shrunk to an estimated 14,600,000,000 marks.

The United States remains Germany's principal creditor with Great Britain, Holland, Switzerland and France following in the order named in both short and long term credits extended to this country.

Indicative of the way the debts have been whittled down is the estimated 6,000,000,000 marks in short term credits still in Germany at the close of last year compared with 9,350,000,000 in September, 1932. Similar shrinkage is noted in the long term credits which shrank to 6,800,000,000 marks from 10,180,000,000 marks over the same period.

The reduction is due to three factors. Devaluation of American and British currencies, as well as those monies of the sterling bloc of countries, netted the German debtors 3,900,000,000 marks reduction up to last September. Between July, 1931, and last September 4,300,000,000 marks was taken from Germany by the creditor nations. Prematurity payments by Germany also accounted for an estimated billion marks.

Tobacco Markets.

Abingdon, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.).—Burley tobacco sales at local warehouses yesterday reached a volume double that of last year and the market has six more selling days to hang up a new all-time record.

The volume Monday was 214,672 pounds for $21,349, an average of $9.95. The season's sales are 14,076,150 pounds for $1,474,264.25, an average of $10.48 per hundredweight.

The Abingdon market sold only 7,000,000 pounds last year. The goal for the present season was 10,000,000 pounds, and the volume of selling has been far in excess of any expectations the warehousemen held at the outset of the auction year.

All warehouses here will suspend sales after Wednesday, February 28.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Business on the stock exchange was active today. Home industrials were buoyant on favorable trade reports, while transatlantic issues firmed on Wall street advices. Kaffirs improved owing to the higher price of bar gold and Cape of Good Hope buying. The market closed firm.

Paris—Covering, caused by the announcement that the bourse would be closed tomorrow on account of King Albert's funeral, lifted prices, especially international issues. The closing was improved.

First Transit Net Reaches $118,392

The first statements of operation of the new Capital Transit System were filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. These reports giving figures for both rail and bus lines were submitted for December, 1933, and January, 1934.

The December statement lists the following: Operating revenues, $664,628.12; operating expenses and taxes, $502,863.66; operating income, $161,764.46; nonoperating income, $13,659.95; gross income, less operating expenses and taxes, $175,424.41; deduction from gross, $57,031.83; net income, $118,392.58.

Goods Markets.

New York, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Cotton goods markets were very quiet with prices steady today. Trading was resumed more actively following storm disturbances, but delay in shipments was expected for some days yet. Rayon processors expect that a compensatory processor tax will be imposed on them and there is some likelihood of an advance in prices talked of in markets. Silk goods were in moderate demand. Burlaps were slightly higher. A steady demand was reported for low priced worsted dress goods for cutting-up purposes.

Curb's Prices Change Little; Tone, Steady

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Narrow changes marked the close on the curb exchange today. The tone of the market was steady while a few modest advances were scattered throughout the list. Trading was dull until the last hour when a little buying enlivened the situation a bit.

American Gas & Electric eased a fraction but Electric Bond & Share was steady. Consolidated Gas, of Baltimore, rose more than a point on a light transfer. Metals were generally quiet as were alcohols. Hiram Walker and Bunker Hill & Sullivan, however, got up a little more than a point each.

Oils improved slightly, Gulf and Humble Oils and Standard Oil, of Kentucky, averaging ½ point higher. Schiff & Co., rose more than a point in a modest turnover and Swift & Co. improved a minor fraction.

Transfers approximated 352,000 shares compared with 221,000 in yesterday's four-hour session.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Trading in the country's leading security and commodity markets will be suspended tomorrow in observance of Washington's Birthday.

E. P. Gosling, president of Laclede Gas Light Co., is urging holders of the refunding and extension mortgage 4 per cent gold bonds to approve the company's proposed plan of extending the maturity from April 1 for a period of five years. The extension has been authorized by the Missouri Public Service Corporation. The bonds are outstanding to the amount of $20,000,000, half being in the hands of the public and half on deposit as collateral with the trustee.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's freight loadings for the first 15 days of February totaled 85,241 cars, compared with 78,100 in the same January period and 71,115 cars for the corresponding part of February, 1933.

Security holders of Central West Public Service Co. are being informed by Max McGraw, chairman of the board, that details of amendments being made to the voluntary adjustment and refunding plan because of protracted receivership litigation in several States will be submitted to them in the next 30 days.

Wall street hears that a tentative plan has been drafted for refunding $10,272,000 of first-mortgage 5 per cent bonds of Virginia Railway & Power Co., providing that an exchange of the issue for equal amounts of 5½ per cent ten-year secured convertible bonds. A cash payment of $60 to the depositor of each $1,000 maturing obligation is contemplated, the reports say, while each new $1,000 bond would be convertible into 100 shares of new no-par common stock.

Stocks of lead in the United States at the end of January totaled 207,674 tons, against 203,601 on December 31 and 184,693 at the end of January, 1933. January production was 38,750 tons, compared with 41,305 in December and 27,568 a year ago.

The American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports that world zinc output in January totaled 105,782 short tons, an increase of about 2,000 over December. United States production amounted to 32,954 tons, against 32,004 in December. Stocks in this country at the end of January totaled 111,982 tons, while the zinc cartel reported stocks of 154,203 tons.

Private advices received here from Amsterdam say that the Dutch East Indies bonds which are not converted into guilder bonds will be callable at par on July 1, September 1 and November 1 on a paper dollar basis. Until these dates holders may convert into the new guilder 4 per cents on the basis of 2.45 guilders to the dollar.

High Record Is Set In Shipping Coal

Elkins, W. Va., Feb. 21 (Spl).—The Western Maryland Railroad moved 9,900 tons of coal over the Cumberland line in one of the best days of business the line has experienced in the past decade.

A train left here at 11:45 o'clock with 69 loads of coal, about 4,900 tons, and another left over the same line a few hours later with 75 loads, about 5,000 tons. W. V. McIntire, trainmaster, said the coal was collected from the Elk, Durbin and Belington branches and distributed throughout the New England States to steel mill centers.

He also said the company has plenty of power left to move more trains and the 13 engines used on the two larger trains only gave them more working room in the shops here.

Liverpool Cotton Mart Will Honor King Albert

Cotton Loses Early Gain In Late Trading

March Closes at 12.00 as General Market Rises 7 to 10 Points.

May closed at 12.17 or 15 points off from the best with the general market closing barely steady at net advances of 7 to 10 points.

The opening was 3 to 8 points higher in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables, trade and commission house buyng. There was a little Southern selling here, but liquidation was less in evidence and the comparatively light offerings were believed to indicate an improved technical position after recent declines.

Liquidation Continues.

March liquidation in preparation for possible notices on Friday continued in considerable volume, but was readily absorbed by the trade against sales of later deliveries without much change in the differences.

Buying increased during the early afternoon, pushing March contracts up 12.15 and October to 12.62, making net advances of 22 to 25 points on the active positions. This bulge met a renewal of realizing or liquidation during the last hour and closing quotations showed losses of 12 to 15 points from the best prices of the day.

The strength of the near month was favorable to sentiment and the prompt absorption of March offerings probably helped the general tone of the market. There were reiterated reports of a generally firm spot basis in the South.

Exports today, 19,455 bales, making 5,436,995 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 13,076 bales. United States port stocks, 3,527,078 bales.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was barely steady today under liquidation of nearby positions, owing to the continued poor demand for actual oil, the prospects of rather heavy March deliveries and the easiness of hogs. Final prices were unchanged to 5 points net lower. Sales, 51 contracts, including 16 exchanges from March to July at 45 points difference. Bleachable spot, nominal; March closed 5.13; May, 5.38; July, 5.64; September, 5.82.

Cotton Goods Output Rises In January

New York, Feb. 21.—Domestic cotton goods production registered a somewhat larger increase during January than did the production of general manufactures, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. The index of cotton goods production for January, based on the average rate of production in the six years from 1922 through 1927, was 89 as against 76 in December, 86 in January last year, 81 two years ago, 82 three years ago, and 103 four years ago. The January index of general manufacturing production was 70 as compared with 67 in December, 63 in January last year, 70 two years ago, 81 three years ago, and 103 four years ago.

The January increase in cotton goods production was somewhat more than the usual seasonal increase from December to January, while the increase in the production of general manufactures was just about seasonal. During the first six months of this cotton season, that is, from August 1 to January 31, domestic production of cotton goods ran somewhat above the level of general manufacturing production, with the index averaging 90 for the six-month period as compared with an average of 76 for the production of general manufactures.

The activity in the domestic cotton cloth market, noted in recent weeks, continued during the past week, says the Exchange Service. with sales of cloth by mills again exceeding current production as measured in aggregate yardage. Print cloths sold somewhat less freely than in recent weeks while narrow sheetings were much more active. Heavy goods continued in steady demand. Duck sales increased. Fine gray goods in plain advanced irregularly, with increases of an eighth to a quarter of a cent a yard recorded on some constructions.

The mill position has improved considerably as a consequence of the active cloth demand in recent weeks. Some mills, notably in the print cloth and sheeting divisions of the industry, are reported to be sold ahead to capacity for three months, and are declining further forward business. Unsold stocks of cloths at mills have been further reduced. Heavy goods mills are reported to be better sold than for a year past, with stocks materially reduced. Cotton mill activity is being maintained on an average at about the January level.

Destruction of Coffee Drops to 46,000 Bags

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—That destruction of coffee in Brazil has slowed up was indicated by the fact that only 46,000 bags were destroyed during the first half of February, according to cables to the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

The total compares with 178,000 bags during the last half of January and 112,000 during the first half, while from July to December 1933, 7,740,000 bags were eliminated, an average of 1,290,000 bags per month. The total destroyed since the start in June, 1931, amounts to 26,401,000 bags.

Investment Company Pays to Contract Holders Sum of $4,234,454.

The consolidated report for 1933 of the Fidelity Investment Assocation, with local offices, and the Fidel Association of New York revealed that at the close of the year the assets of the associations were $24,285,057. During the year there was $4,234,354 paid to contract holders and it is computed that during the 23 years of the Fidelity Association's existence more than $330,000,000 has been paid.

The statement of assets shows that the associations hold $16,625,702 of bonds, the largest bond portfolio in their history, and $3,316,028 higher than at the close of 1929. Total securities at the close of 1933 were $18,160,177, a gain of $1,558,349 over 1932 and represented entirely by additional bonds.

In his letter to the board of directors, President Howard Southerland, former alien property custodan, writes:

"It was necessary during the peak of the depression to maintain a strong cash position, and this was done, but since the emergency demand has now passed, it is neither nesessary nor desirable to maintain a large cash balance. It is better to keep these funds invested. Therefore, the item of cash in bank of $562,995.84 is somewhat less than at the close of 1932.

"As a precautionary measure, however, the association has at all times maintained a considerable investment in Government and municiual bonds so that our cash position could be increased, as and when needed, upon short notice. Reflecting improved business conditions, the demands for cash have decreased since early 1933 and have shown a very marked decrease in recent months.

"The associations have always operated with an extremely low overhead and during the year just closed we have succeeded in developing further economics without, in any way, affecting our efficiency of operation."

Bank Rate Unchanged.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in its 1½ per cent rediscount rate.

Fox Industry In Canada Is Prospering

The fox industry of Prince Edward Island appears to be in an especially strong position, according to a report from Consul Edwin C. Kemp, Moncton, N. B., made public by the Commerce Department.

It is expected that the season's total return to ranchers will exceed $1,000,000. Approximately half of this amount was recently distributed through the three large fur marketing organizations.

The Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association is said to be enjoying a record year. Since the season opened, this organization has received some 25,000 pelts for marketing, and has distributed almost $450,000 to ranchers. The Prince Edward Island Fur Pool, organized on a small basis four years ago, is now one of the largest of its kind in the world. The Dominion Fur Sales, Ltd., which was recently organized, is also reported enjoying a good year, the report stated.

Besides the skins marketed through the trade organizations, foxes are sold each year to private buyers from all parts of the world, the report points out.

Treasury Note Allotments

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday announced the final subscription and allotment figures with respect to the February 19 offering of 2½ per cent Treasury Notes of Series D-1935, maturing December 15, 1935, and of 3 per cent Treasury Notes of Series C-1937, maturing February 15, 1937.

Subscriptions and allotments were divided among the several Federal Reserve Districts and the Treasury as follows:

Wheat Renews Advance in Late Trading

Price advances at the last, however, came only after May wheat had dropped below 88 cents and May corn below 50 cents the first time in 1934.

The setbacks resulted largely from selling ascribed to prospective wheat crop improvement because of heavy snowfalls today in Kansas and Nebraska.

Wheat closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼ cent higher; corn, unchanged to ½ up; oats, unchanged to ⅛ advance, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 7 cents.

End-of-the-day rallies in the wheat market were in the face of a forecast pointing to additional moisture relief for crops Southwest and West, with wet weather indicated throughout the greater part of domestic winter wheat territory.

Helping at times, though, to offset bearish crop developments in hard wheat sections were official reports indicating cold wave damage to soft wheat had been done in the Eastern Ohio Valley, and in Kentucky and Tennessee. More or less buying was also associated with notice taken of statements by Secretary of Labor Perkins as to possibility of currency inflation.

Wheat Trade Small.

In the aggregate, wheat trade was not large, and the market was easily influenced. Washington developments as to proposed new restrictions on grain exchange dealings continued to be sharply watched, and had a tendency to act as a drag on buyers. There was little disposition apparent, however, to press the selling side of the market on declines.

Corn and oats prices mainly reflected changes in wheat values. Rural offerings of corn were light, and there were reports of further deterioration of the corn crop in Argentina.

Improvement of commission house demand for lard during late transactions helped to rally provisions somewhat from effects of hog market downturns.

Steel Operating Rate Pushed to 44½ Per Cent

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The steel operating rate has pushed to 44½ per cent of capacity this week, up 3½ points over last week and 25½ points above the corresponding period of 1933, Iron Age reported today.

"Automotive demand," said the review, "is still the chief single factor in the rise of steel activities. With evidence that this will be even augmented, with the PWA millions now beginning to penetrate basic industries and with the railroad rehabilitation program in definite action, the steel industry is expectant of well-sustained demand and weekly increases in volume.

"A decided sellers' market has developed for cold-finished sheets, due to the desire of motor-car makers to cover present requirements. Mill capacity for this commodity is now well taxed for the remainder of the quarter, one large producer having been obliged to refuse a 1,000-ton order during the past few days. Added to the demand from automotive centers has been the urge of automatic refrigerator makers to cover their sheet requirements.

"Shortages of orders, parts and materials are hampering the expansion of motor-car assemblies, operations this week being approximately on the same level as last."

No second-quarter price changes were filed by February 19, the last day for such action, and Iron Age says this would indicate that steel makers "hope to counterbalance their present higher costs and the accompanying losses through the economies of increased volume."

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Directors of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share, payable April 16 to stockholders of record March 15.

Payment of the regular dividend for the first quarter of the year carries the company into 1934 with an unbroken record of payments on its capital stock at the rate of $9 annually since 1921, although for two years past the surplus has been dipped into to make the disbursement.

In 1932 the company failed to earn its dividend by $3.04 a share and in 1933 it failed by $3.62, thus taking a total of $6.66 a share out of surplus prior to the disbursement ordered today. In the annual statement to shareholders issued on February 16, Walter S. Gifford, president, stated that the company's surplus, including its interest in subsidiaries, amounted to about $31 a share.

The American Locomotive Co. today reported net loss of $1,465,504 for 1933, after taxes, depreciation, &c., and including $424,098 reserve for discount on Canadian exchange restored to income. This compares with net loss of $4,589,716 in 1932.

Unfilled orders on January 1 this year amounted to $3,500,782 against $1,079,891 at the beginning of 1933. William D. Dickerman, president, stated that the company received orders for 12 new locomotives during 1933, 10 of which were shipped. In addition 1 locomotive ordered in 1932 was delivered.

The Government's program for financing purchases of railroad equipment, Mr. Dickerson said, should result in benefits to the company.

U. S. Gypsum Co. and subsidiaries report consolidated net income for 1933 of $1,738,927 after charges and preferred dividends, equal to $1 a share on the common stock. This compares with net income of $1,599,416 after charges and provision made for bad debts to the amount of $150,000 in 1932, or 86 cents a common share.

McKeesport Tin Plate Co. and Tin Plate Improvement Co. report for 1933 a net profit of $1,888,416, including $638,153 as the former company's share of Metal Package Corporation's earnings. The total is equivalent to $6.29 a share on the parent company's capital stock and compares with 1932 total net profit of $1,503,088 or $5.01 a share.

Directors of Commercial Investment Trust Corporation have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on the common stock, payable April 1, 1934, to stockholders of record March 5, 1934.

The usual quarterly dividend on the convertible preference stock, optional series of 1929, also has been declared at the rate of 1-52d of one share of common stock, or, at the option of the holder, in cash at the rate of $1.50 for each convertible preference share. This dividend is also payable April 1, 1934, to stockholders of record March 5, 1934.

Ludlum Steel Co. reports for the year 1933 net earnings, after deduction for depreciation and taxes, amounting to $161,063, equivalent to $3.59 per share on 44,900 shares of preferred stock outstanding on December 31, 1933, as compared with a net loss of $474,311 for the year 1932.

The preliminary annual statement of General Foods Corporation and subsidiaries for 1933, made public today by C. M. Chester, president, shows net earnings of approximately $11,000,000 after all charges and expenses and provision for income taxes.

This is equal to about $2.10 a share on the 5,251,468 shares of the company's no-par-value common stock outstanding at the close of the year.

This compares with net earnings of $10,343,882 for the previous year, equivalent to $1.97 a share of 5,251,501 shares outstanding December 31, 1932.

January net operating income of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad was $518,379, compared with $132,841 a year ago; surplus after charges last month was $9,716, contrasting with deficit of $412,669 in January, 1933.

Engineers Public Service Co. in a preliminary report shows consolidated net income for 1933 of $1,376,627, compared with $4,190,052 for 1932. Income of the parent company, which is derived from dividends and interest on securities owned, amounted to $2,354,178 for 1933, against $14,119,009 for the previous year. Balance of these earnings for dividends on the preferred stock amounted to $2,141,796, against $3,799,134 for the previous year.

The preliminary report of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. for 1933 shows net loss of $8,342,901, after taxes, interest, depreciation and depletion. This compares with loss of $13,272,783 in 1932.

The preliminary report of the Pennsylvania Railroad for 1933 shows net income of $19,281,170, after taxes and charges, equal to $1.46 a share on the capital stock, compared with $13,573,536, or $1.03 a share, in 1932.

The Wabash Railway's preliminary report for 1933 shows net loss of $4,823,058, after charges against loss of $6,673,695 in 1932.

Virginia Fears Lack of Rain May Hit Crops

Winchester, Va., Feb. 21 (Spl.). With the total precipitation in Winchester and vicinity for the year to date at less than half of the average rainfall mark, farmers and stock raisers of this section have become alarmed over the general lack of water both for growing crops and stock.

The Winchester Research Laboratory reported today that the rainfall for 1934 to date was 5.28 inches, whereas the normal rainfall for the period is 12.04 inches.

For two weeks farmers have been hauling water for livestock from springs and streams following a failure of the water supply from cisterns. General subnormal temperatures prevailing throughout the Shenandoah Valley during January and February have added to the water problem by reason of the tendency on the part of the extreme cold to freeze the streams dry.

Fruit growers today expressed alarm over a continuation of the drought. At the present time it is not believed the fruit trees have been injured; however, leading growers declare that if the drought should continue for several weeks it is probable that serious damage to the trees will result.

During the drought of 1930 many orchardists watered the trees in an effort to stave off the effects of the lack of rain. In spite of the watering, the trees suffered thousands of dollars damage.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 21 (Spl.). With their wheat crop badly damaged by the subzero weather, Washington County farmers are planning to plow up and plant barley in their wheat fields this spring. Only winter wheat is grown here, the climate not being suitable for spring wheat.

The problem confronting the farmers of this section is not only to obtain a crop that will be profitable, but one that will produce straw for the stock. Barley will fill these requirements.

Fruit growers have confirmed the earlier predictions that the subzero weather had wiped out the peach, plum, cherry and apricot crop in the Cumberland Valley. Some varieties of peach buds here are entirely killed, while in other varieties only one out of ten buds show signs of having survived.

Brazil Places $40,000 Addressograph Order

New York, Feb. 21.—Receipt of an order from the City of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, for approximately $40,000 worth of Addressograph equipment, to be used by the municipality in handling its tax collections, is announced by the Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation.

Cash Income of U. S. Farmer Increases 17 Per Cent in 1933

Earnings Jump to $4,607,000,000, Compared With $3,933,000,000 in 1932; Bulk of Returns Realized From Commodity Shipments.

New York, Feb. 21.—The cash income of the American farmer for the calendar year 1933 amounted to $4,607,000,000, an increase of 17 per cent, or $674,000,000, over the 1932 total of $3,933,000,000, according to estimates made by the State Street Research & Management Corporation in conjunction with the Corn Industries Research Foundation.

"Of the total cash income to the farmer in 1933," say the estimates, "approximately $4,457,000,000 was realized from commodity shipments.

"The remaining $150,000,000 represents Government premiums and adjustment payments on hogs, wheat, cotton and tobacco. Government commodity loans are not included.

Basis of Estimate.

"These figures show substantial improvement in 1933 over 1932 in all except the early months of the year, when the long downward trend that began late in 1929 was still apparent. Beginning with May, 1933, the monthly estimates showed encouraging increases over the corresponding months of 1932.

"Cash income for December, 1933, is estimated at $372,000,000, including $4,000,000 for 1933 tobacco price equalizing payments and $20,000,000 for 1934 wheat adjustment payments, a total of $24,000,000 in Government benefits. Three hundred and forty-eight million dollars was realized on commodity shipments as compared with $302,000,000 in December, 1932, and $472,000,000 in November, 1933.

Decline in November.

The decline of 26 per cent from the November, 1933, total resulted from abnormally low shipment of grain and cotton together with low prices for hogs and dairy products.

After adjustment for normal differences in the relative importance of the different months of the year, the December, 1933, income still shows a decline from the seasonally adjusted November, 1933, point.

"In comparing the total cash received from shipments of specific commodities during the calendar year 1933, most of the major items showed decided gains. Apart from Government premiums and payments, income from cotton increased 50 per cent; wheat, 33 per cent; corn, 150 per cent and hogs, 15 per cent."

Freight Traffic Increased by 6.2 Per Cent

Freight traffic handled in 1933 by the railroads of this country, measured in net ton miles (the number of tons of freight multiplied by the distance carried), totaled 275,082,712,000 net ton miles, according to complete reports for the year just received by the Bureau of Railway Economics and made public today.

This was an increase of 16,034,040,000 net ton miles, or 6.2 per cent above that for 1932, but a reduction of 65,065,910,000 net ton miles, or 19.1 per cent, under that for 1931.

In the Eastern district there was an increase of 6.8 per cent in the amount of freight handled in 1933, compared with 1932, while the Southern district reported an increase of 6.3 per cent, and the Western district an increase of 5.2 per cent.

In the month of December freight traffic handled by the class 1 railroads amounted to 22,000,788,000 net ton miles, an increase of 893,340,000 net ton miles, or 4.2 per cent above the same month in 1932, but a reduction of 661,632,000 net ton miles, or 2.9 per cent under December, 1931.

In the Eastern district the volume of freight handled by the railroads in December was 0.5 per cent above the same month the year before, while the Southern district reported an increase of 0.7 per cent. Freight traffic in the Western district increased 11.9 per cent.

New York Produce.

New York, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—EGGS—Receipts, 35,204; irregular; mixed colors, standards and commercial standards, 17@17½; firsts, 16½@16¾; seconds, 16@16¼; other mixed colors unchanged. White and brown eggs unchanged.

Copper Miners Await Code To Cure Ills

Hearing on Proposed Rules to Begin Next Week; Yield May Be Cut.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The copper industry, weighed down for four years by huge surplus stocks, is anxiously awaiting the response to its proposed NRA code. There is a hope the code may form a basis for a solution.

The statistical position of copper improved moderately in 1933, and prices recovered to around 9 cents a pound for a time. This was nearly double the depression low.

There was some relapse toward the end of the year, however. While the metal rallied to 8½ cents last month, it has now sagged to 8 cents, a level which many producers say means red ink.

Hearings to Begin.

Next week hearings begin on the code. The price recovery some weeks ago was attributed in part to expectation that a code would be adopted soon to eliminate profitless production. This presumably prompted buyers to stock up in an effort to "beat" the code.

The proposed code provides that the industry may enter into agreements to rgeulate production, liquidate surplus stocks or withhold them from the market, and fix minimum prices.

It has been rumored that decisive steps might have been taken long ago, except for the antitrust laws.

Restrictions Are Discussed.

Restriction plans were discussed with leading world producers in 1931, and some progress made toward a world agreement, but international cooperation ended with the American tariff on copper in 1932.

Formation of a giant pool to buy up the surplus stock has been rumored occasionally, but nothing has come of it. Stocks, according to the United States Bureau of Mines, were reduced 12 per cent in 1933 to 1,213,000,000 pounds, still an unwiedly volume.

Consumption increased last year, and devaluation of the dollar helped. After it had appeared that the domestic producers were being largely forced out of the world markets by metal from South America and Africa, the cut in the dollar gave them a new foothold. Exports in the latter months of 1933 were running at double those of a year earlier.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Feb. 21.—WHEAT—Shipments from elevators, 8,515 bushels. Stock in elevators, 994,056 bushels. Opening prices were: No. 2, red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 95½; February delivery, domestic, 95½; March delivery, domestic, 96½. Receipts of wheat running light and demand is fairly good here for No. 2, red winter, garlicky. Off grades hard to sell.

CORN—Receipts, 1,098 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 618 bushels. Stock in elevators, 12,622 bushels. Receipts of corn from the nearby sections have recently been running freer. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair domestic demand.

COB CORN—Quoted at 2.75@3.00 per barrel for carloads prime nearby yellow on spot. Offerings more than ample for present needs. No. 2, yellow corn (old) arriving here by car quoted at 65@66 per bushel with transit billing.

OATS—Receipts, 6,599 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 355 bushels. Stock in elevators, 51,255 bushels. Receipts of oats show considerable variation in weight, being mostly light. Demand fair in a jobbing way. Good heavyweight oats are relatively scarce and such command a good premium. No. 2, white oats, 48@52 per bushel, as to weight and position.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1¼ cents per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 3,636 bushels. Shipments from elevators, 40 bushels. Stock in elevators, 51,201 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. No surplus of good timothy. Prices range from 12.00 to 14.00 per ton, as to grade and kind. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

Gossip of New York Markets

New York, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—From the office boys and telephone girls to the senior partners in the Wall street houses today there prevailed a lackadaisical air as if this were part of the Washington's Birthday holiday celebration. And traders had a similar spirit. Sales were around the 2,000,000 share mark on the big board with no interest in any particular section. Tomorrow the street will be closed tight. Banks will be shut and there will be no dealings in foreign exchange in this country. In fact, markets throughout the United States, with the exception of live stock markets, will be shut down. All will reopen Friday.

Holidays—Not a few traders are planning to extend their holiday until next Monday. Several took the opportunity to decamp for warmer climates. Some of them are leaving tonight for Florida; others for Bermuda. There isn't much opportunity to trade from Bermuda, but Florida offers all the advantages of an uptown New York brokerage office.

Snow—Chief conversation on the floor of the exchange and the brokerage houses today was the storm. "How'd you get in," was the prevailing question. Brokers retold how they fought the drifts to get to the railroad stations. One rented a horse and sleigh and drove to the elevated station. Another set out by automobile, abandoned the car, went back on foot and got a horse for the trip to the railroad. A stock exchange guard started from home at 4 a. m. yesterday morning and landed at the exchange at 3 p. m. "You better go home now," his superior told him. "Home nothing. I'm going to stay right here until my next shift comes along," he retorted.

Electricity.

The Edison Electric Institute which releases the weekly figure on electricity output at 9 a. m. each Wednesday had to hold it up until noon today because of the storm which practically cut off the New England area. Large holdings companies in New England reported direct by wire to the institute without difficulty, but the smaller units mailed their statistics. Mails were held up by the heavy snow; hence the late report.

Daily Oil Yield Increased by 162,550 Units

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 162,550 barrels in the week ended February 17, totaling 2,284,200 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California increased 12,750 barrels to 1,829,050 barrels.

Refineries representing 92.4 per cent of estimated total capacity, operated at 66.5 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,224,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 92.4 per cent of total, operated at 66.9 per cent of capacity, was 2,236,000 barrels.

Daily average crack gasoline by refineries representing 95.1 per cent of total charging capacity was 433,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week by refineries representing 95.1 per cent of total was 428,000 barrels.

Imports Increase.

Puerto Rico Ships More Raw Sugar to America

Raw sugar shipments from Puerto Rico to the United States totaled 91,198 short tons from January 1 to February 17, an increase of 49.4 per cent when compared with 61,024 tons shipped during a similar period last year. Refined shipments were also higher, totaling 19,898 tons, against 15,500 last year, an increase of 28.4 per cent, according to cables to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange.

Shipments of raw and refined together for the week of February 17 amounted to 37,341, against 11,068 in the same week in 1933.

Slam Bidding.

In these days of high premiums for Slams, every Rubber Bridge player must perfect his Slam bidding technique, as, if his opponents bid Slams and make them and he fails to bid Slams when he holds the cards which insure the making of such contracts, then he is almost sure to be a loser at the end of the session. It is equally true that when Slam hands are dealt in Duplicate, players who fail to reach them in the bidding are sure to have low scores, and while the pocketbook may not suffer, prestige is almost sure to.

One of the hands in the Grand National pair event of the United States Bridge Association offered a Slam to the North and South players which was reached by only six out of the 14 pairs, and, peculiarly enough, three of them played it in the wrong contract, choosing a trump suit which contained a loser instead of one which was solid. Actually the hand did not present an extremely difficult problem in bidding. It is quite true that North and South each held only two cards of the chosen trump suit of the other, and it is equally true that each of them held six cards in his own suit, but, after all, while South has a long and fairly strong suit, it is ragged and may easily be pulverized, while North's suit is much more solid and South knows that he holds a very important card which should, in view of North's bidding, solidify the trump situation.

The hand and the correct bidding were:

North, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣(1)	Pass	2♡(2)	Pass
3♣(3)	Pass	3♡(4)	Pass
4♣(5)	Pass	6♣(6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—No more than a minimum hand except for the length of the trump suit.

2—South has a six-card suit, a fit with his partner in clubs and 3½ honor-tricks. The two-heart bid is correct.

3—Showing additional length and strength.

4—South discloses that his heart suit is also rebiddable.

5—North's clubs are strong enough to bid once more when he can still bid them below the level of game.

6—South can not use the Slam Convention because, while he holds two Aces, he does not have the King of a bid suit. Fearing that any other bid may be passed, he contracts for a Slam at once. An alternative bid, which in Duplicate would probably be justified, is six notrump.

Six clubs, of course, require no play whatever unless by chance East should underlead the Ace of spades. In that case North might have a hard guess in deciding whether to play the King or not, but as a matter of fact the play of the Ten would be an immediate confession of defeat, so the King should be played even against such deceptive defense.

Tomorrow's Hand.

After East opens the bidding with one club and South makes a Take-out Double, what is West's correct call, and why?

North, Dealer.

Radio Waves and Ripples

APOLOGETIC note:

A lot of very good people were disappointed with us the other day because we said the Sons of the American Revolution were helping the Daughters of the American Revolution defray expenses of broadcasting War Secretary Dern, Commissioner Allen and William Tyler Page in a George Washington program on WRC this morning. It seems it was the Sons of the Revolution, a very different organization and quite proud of it, too.

FUNNY note:

Several weeks ago a motor car company in this town, looking for a program to sponsor, turned down a WJSV show because its bosses couldn't understand its jokes.

Yesterday they found what they wanted. It was Willie Green's Hay Shakers, a hillbilly team, long out of work. They start Friday at 7:30 p. m. on WRC.

Whitecaps.

WRC—"Tribute to George Washington," Secretary of War Dern, Commissioner Allen, William Tyler Page, 10 a. m.; N. B. C. observes the birthday of Frank L. Stanton, American poet, with a program of musical settings for his works, 2:30 p. m.; "The Little-Known Washington," Rupert Hughes, 4:15 p. m.; Rudy Vallee, 8 p. m.

WMAL—"Chopin," a drama presented on the 125th anniversary of the composer's birth, 3 p. m.; 500 voices singing in the eleventh annual International Musical Festival, 4:30 p. m.; wrestling matches, 10:15 p. m.

WJSV—"Debunking the George Washington Legends," Representative Sol Bloom, 12:30 p. m.; Voice of America presents a new cast, Nicholas Kempner, Alexander Gray, Mary Eastman, 8:30 p. m.; Evan Evans singing "Who Is Sylvia?", "A Kingdom by the Sea," "Betsy's Boy," and "Trade Winds," 10:45 p. m.

This department is indebted to Columbia's publicity writers for the following, but it's still a good story:

How these girls do grow up. Marian Bergeron has one "Miss America" title to her credit, is expected to become a regular C. B. S. broadcaster after a guest appearance with Charles Barnett's Orchestra tonight, and is only 16.

Announcer Andre Baruch, with, perhaps, some idea of spending several months on a desert island, hurried into a bookshop the other day and asked for a copy of "Anthony Adverse."

"We haven't any of Anthony's verse right now," said the young lady behind the counter, "but I can give you the newest book of poetry, 'Poet's Gold,' by David Ross.'"

Andre was a little astonished, but he thought it was nice of the young lady to be so interested in his fellow announcer's work. Hoping to keep the flame of interest burning brightly, he asked:

"Who is this David Ross?"

"Oh, him," replied the young lady. "He was one of the best-liked poets of the early part of the century, but he got killed in the war."

Radio's first 1934 star is an 11-year-old Baltimore girl, Mary Small, N. B. C.'s Little Miss Bab-O.

As cool as veterans who were on the air before she was born, Mary began a commercial series Sunday. Less than six months ago she was unknown to radio.

Mary's father has been coaching her for radio since she was 5 years old. Rudy Vallee introduced her to a network audience last September 28. Less than a month later she was singing for National in a sustaining series.

A half dozen well-known American educators come to National microphones from the 64th annual convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association in Cleveland Monday and Tuesday. George W. Rightmire, president of the Ohio State University, will be among Monday's broadcasters. Leonard V. Koos, of the Univresity of Chicago, will go on the air Tuesday. Both broadcasts will be at 6 p. m.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt enters the field to champion the cause of the New York Philharmonic Symphony.

She will make an appeal for the organization's sustenance during the intermission of its broadcast on C. B. S. Sunday.

"The Giant's Stair," prize community center play, will be aired by the Columbia Players from WMAL Friday, at 10 p. m., with Lois Alexander, Dorothy White, Steele Kennedy and Harold Norton in the cast.

National's production department has made up its mind to broadcast yachting's greatest event, the races between the United States and England for the America's Cup. Portable short-wave transmitters will be placed aboard vessels patrolling the 30-mile course, and possibly also in a blimp flying overhead.

None of this will happen until next September, but it's nice to know you have something to count on that far in advance.

Columbia will air another water contest reasonably soon. It will be the 1934 Oxford-Cambridge boat race, the eighty-sixth meeting between the two great English universities on the Thames, to be described by a British Broadcasting Corporation sports expert following the crews with a portable transmitter.

Getting personal . . .

Jack Denny's Band keeps a complete set of the larger instruments at the Radio Playhouse, the Hotel Pierre and a rehearsal studio, saving time, trouble and money in getting about Manhattan . . . Waldo Mayo, "Voice of Romance" conductor, worked one season as Caruso's accompanist and another for Tetrazini . . . Abram Chasins, pianist, who starts a C. B. S. series Saturday, has composed music for six poems by Elissa Landi, movie actress . . . when they can't get an audition any other way, they call the production man to the telephone and sing to him . . . another movie is keeping Bing Crosby in Hollywood . . . Pee Wee Hunt, of the Casa Loma Orchestra, mistook a public address system microphone for a C. B. S. mike during a recent broadcast . . . he was heard pretty well around the Essex House, but not on the air. Bill Abernathy, who left N. B. C. to start an ad agency of his own, is leading a "Society Orchestra" on WOL Wednesdays and Sundays.

Thousands of thoroughly dependable, ambitious, hard-working men in the mechanical and construction lines are out of employment and never want to go back to those lines if they can find permanent employment in some other business. We are making many such men happy, money makers. It doesn't take much courage to tackle something new if the bottom has fallen out of what you've been doing. Men who feel like looking into such a proposition and who make a neat appearance; who can go to work at once, and can give good reference, will have this opportunity fully explained to them at 10 o'clock sharp this morning (Thursday, February 22), Suite 738, 1511 K st. nw.

"Oh, East is East and West is West,"
But distance means nothing to radio's "Best"
(The Victor, "Globe Trotter," we mean).
For now there's neither "East nor West
Border, nor breed, nor birth,"
When you tune a Victor "All Wave" set
To broadcasts from all over the earth.
(Apologies to Kipling.)

It's a Wonderful Radio Set

—this standard and international short wave combination. One gets a big "kick" from listening to world-wide broadcasts and this little Radio brings them straight into your room!

Pieces of Eight

A Culprit Punished

By Charles B. Driscoll

MONTFORT AMORY
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

As the pirate ship Eagle made sail for Charleston, to replenish food and water, Capt. Worley called up his men, one at a time, to learn who had broken open and spilled the next to the last cask of precious water.

One man was unable to respond. He was Cortez, a gunner, who was lying below in a stupor of fever. The captain visited the sick man, and soon learned that his illness was due to drinking too much water.

There was no mercy for this culprit, who had endangered the lives of his shipmates and the women by his greed. At the captain's orders Cortez was carried on deck and tossed overboard. "He'll get plenty of water," quoth Worley.

The one water cask left was now guarded by the two fiercest of Worley's most loyal men, and everyone aboard was placed on a ration of a quarter of a cup of water per day. The weather was warm.

Drive Aimed At Bogus Job Agencies Here

A campaign against employment agencies which charge fees for the registration of job seekers is being planned by Commissioner George E. Allen, who has instructed Corporation Counsel William W. Bride to determine whether it is possible to legislate them out of existence.

Commissioner Allen is planning to ask all commercial concerns in the District to shun these agencies and to seek employes through the medium of the District Public Employment Center, which operates under the direction of the Department of Labor.

Allen has no complaint against the agencies which do not charge registration fees; but he said he was vigorously opposed to bogus agencies which take money from the unemployed under the pretext of obtaining positions for them when they have no positions to fill.

It is possible, Commissioner Allen said, that legislation might be enacted to impose exorbitant taxes on these agencies to make it impossible for them to operate.

CWA to Retain Needy Workers

400 to Be Laid Off Here Will Be Those With Other Resources.

Only those who need work the least will be included in the lay-off of 400 persons in the District CWA, it was decided yesterday by Emergency Relief officials and Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the CWA.

In making the reduction, Federal CWA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has instructed Capt. Clark to lay off those needing work the least. The first to be laid off are those in whose families another member is working.

Next to be laid off will be those workers who have other resources, with women receiving equal consideration with men. The Federal CWA has urged the local CWA Rdministration to determine, through the Emergency Relief agency, the needs of the various worksrs.

For this purpose, the Emergency Relief has been instructed to place all its records at the disposal of the CWA.

Hearing on District BudgetDueMonday

The District budget hearings will begin next Monday, Chairman Cannon of the District Appropriations subcommittee announced yesterday, and sessions will be held morning and afternoon.

Members of the committee hope to conclude hearings within ten days, as the $35,821,013.94 budget has already been cut to the bone by the Budget Bureau and the District Commissioners.

One of the first matters to be taken up, however, is the question of whether the Federal contribution of $5,700,000 will be retained or whether a percentage system will be adopted as proposed by aSenator Thomas, of Oklahoma.

Commissioners Grant Policemen Rehearing

Policemen Harry G. Bauer and Rudolph Schleichert, convicted several weeks ago on charges of conduct prejudicial to the police department, will be given a hearing next week by the District Commissioners.

The policemen were acquitted in the District Supreme Court of charges of accepting bribes. Subsequently they were tried before the police trial board and dismissal was recommended. They appealed to the District Commissioners and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday granted them a hearing.

Run Down

"Founders" of Capital Find City Peculiar.

George Washington, Maj. L'Enfant and other officials of early days in the Capital were pictured as looking into the future and seeing the present District officials functioning in a very peculiar fashion in a sketch presented by the Kikanis Club at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Prince Ali Bendo, a crystal gazer (Frank L. Peckman), caught glimpses of the city strewn with letters of the adphabet; William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, creating great confusion with stop lights and white lines; Commissioner George E. Allen as a professional greeter of politicians, and Commissioner Melvin Hazen as a lone equestrian turning the Federal City into a "one-horse town."

Oh, what a sorrowful town,
With Haze and Allen and Brown,
Van Duzer and Lew
And alphabet stew!
Oh, my! How the place has run down!

F. Kemper Mohler took the part of George Washington, Floyd Jennings was Maj. L'Enfant, Charles A. Ferguson was Mr. Ellicott, a surveyor; Charles W. Pimper was an aid to the surveyor and Herman F. Carl was an aid to Washington. Edwin F. Hill presented the program.

Stratosphere Excursion Plans Progress

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

TOMORROW will be Indiana Day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. We've found that the Hoosier State is a cornerstone in American literature and that a lot of its famous authors are now in Federal service. Florida, Washington, Vermont, New Mexico and others are due soon in the Parade. Wat·· for your State Day in the Diary. Back issues of The Post are available for readers so that a complete file of the series may be kept for reference.

NRA Code in Service.

Senator Shipstead yesterday introduced a resolution to amend the Independent Offices appropriations act so that all Federal per diem employes would be placed under NRA codes of wages and hours.

Included in the agencies that would be affected are the Government Printing Office, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Navy Yards and various units of the Treasury.

"In no case shall regular hours of work exceed 40, and in no event shall full weekly earnings of such employes be reduced on account of any shortening of regular hours of work," the resolution states in part.

In the case of the G. P. O., that agency would be under jurisdiction of code authorities handling the newspaper publishing business.

K. F. Warner, Animal Husbandry Division, Agriculture, has returned from Ithaca, N. Y., where he put on meat demonstrations for the Farm and Home Week under auspices of Cornell University.

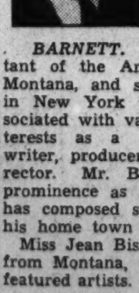
WILL R. PRICE.

THE Government Printing Office Alumni Association will celebrate George Washington's Birthday at an informal dance for couples only tonight at Beaver Dam Country Club. Dancing will be from 10 to 1, with music by Bernie Jarboe's Orchestra.

The committee in charge is headed by Wallace R. Leek, who will be assisted by Oscar DePrato, Wilson Row, James W. Richards, Herbert E. Goodrich, William E. Byram, Jerome A. Richards, Frank Lerch, Joseph Z. O'Grady and Arthur L. Simpson.

The floor committee will consist of Will R. Price, association president; Arthur O. Daniels and Bernard F. Dove. All friends of the association are invited.

THE Montana State Society will hold a reception, dance and card party Friday night at the Roosevelt Hotel, it is announced by William H. Harrison, Legal Division, Library of Congress and society president.



BARNETT.

Ben W. Barnet, Audit Division, AAA, of Helena, Mont., is chairman of the program committee. He was the first department adjutant of the American Legion, of Montana, and spent several years in New York where he was associated with various theatrical interests as a vaudeville booker, writer, producer and publicity director. Mr. Barnett has gained prominence as an entertainer and has composed several songs about his home town and State.

Miss Jean Bishop, Treasury, also from Montana, will be one of the featured artists. Miss Bishop is one of Washington's leading singers. John Fogarty, "the Montana Radio Tenor" is expected to attend.

Interest Section at RFC is planning a private dance Saturday night at the Chastleton Hotel. Invitations are in the form of a promissory note, due and payable to the receiver.

Miss Pauline Millstein (*), Technical Staff, Internal Revenue, is chairman for the Junior Hadassah annual George Washington Birthday dance to be given tonight at the Shoreham Hotel. Her reward for three months' hard work will be—more work. There'll be no dancing for her, although it is the organization's biggest social event of the year. Miss Millstein will be collecting tickets at the door.

The Marine Corps Golf League would like to interest some of the other Government departments in a league this spring, Robert M. O'Toole, (*), Adjutant and Inspector's Office, declares. Proposals can be filed through Mr. O'Toole or through the Federal Diary.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary Editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, 1934 Edition of Greenwich Follies; screen, Laurel and Hardy in "Sons of the Desert") or to Loew's Palace (Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in "Queen Christina") or to Loew's Columbia ("Devil Tiger"). Persons whose names appear on holidays, call for tickets the next day.

Submarine salvaging operations are expected to be greatly speeded up by the system just patented by Pablo Vilar Florido (*), Navy. Part of the equipment is designed for portage on the submarine and the other part to be carried on a salvaging vessel.

Postettes.

Miss Katherine Johansen, (*), Disbursing Office, Treasury, has returned from a visit with friends in Philadelphia.

Robert Givens, Navy, has resigned his position.

Mrs. Janet Fisher, (*), Identification Unit, Justice, has given several fine police puppies to friends in her division.

Miss Aline Gregg, Division of Investigation, Justice, has returned to work after several weeks illness.

Edward J. Jutz has been elected president of Commerce Branch of Local, No. 2, N. F. F. E.

Miss Olive S. Taylor, Miscellaneous Tax, Internal Revenue, has returned to her desk after a week's illness.

FREDERICK FROSCH.

EMPLOYES of the Naval Gun Factory yesterday presented a purse of money to Frederick Frosch, 72, as he retired from the design and drafting division. Chief Draftsman W. C. Thom presided at the little ceremony.

Mr. Frosch came to this country from Switzerland in 1876 and became an American citizen as soon as he fulfilled residential requirements. He has traveled extensively in Europe and since becoming an American he has toured South Africa, Chile and Mexico. He has served in the U. S. Army.

In addition to the purse, Mr. Frosch received a pipe and a large amount of his favorite tobacco. Accompanying the presents was this bit of poetry, signed by his friends in the Naval Gun Factory:

To Our Friend.

The Baron Munchausen, Frederick La Frosch,
Globe trotter, bear hunter and soldier, by gosh.
Here's hoping you may stay hearty and well
And live to be like your pal, William Tell.

Today's Epitaph.

Lies John Shiek McDodd——
He thought he was all the rage.
He waited for all
Of his sweethearts to call——
He waited and died of old age.

Carter Rites Set Tomorrow

Widow of Taft's Physician Will Be Buried in Arlington.

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen S. D. Carter, widow of Col. Edward C. Carter, personal surgeon to President Taft, and who died Tuesday in the home of a daughter in Rochester, N. Y., will be held tomorrow in the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be at 11 a. m. in Arlington Cemetery, where Col. Carter is buried.

Mrs. Carter took a prominent part in Red Cross work during the World War in France, in charge of caring for refugees from the St. Mihiel.

Col. Carter died in 1910. He served as chief staff surgeon in the Philippines, and also was a member of the opium commission in 1903.

Emory Glee Club Sings on March 2

"South's Sweetest Singers" Booked for Concert.

The Emory University Glee Club, known as the "South's Sweetest Singers," will appear at the Mayflower Hotel on March 2, at 8:30 p. m., in a concert under the sponsorship of the Georgia State Society and the Emory Alumni Club.

The club, founded 17 years ago at Emory University in Atlanta, has gained wide reputation on several tours in the United States and Europe. It won President Roosevelt's praise at the recent dedication of Georgia Hall, in Warm Springs.

In addition to Mozart and Beethoven, the 40 singers will feature Negro spirituals of the old South.

Traffic Bureau Didn't Know It, But Fair Plaintiff Has Permit

The Traffic Bureau may not know it, but Inez H. Miller, 3620 Connecticut avenue, does have a permit to drive an automobile.

The question came up yesterday in her suit against the Independent Taxi Owners Association, Charles D. Chick and Miriam B. Wolf, 2653 Woodley road northwest.

The plaintiff was asking $5,000 for injuries she said she suffered when a cab in which she was riding, driven by Chick, struck an automobile driven by Miriam Wolf, at Nineteenth and S streets northwest, August 18, 1932.

While on the stand, she was asked if she had a driver's permit.

"Yes," she repled.

Defense attorneys immediately queried the Traffic Bureau, and officials there said there was no such permit listed.

After lunch, the court resumed an inquiry into the permit, and after Traffic Bureau officals had said they had no record of a permit for "Inez H. Miller," she triumphantly pulled it out of her purse and exhibited it to the jury. Later on she was given a verdict for $1,000.

Gas Attendant Robbed, Then Locked in Room

Beard said the gunman stole $40, ransacked the station, then ordered him into a back room. With a parting warning not to attempt escape, the robber fled. Beard had to break down the door.

Fickle

Now He Wants Jail, Now He Doesn't.

James T. Cole, 26, had a change of heart in Police Court yesterday.

Arrested at his own request after arousing a sleeping detective to announce he was "the man" they were looking for on those holdup jobs," Cole thought a second time when arraigned before Judge Robert Mattingly, pleaded not guilty to robbery charges, and was under $25,000 bond for grand jury action.

Shortly after 3 a. m. Tuesday Detective Sergeant Robert J. Barrett was awakened at his home by his telephone. A man's voice declared: "I want to be locked up. My pal was arrested several days ago and I'm the man you are looking for on those holdups."

Barrett went to the address given and found Cole. The latter's "pal," Harry M. Alexander, 31, of 3501 Thirteenth street northwest, arrested by Barrett last week, also was held by Judge Mattingly under a $25,000 bond.

Psychology Seen As Nation's Savior

Canadian Editor Says U. S. Must Meet New Era.

Psychological adjustment to new conditions brought about by machinery is the "big, undone job" in the United States and Canada, Robert Cromie, editor of the Vancouver Sun, said yesterday at a luncheon tendered him by the National Press Club.

Speaking to an audience which included Secretary of War Dern, numerous Senators and diplomats, Mr. Cromie said that at present "we are only using about one-tenth of the potential productive capacity of the United States and Canada.

"BEGGARS ALL"
A Novel of Thrilling Mystery and Strange Romance
by KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

THE distinguished author of "Q", "Quest", "Cock's Feather", "Hidden Creek", "The Branding Iron" and other best sellers now offers a story which in originality of plot, faithful characterization and stirring action establishes a new mark for adventurous and romantic fiction . . . The first chapter is crammed with pulse-stirring action that is but a foretaste of the thrills to come . . . Don't miss this great serial.

Rafe Courvoisier knew he had been sentenced to death, for the iron code of these outlaws permitted no other penalty. His had been the supreme crime—he had discovered the secret city in the swamps where murderers, robbers, gangsters, and the depraved of many races took refuge to plan new crimes . . . Rafe saw the hand of Luiz slide into his bulging pocket. . . . And he knew that this man had been appointed his executioner.
